The Washington Florists' Club is growing rapidly. At a recent social meeting and banquet held by the organization, six new members were added and the names of eight others were placed on file for action at a later meeting. Following are the newly elected members: George N. Prokos, W. T. Westcott, Charles H. Gottenkenny, A. E. Gude, H. Pritchard and Elmer C. Mayberry. Proposed members are Arthur E. Elliot, Albert Schnell, Herbert M. Sauber, Adolph Bowdler, R. E. West, Stanley F. Holland and S. B. Burdett.

The Florists' Club will hold an exhibition and lecture on peonies June 4. Exhibits from growers will be appreciated. Address Otto Bauer, chairman of the exhibition, 1216 H street.

POTS FIRST—THEN FIELD.

Will it do to expect success if carnation rooted cuttings are set directly from the sand to the field in well prepared ground? We are buying several hundred and thought, owing to the lateness of the season, that this would be the best plan. M. G.—Ind.

Carnation cuttings taken from the propagating bench at this late date should not be expected to produce strong, high-grade stock for blooming next season. Instead of planting these cuttings in the field, pot them in the smallest pots you have. Transfer to the field as soon as they become established well enough to hold the ball of earth. Under the plan you suggest, you would in all probability lose most of them. A. F. J. B.

FOLEY GREENHOUSES

Harlem Avenue Range of Frank Oechslin, Chicago, built entirely of Foley material.

THE same care and sound judgment which Mr. Oechslin uses in all of his business dealings are naturally applied in the selection of his greenhouses.

It is our constant attention to the little things that makes Foley Greenhouses so practical—and a greenhouse which is perfect in the little details will be just that much better in the big essentials.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The Market.

During the last week there were two clear, warm days. Stock at once responded. Sweet peas began to arrive in large shipments and are still coming in good supply. Some of them are exceptionally good. From the early plantings the cut is extremely short-stemmed, but the price is satisfying at $1 per hundred. Carnations, which were conspicuous by their absence the first two days of the week, are now arriving in large shipments. The price has been reduced, but good grades still move rapidly at $7 per hundred.

During the last few weeks production has been considerably below normal, on account of the dark weather. With bright days, it is expected that a good supply will be on hand for Decoration day.

This market has drawn the least attention in the rose line. With few exceptions, the supply of roses has been about normal for some time. Carnations have been short all winter. This latter is due to the fact that several of the growers with a limited amount of glass closed their places last fall and have not resumed business yet.

Snapdragons are arriving in much larger supply. Greens of all kinds, with the exception of smilax, have been plentiful.

Mothers' Day Notice.

For two days preceding Mothers' day, the newspapers of Buffalo printed notices to the members of the Church of Christ that a proclamation had been issued by the founder of the National Mothers' Day League, Miss Anna Jarvis, that flowers should not be used on Mothers' day, but that Savings stamps and Victory loan bonds should be purchased instead. F. P. A.

Irondequoit, N. Y.—A plant specialist from the New York State College of Agriculture recently visited the greenhouses in this vicinity to study a new lettuce disease which threatens considerable damage to the local lettuce crop.

The Market.

There has been much cloudy weather lately and this has held flowers back from blooming to such an extent that they have not been coming into the market quite so plentifully as before.

Carnations were picked closely for Mothers' day and have not been abundant since, though a fair quantity is coming into this market. White carnations sold as high as 25 cents per bloom the day before Mothers' day.

Sweet peas are quite plentiful. Outdoor lilacs have appeared in the market. Potted geraniums are more plentiful than they have been and large quantities will be sent to the local market between now and Memorial day.

Various Notes.

The Washington Florist, 577 Broad street, reports an excellent Mothers' day business. There has been an active demand since then at this store.

The flower store and greenhouses at 596 Central avenue, owned by Henry Hornecker and formerly occupied by Ernest Radany, have been torn down.

R. B. M.

CLEVELAND.

The market remains fairly well cleaned up, though stock arrived a little more freely the latter part of the week.

Roses of fine quality are beginning to arrive in quantity. Killarney, Russell, Columbia, Ophelia, Hadley and Ward roses are among the shipments. American Beauties have had little call. They have been arriving in all grades and good quality.

There is little indoor valley in the market and that outdoor-grown cleans up readily. Carnations are scarce, with barely enough to go around. Peas are arriving in quantity and clean up daily at $1.50 to $3 per hundred.

Tulips are in demand. Lilac is arriving and realizes 50 cents to 75 cents per bunch. Calendulas are cleaning up well. Stocks are in demand. Snapdragons and poeticus are cleaned up daily. Calla and Easter lilies are sold on arrival.

Novelties are in demand. There are some fine yellow daisies, pansies and other novelties. Peonies are arriving from the south and are bringing $6 to $8. The first gladioli of the season were seen last week. W. F. B.

EVERYONE admits that field grown carnations are the best, provided the growing conditions can be controlled.

The most serious question is watering.

Leastwise, it used to be.

But that is now all overcome with the Skinner Overhead Watering System.

Gives the plants water just when needed, and just as much as needed.

Keeps down thrips.

Reduces cost of cultivation, by making less cultivation necessary.

Makes soil just right for planting out.

Makes it exactly right for lifting.

It certainly does put certainty into field carnation uncertainty.

Tell us how big a field you have and we'll tell you what it costs to Skinnerize it.

Whatever it costs, it's more than likely it will pay for itself the first year.

The Market.

Business has been extremely good for Toronto florists. That done previous to Mothers' day exceeded all expectations. The volume at this season of the year is far larger than usual. Flowers are plentiful and orders are easily filled. Reasonable prices are having a good effect.

Various Notes.

Toronto retail florists will request the city council to make it compulsory for all florists to close their stores at 7 o'clock every evening, except Saturdays and the nights before holidays. This was the unanimous decision reached by the Toronto Retail Florists' Club at a meeting May 12.

The Canadian Horticultural Association will meet in Toronto during the second week in August and the local retail florists' club will join with the Gardeners' and Florists' Association in entertaining them. The club will hold its annual picnic August 13 this year, in order to have the visitors attend the big event.

The Toronto Retail Florists' Club has sent out a questionnaire on the advisability of forming an organization of Canadian retail florists. Nearly all have voted favorably and a meeting will be called for the purpose of forming a Dominion organization during the week of the Canadian Horticultural Association convention. The annual meeting of the club will be held June 9.

May 24 is Memorial day here and the Toronto Retail Florists' Club has had window cards printed and is using considerable space in the local papers, advising the people of the fact.

November 11 has been proclaimed a permanent Thanksgiving day in Canada.

Many of the soldiers with three and four years' service at the front are returning and are taking their old positions again. Among these are E. A. Lye, who is again with S. Tidy & Son, and Fred Gaffikin, who is again with Gaffikin's.

Many florists have decorated and improved their stores lately. Many, too, with the growth of business, have found it necessary to add to their delivery service. S. Tidy & Son and Mrs. Waters have purchased new delivery trucks.

A Glazing Putty of Real Value

In all our experience and investigation we had never found a preparation for bulbing over the outside of a greenhouse that was quite satisfactory, until we ran across PERMANITE. This was about four years ago. At that time we set about investigating the merits of PERMANITE and proceeded to watch the results of its application to greenhouse roofs.

Last year we were entirely convinced of its high quality and durability, and accepted the western agency for the sale of these goods.

We applied PERMANITE to hundreds of greenhouse roofs, over almost every part of the United States.

The results obtained were highly satisfactory indeed. Glass roofs of all kinds, both old and new, were made water-tight and air-tight, saving thousands of plants from being spoiled by water dripping on them and saving many hundreds of tons of coal by making the roofs proof against the wind and storms of winter.

We give PERMANITE our unqualified endorsement and recommend it highly for all kinds of glazing.

We have a very large stock on hand in our warehouse and can ship immediately.

Permanite

Houses as tight as drumheads—

That's what Mr. Shellem, of Philadelphia, wrote us when we asked him how he was coming along with Permanite. Mr. Shellem has used other cements, "just as good," but it didn't take him long to find out the difference; his letter will show you how it came about.

"You may say so, but I KNOW IT, that Permanite Glazing Cement is in a class of its own.

"We have had experience with materials 'just as good,' but believe that the equal of Permanite has never been, nor ever will be made. Permanite has made our houses as tight as drumheads and we must say that we are very well satisfied with the results. Thanks to Permanite, we didn't lose a single light all winter, although we had quite a few severe storms last winter.

"No more putty for us!"

Permanite, that ever-elastic glazing cement, can be used for glazing, re-glazing or repair work of any kind; it is as good for one purpose as it is for another. On new work Permanite does away with the usual bedding—the Permanite on top the glass making an absolutely air and water-tight joint; on old work Permanite is far more economical than putty—doing the work with less material and in less than half the time—and when it comes to mending broken glass, repairs of any kind, etc., Permanite will do the work quickly, efficiently and economically.

Ever-elastic and lasting—guaranteed to outlast putty three to four times—Permanite is the ONE SURE WAY toward better, more economical and dependable glazing; write for our latest four-page folder—it will show you how—and why!

ROOTED CUTTINGS.

Wietor Bros., Chicago, are famous as suppliers of Chrysanthemum cuttings. For many years the largest growers of cut mums for the Chicago market, their stock includes only varieties of proved commercial value. For many years hundreds of other florists have each season obtained their young stock from Wietor's and never been disappointed. We have an immense stock, but it is wise to order early.

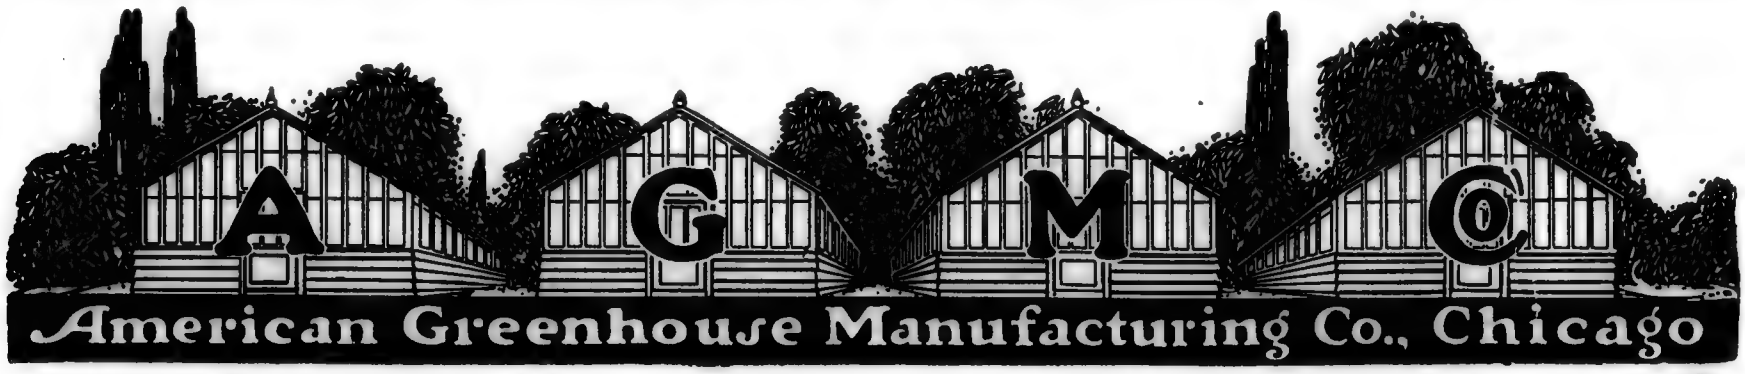
Be your own Judge—

When in the market for sash operating device, all we ask is for you to get some idea as to what we are marketing. We don't ask you to take our word for it, but ask any customer or get our catalogue and figure out some of the advantages for yourself. They are there and anyone can see them. Guesswork will not do when making a purchase in this line.

We guarantee our machines to do the work in such a way that you will be thoroughly convinced to never use anything except an ADVANCE MACHINE.

There are no ratchets to slip and let the sash fall, no chance for the sash to move at any time, as our worm and gear safely lock them at any angle.

For extra long lifts ask us about our Rack and Pinion arms. They will take care of them and open the last sash just as wide as the first one. You can't afford to purchase without seeing the ADVANCE.



Our middle name is Service and we have the most complete line of greenhouse fittings that is stocked any place. If the fitting you want is not in our catalogue, write us about it, for we have it or will make it. You will be satisfied.

If it is Permanite you want, let us supply you.

—mark you well!

The only reason in the world poor greenhouses or poor anything else gets sold at all is because someone thinks it is good.

Now, you don't have to guess about the quality of a greenhouse. You can be dead sure. You can know it's good or not good, as the case may be. A good greenhouse is one that possesses in the highest degree perfection of design, durability, economy of operation and the greatest adaptability to the requirements of the grower.

These may be small things to look for, but they are big things to find. And—make note of this—the sign of the AGMCO is your guarantee of perfection in design, economy in operation and greatest adaptability to the requirements of the most exacting grower.

And the evidence—the actual proof—that the sign of the AGMCO is your guarantee—

—when do you want to look It over?

R. P. Atwell's Range of Greenhouses at Fort Dodge, Iowa.

In 1917 Mr. Atwell had us build an addition to his present range of greenhouses and below is what he says about us:

ATWELL FLORIST

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Dec. [illegible], 1917.

John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sirs:

In regard to your materials and service, will say, the Moninger people go about their work in a business-like manner and finish it without any of the small, petty annoyances and worries that were so common when I was building with another company. I found them willing and anxious to have things right even if they were not in the contract. I have two sets of houses side by side, built by two different companies, and a glance will prove very quickly who puts up the better houses. It was not what the Moninger people SAID they would do, but what they DID do that pleased me.

Very respectfully yours,
Signed R. P. ATWELL

This year we have an order to build another greenhouse. Actions speak louder than words, so you may draw your own conclusions. Write us now about your new building plans.

Shortage in Rose Stock Reason for Much Fall Placing of Greenhouse Orders

This house of A. S. Burnslat Spring Valley, N. Y., is 69 ft. 6 in. wide and 400 ft. long. We consider it one of our model widths and construction.

OFF hand, could name you half a dozen rose growers who have put off placing their orders for big houses, until Fall.

Did it, because they couldn't get plants to stock them with.

They are placing their orders early this Fall so there will be ample time to get them out in the factory, and all on their grounds ready for early erection.

If next year is like this, the erection could be started outside in early January.

Some of you will think that is needlessly early. But is it?

The earliest you ever built, was none too early. In spite of what you thought was an early start, there were a lot of things that made you hustle to finish up in time.

This being so, why don't we get together now and talk over your new house?

Let's plan it out unhurriedly from start to finish.

Right now we have plenty of material on hand; bought at a before-the-war cost.

This price advantage we will gladly share with you. Of course, there is a limit to our supply of these low price materials.

Which fact holds its own necessity of getting in on the ground floor, while that door is STILL OPEN.

The Power of Credit

The first of a series of articles on

Prompt Payment of Bills

The only genuine power which an individual or group of individuals can gain is that arising from the confidence reposed in him or them—power whose circuit is too often broken by negligence and carelessness on the part of the florist in meeting his obligations PROMPTLY.

The S. A. F. & O. H. today would be a greater power—if there was instanter response on the part of its members in PAYING BILLS PROMPTLY.

CREDIT, as a matter of fact, is one of the harassing elements in business today. It can either fortify or weaken your business.

CREDIT is for one purpose only—a temporary convenience granted because of confidence, and is tendered the buyer just so long as his record for PROMPT PAYMENT remains unblemished.

If the Florists

could but realize this, it would help to solve many of the problems in the floral and allied businesses today.

To properly awaken the florists to the necessity of meeting their obligations PROMPTLY, the S. A. F. & O. H. is going to run a series of educational advertisements, covering the PROMPT PAYMENT of BILLS.

This series will deal with the subject in a manner which will prove beneficial to every member.

S. A. F. & O. H.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

WEDDINGS WILL WIN FAME FOR FLORISTS

Just as in June "a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love," so the florist's thoughts turn to wedding flowers, for love brings weddings, especially in June; weddings bring flowers and wedding flowers to the florist mean a chance to acquire a reputation while making a profit.

SOME may accuse the poet of inaccuracy because of his statement that "in spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love," but no one will deny that among us the conventional and fashionable month for marriages is June. The weddings of June are, from the viewpoint of the florist, of better quality than those at less favored seasons and for these June weddings he should make ready.

Flowers are indispensable at weddings and nowhere else must they be nearer to perfection. Next to the costumes of the wedding party, the flowers must stand the most critical inspection. If they meet with approval, the florist has made friends and patrons. If they are such as to bring no credit to those who ordered them, his reputation is lost; and so is his customer. Quality, therefore, is paramount in wedding flowers and since wedding flowers spell highest quality, the florist with a big wedding business enjoys an enviable position in his community, a position that every live member of the trade will do his utmost to attain.

The simplicity and economy of war times are fast disappearing and much flower work for weddings is coming back. The following excerpt from the San Francisco letter in a recent issue of The Review will vouch for this:

> It was an outdoor wedding and primarily a rose wedding, 1,000 dozen roses being used. From the house to the pergola, under which the ceremony was performed, was an aisle 240 feet long, formed by hedges of heather, pink spiræas, stocks, etc., linked together with garlands of sweet peas and Russell roses. The bride carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and orchids, while the bridesmaids carried fans of Russell, Ophelia, September Morn and Columbia roses.

June this year is one of special import. The war is over and many of the weddings will be of returned soldiers. The worry and gloom of the last year or so are swallowed up in the relief and happiness of the couples concerned as the consummation of their plans is about to be realized. Florists should consider this and take advantage of it by reminding the young people that the way to properly and adequately express this great happines is by means of many bright and cheery flowers.

The Best Medium.

There are many ways of attracting the attention of the public to wedding flowers. Undoubtedly, the best advertising medium is the newspaper and florists who understand the value of proper advertising do not stint themselves in using the display space of the local paper. But there are other columns in the paper that can be made use of by the ingenious and original florist. There is the society column, for instance. The editor always welcomes something that will give a little twist of novelty to that column. A little story, gleaned from flower lore, concerning certain flowers which were conspicuous at a recent wedding, can be attractively clothed by the editor and will not only add charm to the wedding write-up, but also create a greater demand for the flowers described.

Every newspaper reporter is eternally on the lookout for out-of-the-ordinary stories. Help him out. Don't wait for a reporter to call and then commence to look around, but have something ready for him and, if he does not come, call for him. The arrival of stock from far-away places, if the story is well told, will interest many a reporter in a small city. You may have some old relic, the history of which would be interesting reading for the public and would attract more people out your way. A little observation and the use of brains go a long way towards success.

The Bride's Flowers, as Well as the Bride Herself, Come in for Scrutiny.

A Modern Means.

Another medium for advertising is the moving picture theater. Every town of any size has its "movie," so practically every florist is in a position to benefit by it. Florists in the larger cities are undoubtedly still impressed by the story, which appeared in a recent issue of The Review, of the Cincinnati florist who has the greatest success, with the least expense, in this form of advertising. He employs as his regular medium of advertising the programs which are sent weekly to all the homes in his vicinity by his neighboring moving picture theater. For those florists who do not enjoy this advantage there is another excellent opportunity. Those theaters that do not distribute programs of their weekly features, generally display local merchants' advertisements on the screen. Artistically designed and tastefully colored slides of June brides in all their glory of wedding gown and flowers cannot but impress the many brides-to-be who will be present in the audience with their fiances.

Window Displays.

Window decorations are ordinary and effective means of advertising wedding flowers. The illustration on this page shows a window used with great success by a florist in a city of 37,000 population. The bride, a wax figure, though sometimes a living model, is and should be the central figure. The furniture for this display was loaned by an equally enterprising merchant, who undoubtedly gained some more trade by his part in the display. Possibly, if he carried a line of dress goods in addition to furniture, he had a display of wedding apparel for which the florist (let us hope) supplied fresh flowers and in his turn gained a bigger name and more business.

If for some reason a florist is unable to make a display in his own store he should look around at the other stores and make use of them. The jewelers, dry goods and shoe merchants will all have their June wedding displays. Send them blooms to replace their fading artificial flowers. Every keen business man will realize the value of real flowers and be glad to enhance his window with them, while the florist's artistic card at the base of the carefully chosen and tastefully arranged vases will bring profitable and quick returns.

Other Ways and Means.

Besides these, there are other profitable ways of advertising open to the ambitious florist. An enterprising Chicago florist began a run of a plain but effective June bride poster on the elevated railway, May 15.

Watching the society columns of the daily newspapers will give the florist advance information as to the girls who are to become June brides and it is not unethical to get to each as soon as possible a good piece of advertising matter.

These are but a few of the ways in which the florist can effectively build up a good wedding trade and no live member of the profession will let a single chance slip by. June is the month of golden opportunities for the florist. The time is past when business will come to him. He must go out after it and to get it he must use modern methods. The stake is too high and the reward too great to falter at the biggest obstacles in the struggle for wedding flowers, reputation and success.

Wedding work next month will be better than a year ago and it is worth getting after right now.

ATTRACTING JUNE BRIDES.

The June bride window display shown on this page was the conception of F. William Heckenkamp, Jr., of Quincy, Ill. He made use of it last year and despite the then prevailing sentiment to dispense with decorations at weddings he declared it was a good business getter.

WEDDING WORK IS BACK.

A Big Month Ahead.

Wedding work has come back. A year ago, shortly after the United States entered the war, simplicity and economy were the watchwords of those who theretofore had made weddings elaborate affairs and had made June a good month for florists. The trade felt the loss of this business. But it is with us again. Perhaps the people who live on interest are not spending so freely as before the income tax made its ascension, but there are many others who now can afford what they want; and they invariably want flowers for weddings.

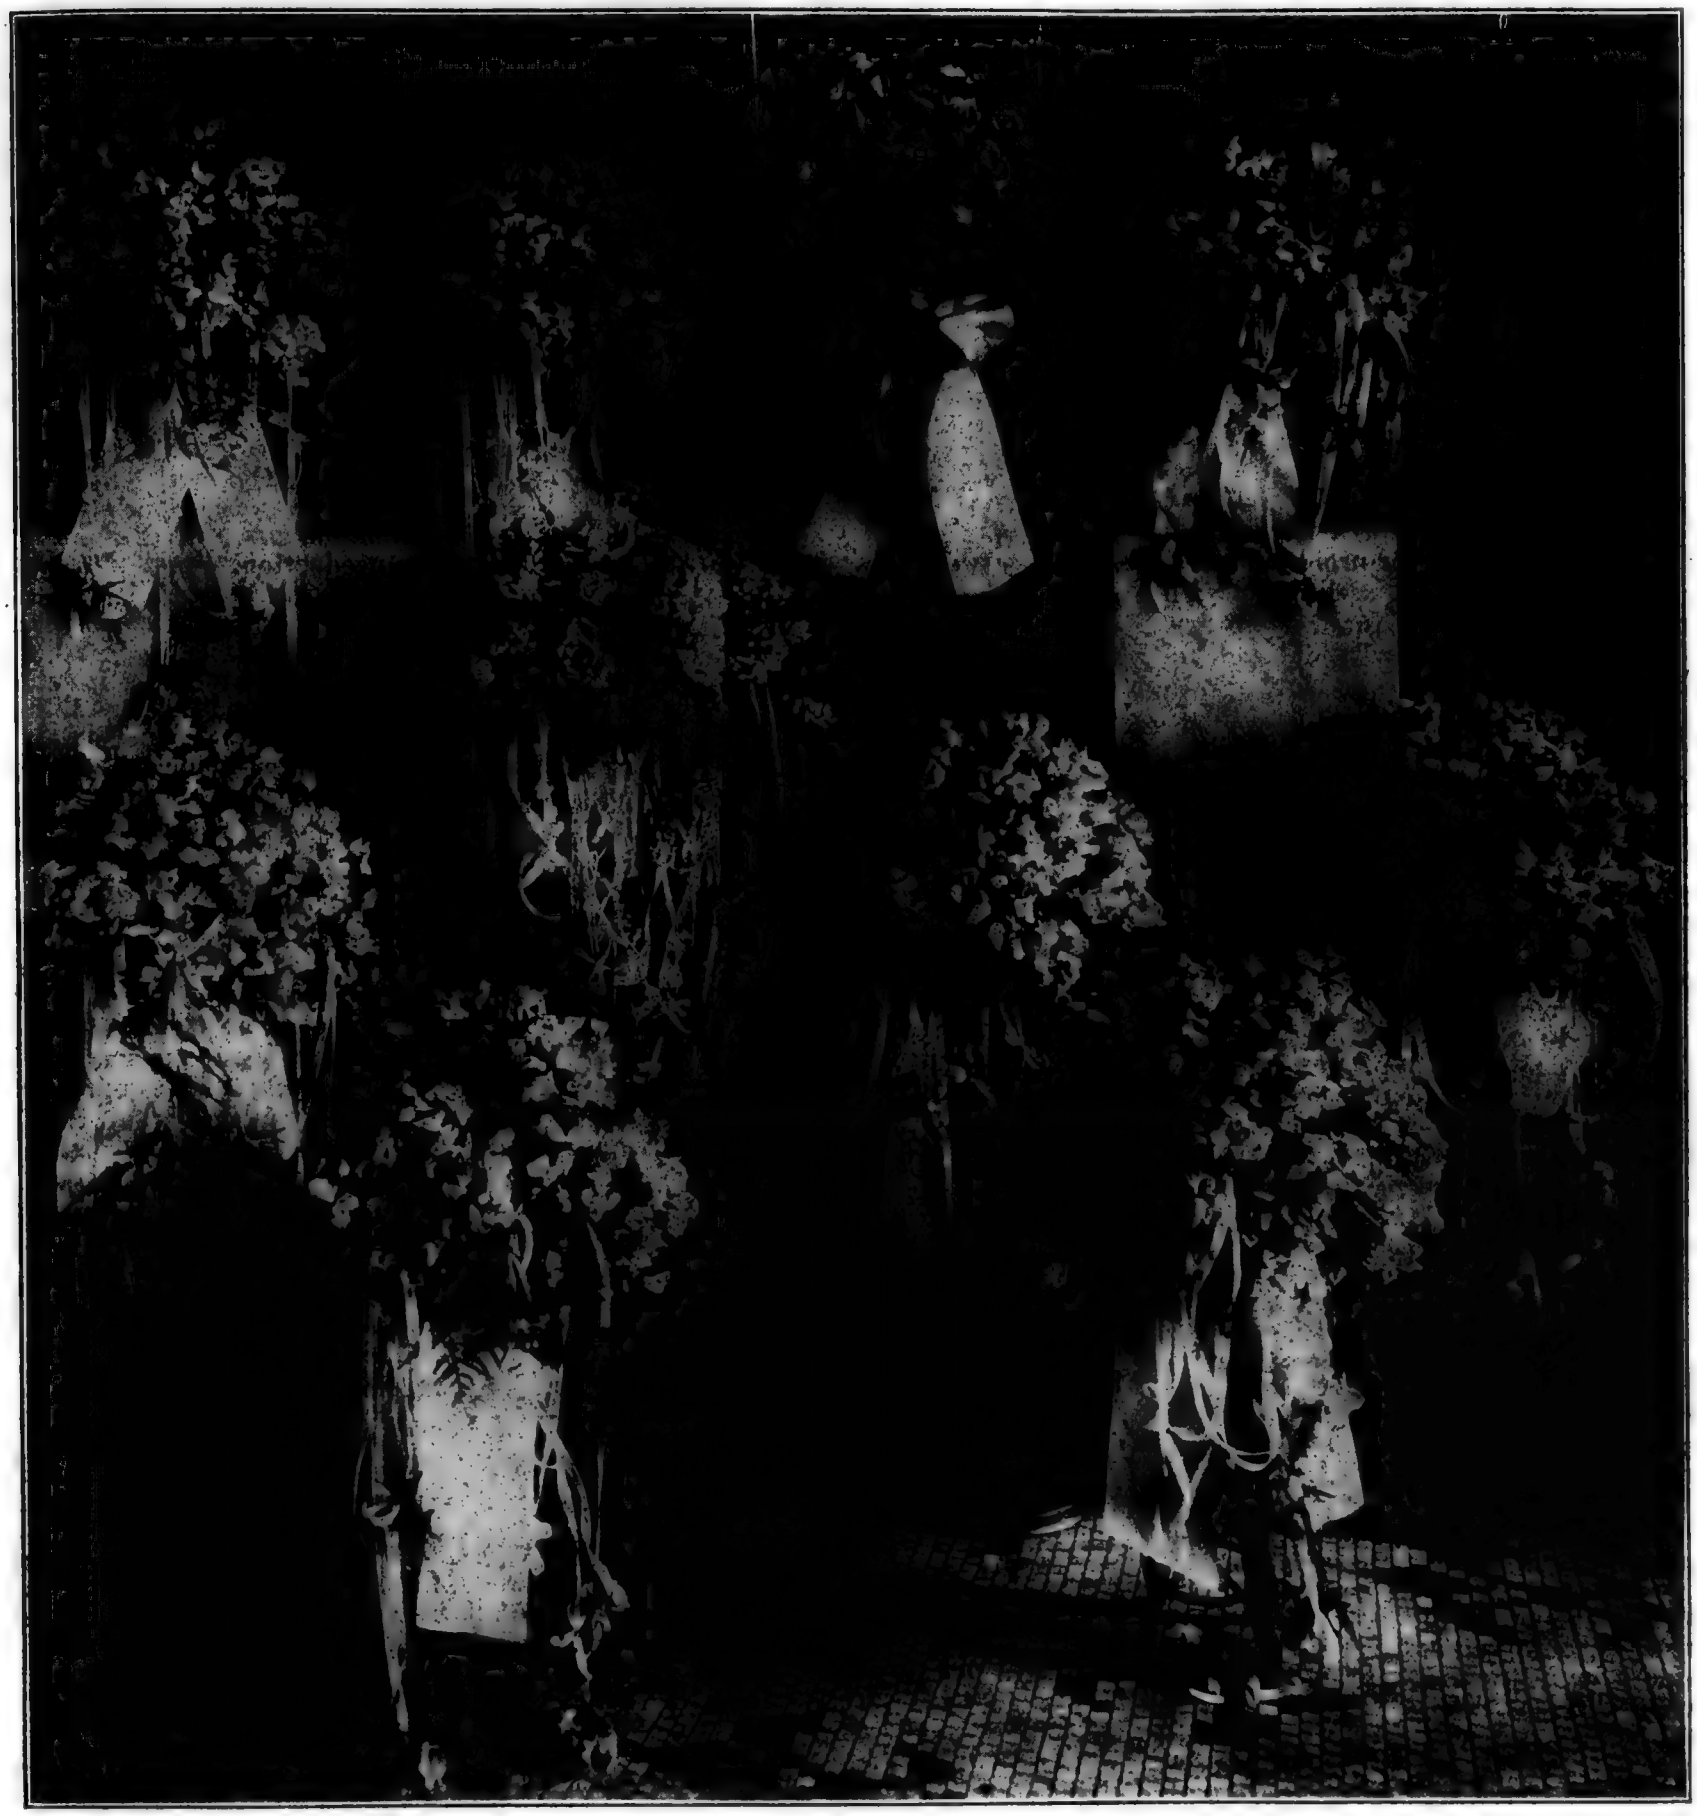
Taking the season's weddings as a whole, there will be nothing simple about them; the decorations will be there; the brides will not be denied the right that has been handed down to them from generations of proud womanhood to have beautiful weddings.

They All Want Flowers.

From time to time The Review has printed illustrations showing that the brides of today are no different from those of the times before the war; elaborate church wedding decorations are being made by many florists, both in the larger and smaller cities, and as the bride is the supreme judge of the setting for her wedding, she is the one to whom the florist must appeal.

Yes, wedding work has come back and now is the time to welcome it on its return by doing it better than ever before.

This June each individual florist will be helped in his campaign for wedding work by the S. A. F. national campaign of publicity for flowers. "The Wedding! One occasion when flowers cannot be too plentiful," reads the advertisement and it urges that flowers be sent as wedding gifts.



Leading to New Business.

It is comparatively easy to sell a person something he or she wants. And there is no girl who does not want floral decorations, bouquets for herself and her bridesmaids and the other accessories that are essential for weddings of any pretensions. To sell the bride is what we must aim to do and the quicker we begin to do it the more business we shall have gained before the month is over.

As has been pointed out before, there is more than the immediate order attached to wedding decorations. It brings the florist who furnishes the work into close touch with many young women who are interested in the ceremony and its settings. It also gives the florist the first call on the future business of this newly created family. After the ceremony, when the bride has a home of her own, the florist who furnished her wedding decorations and bouquet may reasonably expect to have her and her husband as customers, provided what he has done has pleased them.

HOLLANDERS HARD HIT.

The Dutch government is taking up in earnest the question of exporting nursery stock and bulbs to other countries. Exports to England have been barred during the war, and the trade has recommended that certain classes of stock be excluded for another two years. At the same time America is shutting out everything except a few classes of bulbs. The Dutch horticulturists wield an important influence with their government, and an attempt is being made to see if the injury to the trade cannot be mitigated.

A commission representing the trade and the government recently has been in England. One of its members was B. Ruys, of Dedemsvaart. "The cutting off of American trade meant a great hardship to growers of certain subjects such as rhododendrons, huge stocks of which were left unsold," Mr. Ruys told a British interviewer. "On the other hand, Norway, Denmark and other countries where great wealth accumulated, made extensive demands upon all forcing subjects, such as azaleas, deutzias and the like, and at the present time the nurserymen are turning their attention to the task of replenishing the stocks of many subjects that have perforce dwindled to a low ebb."

In a statement made to the British government the commission said: "At present there is a great shortness of all kinds of stocks for propagating in Holland, as everywhere. Several Dutch growers intend to increase the growing of this kind of stuff for the American market. If the British nursery trade would be willing to resume the old trade connections with Holland, this certainly would increase the possibility of making the world's supply of stocks sooner independent from Holstein and elsewhere, which used to supply a great deal of the demand before the war."

It was suggested that the leading nations form a commission to deal with all phases of the international trade in horticultural commodities.

BUCKEYE BULL'S-EYES

BUSINESS STABILITY.

The war supplied sufficient proof of the deep-rooted stability of the business of the florist. It not only weathered the stormy period well, but emerged upon a sounder basis than ever before experienced. Demand for his product was unprecedented, the multitude was enjoying flowers, instead of the favored few as formerly, and his wares were being marketed at a margin of profit sufficient to make the present secure and to prompt greater effort for the future. The business of the florist did not require reconstruction; it was moving rapidly and has been going at full blast ever since.

Flowers are indeed a necessity and the once common fallacy that the welfare of the commercial florist depended entirely upon the whims of the rich is forever dispelled by the undisputed fact that the greater portion of his enlarged income is being derived from the middle classes. Better goods, improved methods of merchandising them and the educating influence of an unexampled publicity are the talismans which wrought the great advancement. And the splendid degree of coöperation existing at present among the various branches of the trade betokens even better times ahead.

The marked activity in vegetable growing under glass is accounted for in no other way than that money invested in this particular business yields a satisfactory return. There was a lengthy time when capital put into greenhouses for the production of flowers gained little profit, the result being that it soon became wary of the enterprises of the florist. But times have changed, experience showing that it is possible for efficient management to earn from ten to fifteen per cent on an investment under the new conditions. This is encouraging and is sure to result in more intensive culture and increased areas of glass. There has not been a time within a generation when conditions were more auspicious for a venture into commercial floriculture than at present. A wholesome demand for flowers exists. The object is to keep it supplied with a type of goods which, by imparting pleasure, increases the desire for more.

Commenting upon the extreme scarcity of flowers last winter, a member of the trade from southern Ohio remarked that it would continue until the peonies came. In a few days the peonies will be with us in abundance and the great dearth of stock which prevented the realization of many thousands of dollars by florists is now a part of history. Perhaps the like of it will never be experienced again. It served a great purpose, that of teaching the florist as well as the public the real value of flowers. 'Twas a sorely needed lesson and it accomplished more in a few brief months in the direction of stabilizing the profession than the previous five years of concerted trade effort. Don't be the one to undo it. Mac.

IMPROVING QUALITY.

It has been aptly said that, while an increased production is necessary to keep pace with the greatly augmented demand, improvement in the quality of stock grown is the vast desideratum. And now that the benching season is at hand, it is the proper time to give heed to this particular requirement. The first step in the desired direction is the choosing of varieties of proven commercial merit to take the place of sorts producing only mediocre quality. And unprofitable strains of stock should not only be tabooed, but plants low in vitality and diseased should be promptly discarded.

This applies more directly to the florists with small ranges, many of whom continue to grow varieties which have long since been supplanted by ones of superior merit. Nor is it entirely a question of variety; for in many places extremely low-grade stock of carnations, chrysanthemums and even roses is benched for no other apparent reason than that it is on hand. As stock declines from year to year, particularly if selection is not done with exacting care, this practice most effectually prevents improvement. It is true that the purchase of new and better strains of stock occasions an outlay of money, when for the time being it could be avoided, but after all it represents an investment offering the greatest possible return.

If the better prices of the last year are to be maintained, it is absolutely essential that the quality of the goods be commensurately raised. It has been abundantly demonstrated that the public is willing to pay good prices, the memory of which is totally lost in genuine appreciation of a worthy article. Superior quality in plants and flowers will serve to create more satisfied customers than the sum of all other factors combined. It therefore behooves every grower to devote his best attention to increasing the merit of his product, that he may conscientiously expect for it the higher price necessary for its profitable production.

If the market is glutted, it is caused by the superabundance of commonplace stock. Little salesmanship is required to move high-grade stock, as it seldom, if ever, goes begging. Perhaps the difference in the cost of production of the one above the other is measured by the difference between the wages of the dub and that of the competent grower. And in this connection it might be said that the grower who is not worth $25 per week isn't worth anything to the florist. By planting the proper stock, entrusting its care to expert hands and preparing it with loving care for the market, the quality of the output of the florist will be materially raised and the pleasure in handling it will approximate the well-known conception of the layman in this regard. Mac.

MOTHERS' DAY ECHOES

PEAS VS. CARNATIONS.

Making Mothers' Day Pay.

Advertising, a small supply of white carnations and a liberal supply of sweet peas were important factors in the big Mothers' day business done by L. M. Smith & Co., of Laurel, Del. The first-mentioned created a great demand and the latter two, judiciously used, filled this demand to the satisfaction of both florist and customers.

"Perhaps we are a little late in giving our experience on Mothers' day," writes a member of the company to The Review, "but hoping it may benefit a few of the small florists, like ourselves, we are sending you a clipping from a local newspaper, showing the advertisement we published, and handbills which we distributed."

Newspaper Advertisement.

The newspaper advertisement contained the following message:

Mothers' day, May 11. Don't forget her that day of all days—let her know you think of her and regard her as being the best mother who ever lived. "Say It with Flowers"—not one or two, but a box or a basketful. White carnations are recognized as the proper flowers for this day, but there are not one-tenth enough white carnations in this country to supply the demand and they will be "sky-high," so why not send a box of sweet peas, with one or two white carnations enclosed? That will carry out the loving idea of remembrance and be just as much appreciated by her.

Prices are quoted in the remainder of the advertisement and the suggestion is made that orders be filed early. It was explained that the company probably would not have half enough of any kind of flowers to supply the demand, especially white carnations and peas.

Handbills Used.

The handbills pointed out the shortage of white carnations and suggested sweet peas, with one or two white carnations, as a substitute gift for Mothers' day. Spring bedding plants also were mentioned in the handbill advertisement.

This advertising produced extremely good results. Just what happened and how is explained in the letter from the company to The Review, as follows:

"We had only two benches of white carnations and the wholesalers were charging us $20 a hundred for them. Then it required 40 to 50 cents for a pasteboard box and, with parcel post, etc., the cost of the flowers amounted to about $21 a hundred. Besides this, there were ferns to be bought, for everybody wanted plumosus with their carnations. With these conditions existing, where would we come in, even by charging 25 cents each for carnations?

The Results.

"We had a whole house full of sweet peas, in their prime, so we began our advertising with the idea of utilizing them on the holiday. Did we get results? We did. The house was cut over four times on Saturday, May 10, and the phone orders were for all the blooms that developed on the following morning. Some took blooms that opened between 8 and 9 o'clock, while those who telephoned later were allotted blooms that opened during other hours of the day, up until 7 o'clock at night. There were no deliveries to make; all of our customers called for their purchases or sent for them.

Featuring the Supply.

"Next year we may not have a full cut of peas on hand, but we will have something and, whatever that something is, we will feature. If all florists would do that—feature some flower besides the white carnation, to be used with a comparatively few of the latter—it is likely that there would be plenty of nice, fresh white carnations to go around. The habit of 'salting down' white carnations for a week or ten days previous to Mothers' day would soon disappear if this idea were carried out by all florists. We are still hearing from the 'salted' flowers that were sold to us for Easter use."

The newspapers in which the Smith company advertised printed at the top of the editorial column, for several days preceding the holiday, this reminder: "Mothers' day, May 11." This is believed to have contributed to the success of the day.

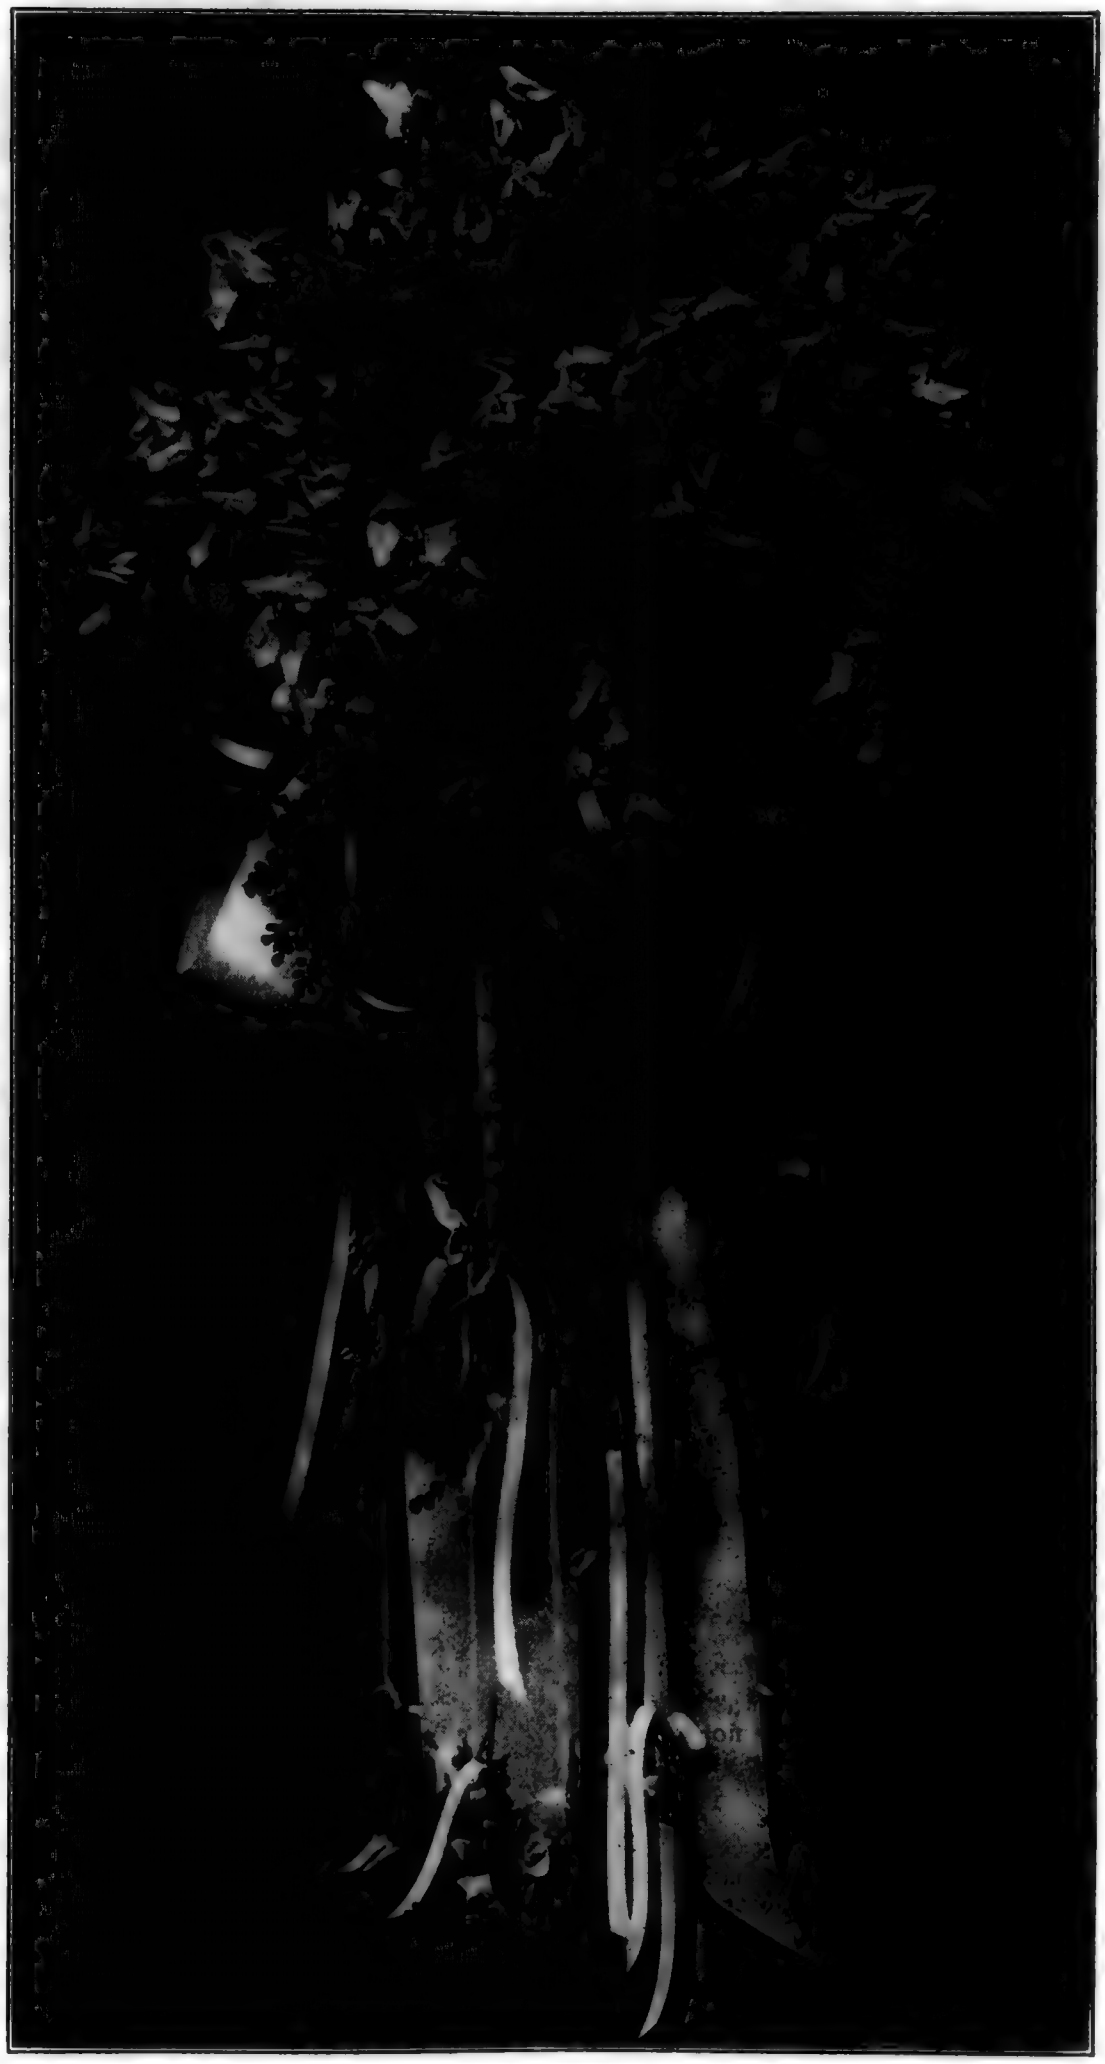
ALL FLOWERS PROPER.

There has been a great deal published about Miss Jarvis, originator of Mothers' day, and florists owe her a debt of gratitude, though I do not agree with her that the carnation should be made the emblem of the day. To supply carnations exclusively for that day would place the price of them beyond the reach of many.

This year my local advertisement for Mothers' day read:

For Mothers at home, flowers bright;
For Mother's memory, flowers white.

My telegraph orders were for the delivery of white flowers or bright flowers, as the occasion demanded. I think that this idea should be adopted by all florists, as at the time of Mothers' day there are many beautiful flowers in bloom and they all convey the sentiment of the day.



There are thousands of mothers who have had their hearts gladdened by being remembered by their children on Mothers' day. Let us make all of God's flowers a standard for that day, so if s ne are unable to buy carnations from a florist, they can gather a few wild flowers for "mother."

H. W. Peterson.

WELL, WELL!

Another of the eruptions, which unaccountably belch forth among some people at the Mothers' day season, comes from a writer in a Muskegon, Mich., newspaper. "Well, well," he begins, "once again Mothers' day has come and gone and once again the greenhouse owners have practically doubled the price of carnations and gotten away with it." Then he goes on to cast bouquets at the Muskegon people's regard for Mother in paying the "exorbitant" prices and to throw a bit of mud at florists for "reaping a financial swag from the fruits of this mother love."

"Well, well!" we might repeat after him. Why do we pay 5 cents instead of 2 cents in big cities for his "extras," when it is reported that such and such a thing happened? It is the same old law of supply and demand and it applies to florists as well as to any trade or profession. If these editors and writers would only listen to the explanation and hear the reasons why we must charge such prices on these occasions because of being compelled to sell our wares at other times of the year at le s than cost of production, things would be more agreeable all around.

Blushing Sweet Peas for a Blushing June Bride.

DEFEND THEIR PRICES.

Instead of submitting meekly to an arraignment as Mothers' day profiteers, Rocklin & Lehman, of Sioux City, Ia., sent a letter to the editor of the Sioux City Tribune, the newspaper in which the trade was attacked for overcharging on the holiday, presenting the florists' side of the case. This letter was published by the editor, who captioned it in such a manner as to indicate to the public that he had made a mistake in accusing the flower stores of robbing the public.

The letter follows:

Editor The Tribune: In answer to the article printed in your paper about how we held up prices on account of Mothers' day, wish to state that in the first place we had carnations, roses and other flowers up till 6 p. m. Sunday and the highest price we received for our carnations was 25 cents apiece. We had some short ones that we sold to children as low as 10 cents and, in some cases, we gave to those that could not afford to buy even at 10 cents. I wish to state, for the benefit of the public, as well as the party that came in to price our flowers, that in the same icebox we had a special variety of carnation, the Laddie. It is a special carnation and could not be bought wholesale or grown for less than $3 per dozen at ordinary times, but, for the holidays, it is worth a good deal more. If there is anybody in Sioux City that paid us more than 25 cents for carnations they must have been the Laddie carnations, a fancy variety that even in ordinary times brings $4 to $5 per dozen.

Just because they are carnations does not mean that they all should sell at the same price. Some roses were sold as low as $2 per dozen and some roses as high as $8, yet they were roses. Some flowers cost more to raise than others. In some other cities the Laddie carnation brought as high as $7.50 per dozen, while common carnations brought as high as $4 per dozen.

For the benefit of all the florists in Sioux City, I wish to state that flowers are sold cheaper here than any other place in the country. While we have been selling common carnations at $1, other towns were selling at $2 for the same grade.

The florists in Sioux City should be congratulated for having nice up-to-date stores and employing almost 100 men and women, and paying good salaries. They are all good citizens and taxpayers. Now, for our own protection as to prices asked for flowers, I wish to state that we hold the record of being the only florists in Sioux City that started advertising Mothers' day when it was first originated and the only florists that started the low prices here some years ago.

Following the letter, the newspaper published an interview with another florist, who confirmed the assertion of Rocklin & Lehman that flowers sold at reasonable prices in Sioux City on Mothers' day.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

AGAINST RAG DOOR PIECES.

I would like to see something done to discourage the practice of using rag-flower door pieces and soiled crepe. It certainly is a disgrace to the florists' trade to have hung at the door of a home, where a lovable and beautiful child has died, a bunch of rags in the shape of a bouquet such as women wore in their old-fashioned bonnets.

It must be most humiliating to have a death in the family and to have, instead of a bouquet of fresh flowers, these rag flowers for friends to see as they come and go. The undertaker is to blame, for it is he who persuades the family to buy these rags, which are placed on the grave after the burial, as a "floral tribute."

The writer thinks no stone should be left unturned to make the use of these cloth contraptions unpopular. If the florists would persuade the editors of their local newspapers to publish something to point out the inappropriateness of anything but fresh flowers, I feel sure it would do much for the trade.

A HARDY BEGONIA?

I would like to ask, through The Review, if any reader ever heard of a hardy begonia. For four years I have been watching one growing in a yard here. It freezes down every winter and comes up again in the spring, growing to a height of about eighteen to twenty-four inches. The leaves are dark blood-red underneath and the upper side is pale green, with veins showing through. They are shaped like the leaves of the Rex, and are about two and one-half inches wide and four inches long.

This plant forms a lot of bulb-like growths at the leaf joints, these being about the size of a sweet pea seed. The growths drop off and come up all around the old plant in the spring.

Though the temperature here has gone as low as 15 degrees below zero, the plant has not been killed. The owner does not know the name of the supposed hardy begonia, as she obtained it from a friend, who found it growing in a yard. I sent a plant to a botanical society for identification and was told that it was a species of Begonia tuberhybrida. The society informed me that it had never heard of a hardy begonia.

If any of the readers of The Review have ever heard of this plant and will let me know its name, the information will be greatly appreciated.

CALLOPISTRIA FLORIDENSIS.

In looking over The Review I saw an inquiry from I. G., Tenn., in regard to trouble with worms on his ferns. In my opinion, his ferns have not been attacked by cutworms, but by the Florida moth, Callopistria floridensis. The worm sleeps all day and eats all night. It will be found underneath the fronds in the daytime, unless the weather is cool; then the pest will be found on the upper side. If I. G. will get some pyrethrum powder and sprinkle it on through cheesecloth at night, he will find yellow worms next morning instead of green ones.

Thomas Hopkinson.

Callopistria floridensis is described in Bailey's Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture as a velvety black or apple-green caterpillar, one and two-fifths inches in length when mature, feeding on the fronds. The treatment prescribed is poisoned baits. The common name of C. floridensis, according to Bailey, is the southern fern-cutworm.

THE LAST CHANCE.

Considerable quantities of Belgian plants have arrived at New York in the last few days, taking advantage of the last opportunity to enter the United States ahead of the quarantine, which becomes effective June 1.

The following entries appeared on the manifest of the Westcape, May 20:

Hussa & Co.—12 crts plants.
Wadley & Smythe—496 tubs laurel trees, 14 crts plants, 8 cs do.
American Express Co.—374 tubs laurel trees.

These items were on the manifest of the Aledo, May 21:

Wadley & Smythe—39 cs plants.
Hampton, J. W., Jr., Co.—36 tubs laurel trees.
Richard, C. B., & Co.—20 cs plants, 36 tubs laurel trees, 100 cs do.
Hussa & Co.—48 tubs laurel trees.
Vaughan's Seed Store—300 tubs laurel trees.
American Shipping Co.—12 tubs laurel trees.
Downing, T. D., & Co.—24 tubs laurel trees.

These items were on the manifest of the Westpool, May 23:

McHutchison & Co.—1,274 tubs laurel trees.
Richard, C. B., & Co.—600 tubs laurel trees.
Maltus & Ware—2 cs plants.
Schwake, C., & Co.—23 cs plants, 16 tubs laurel trees.

Each of these steamers were from Antwerp, and these final shipments are almost the first direct from Belgium since the spring of 1914. The Germans held Ghent, and the autumn shipments of that year were via Rotterdam.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The wholesale cut flower markets during the week ending May 24 were in excellent condition to supply any of the wants the retailers demanded, at prices much lower than the week previous. There was plenty of everything the season affords, but the retailers bought sparingly owing to the daily rains, which caused transient trade to fall off, especially so with downtown florists. There were many weddings and much society work for the west end florists and they bought heavily of the fancy stock which this class of trade demands. There have been large quantities of peonies in all colors, with prices from 3 to 8 cents. Fancy cut gladiolus spikes are coming in daily. The best sellers are Schwaben, America, Pink Beauty and Mrs. Francis King. Consignments in these have been large. Roses have been selling well; that is, the fancy grades in Russell, Ophelia, Ward and Columbia. All Killarney varieties are in big supply, but the demand is not so large as for other varieties.

Carnations have kept up well, owing to the cool weather. Size and color are about the same as in midseason, but prices have been lowering from last week's quotations and the demand clears them daily. Sweet peas are again in heavy supply and down to as low as $1.50 per thousand, with extra fancy not over $3. Cape jasmine buds are coming heavily from Texas. There is a plentiful supply of snapdragons, cornflowers, irises, delphiniums, stocks, calendulas and daisies, all of which should come in for heavy demand for Memorial day, which, as is predicted by all leading florists here, will be better than in any previous year.

Various Notes.

The florists' publicity committee at a special meeting, over which Chairman Bourdet presided, decided to feature Memorial day with strong, attractive advertisements in the five daily papers at a cost of nearly $300. A discussion that followed resulted in a decision to increase the number of the publicity committee to fifteen and Frank X. Gorly, Martin Seeger and Oscar Ruff were made members of this committee. The members are enthused over the workings of the new plan so far and predict that before fall, 100 per cent of all retailers, growers and wholesalers will contribute to the fund.

The Retail Florists' Association has decided to meet only once a month during the summer months. Secretary Ruff says that the next meeting will be held June 9 and that all members will be notified of the place of meeting.

Several of our leading seedsmen made a special trip to Jefferson City, Mo., May 22, to confer with Governor Gardner on the new state seed law which was passed by both houses last week. Governor Gardner had not signed the bill as yet. Those who made the trip were: D. I. Bushnell, R. W. Bommer, Adolph Cornelli, Clifford Cornelli, August H. Hummert, William Smith, Charles Prunty and A. W. Schisler. They report a splendid reception by the governor.

Grimm & Gorly and Mullanphy, leading downtown florists, are looking forward to a record-breaking Memorial day business. Their Memorial window displays are a big attraction.

Charles Young, head of the C. Young & Sons Co., spends most of his time at their greenhouse range in Olivette, superintending the shipping plant orders, which, he reports, are far ahead of any season in past years.

Frank Sanders is again with the Grand Leader as head of the nursery and plant department and reports business in this line bigger than ever.

The trade was pleased to see Harry Schlechter back at his post with the Angermueller Co., assisting Fred Alves in the supply department, where shipping orders have been heavy.

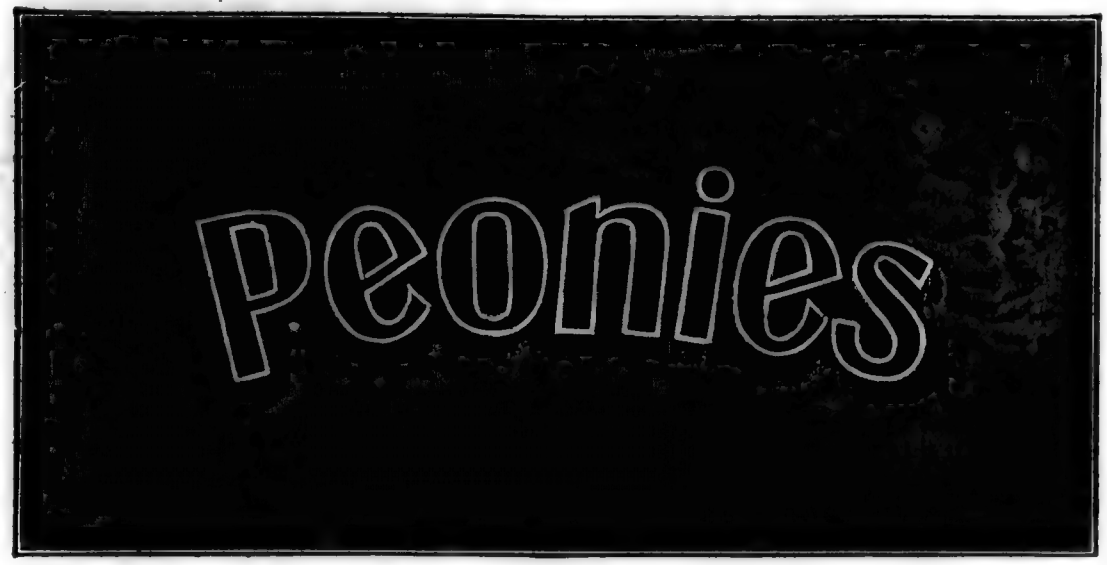
H. G. Berning has been receiving large consignments of fancy peonies. Advance Memorial day orders are the heaviest in years.

W. A. Rowe's fancy snapdragon, St. Louis, has been in good crop and the demand for this splendid variety has been large.

Recent visitors were Julius Dilloff, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York, and Allen N. Humason, of Chicago. Mr. Humason is traveling in the interests of the national publicity committee.

F. H. Weber is preparing to plant several thousand cannas on a corner lot opposite his place at Olive and Taylor streets, which attracted so much attention last summer. A large sign will be erected in the rear with the slogan, "Say It with Flowers."

George Waldbart was again confined to his bed with sickness last week. His many friends wish him a speedy recovery.



President Rowe, of the St. Louis County Growers' Association, says that there will be a big meeting of the association June 4, at Eleven Mile House. The feature of the meeting will be the installation of the new officers and a general review of the season's business. All members are requested to attend.

Joseph Witek's pretty west end establishment experienced a busy week with society and school graduation work. A splendid window of fancy blooming plants was noticed.

F. C. Weber, Sr., informs me that he will take his usual northern trip early in July and attend the convention at Detroit in August. Every day is a busy one at this establishment.

Among the south side florists who report a busy week are W. H. Kruse, who had several large weddings; F. W. Bruenig, Diemer Floral Co., A. Meyer and Mrs. M. Pelletier. All are preparing for a big Memorial day business.

A trip through the establishment of the J. F. Ammann Co., of Edwardsville, Ill., disclosed roses and carnations all in excellent shape and producing a splendid crop under the 60,000 square feet of glass. Mr. Ammann says that they will grow only roses next season—Russell, Premier, Columbia, Ward and a few Hoosier Beauties. A pleasant afternoon was spent. J. J. B.

AMERICAN PEONY SOCIETY.

The seventeenth annual meeting and exhibition of the American Peony Society will be held in the Board of Commerce building, Detroit, Mich., June 17 and 18. This exhibition will be managed by the Detroit Florists' Club as a result of a meeting of some of the members at Detroit, May 21, and the approval of the officers of the society who were unable to be present.

This announcement is made in advance of the premium list, which will soon be sent to the members and growers, who are requested to make preparations to send flowers for competition and exhibition. Members of the society are especially requested to urge growers in their immediate vicinity to attend this meeting if possible and also to make an exhibit of blooms in competition or otherwise. Those who cannot come with their flowers and all shippers may send them by express, prepaid, to the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, 264 Randolph street, where a competent committee will receive and properly care for them. This will include staging them in the exhibition hall.

It is the desire of the society to make this exhibition the largest and most interesting in its history and to that end the Detroit florists are working hard and giving wide publicity through the daily press to the event. This will assure a big attendance of all lovers of peonies at the exhibition. The prizes will be sufficiently attractive to encourage growers from all parts to make exhibits, which may be entered in whichever class the grower may choose.

Some of the rewards will consist of roots of the most valuable varieties extant, and amateur and professional growers will thus have a chance to add some rare sorts to their collections, which are not available by purchase. Among these may be mentioned Le Cygne, offered as a prize by President James Boyd; the sensational variety, Jubilee, shown at the Philadelphia meeting two years ago, by Lee R. Bonnewitz, Van Wert, O., and the celebrated varieties Elwood Pleas and Lady A. Duff, offered by Charles F. Wassenberg, Van Wert, O.

All correspondence in reference to the meeting and exhibition should be addressed to J. F. Sullivan, 361 Woodward avenue, Detroit, Mich.

PEONY PEOPLE PROTEST.

At a recent meeting of the directors of the American Peony Society in New York city, a protest was drafted against Quarantine No. 37 and the document recently has been sent to members in the form of an 8-page pamphlet with the suggestion that the members transmit it to their congressmen. The protest states: "It is apparent from the progress of events that the trade has no effective way of making its protests heard in this matter unless, indeed, it shall prove possible to bring about congressional action."

The peony is one of the plants which cannot be imported after May 31, 1919.

The directors of the Peony Society comment that "unfortunately, the Federal Horticultural Board does not seem to be very well informed," and goes on to quote from a communication from the chairman which indicates that he does not know the condition in which peony roots are imported.

"The impression can hardly fail to be produced that the board, instead of intelligently selecting for exclusion only those plants most likely to introduce pests, sought rather to exclude everything, whether involving any serious danger or not, in the belief that by spreading their net wide enough they would be sure to catch what they were after. They were then apparently induced in some way to make a few exceptions to the general rule of exclusion.

"The directors of the American Peony Society therefore respectfully present the following recommendations to the Secretary of Agriculture, to the Federal Horticultural Board and to the members of the Senate and House of Representatives:

"That Quarantine No. 37 should be at once suspended,

"That a new quarantine measure should be framed with the coöperation of the nursery and greenhouse interests, which should contain only such provisions of exclusion as are demonstrably and convincingly necessary, and such as would be really effective,

"That where important classes of foreign plants are to be excluded, several years' notice of such exclusion should be given, in order that the cultivation of stock in this country may have reached a fairly adequate development before the foreign sources of supply are cut off."

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

The large amount of rainy weather during the last week has held back the development of flowers, the prices of which are still high. Carnations sell for $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Peonies have just appeared in the market. They are small and not well developed. With a few days of bright and sunny weather both the quality and the quantity will rapidly improve. Wandering jew and other hardy vines and plants are in considerable demand.

Various Notes.

Nicholas De Pappas, at one time employed by William H. Zois, of the Washington Florist Shop, at 577 Broad street, was found guilty of embezzling $1,500 from his old employer. De Pappas was manager of the store at a salary of $25 and it is alleged that within a few months he had saved enough to start a business of his own.

Business at the flower store of Chris. Penek is good except in funeral work.

Mrs. Henry A. Strobell and family will leave soon for their summer home at Ocean Grove. R. B. M.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business last week was unusually quiet, with considerable recessions in prices. This is quite customary the week before Memorial day. There is an entirely different market this week and prices show considerable advances all along the line, carnations being particularly strong. Last week prices varied from $3 to $5 per hundred. For Memorial day these figures are being doubled. Owing to considerably overcast weather, the supply of carnations will be more limited than expected. Roses are selling well and I believe I have never seen them of better quality at this season, thanks to the absence of excessive heat. The demand, as usual, is specially good for red and deep pink varieties and the short-stemmed grades are most in favor. Sweet peas slumped to as low as $2.50 per thousand last week, but have now recovered sharply and are in strong demand.

There are larger supplies than usual of ten weeks' stocks of fine quality, feverfew, Gypsophila elegans and calendulas, for which there is a big call at present. Spanish iris sells well, also Darwin and cottage tulips, of which there are fair supplies. Outdoor lily of the valley is abundant and much superior in quality to the forced article, with handsome foliage. There is a large supply of antirrhinums and fair quantities of large and small-flowered gladioli. Callas and lilies are growing scarce. Peonies locally will not appear until the end of the week, but a good many Pennsylvania ones are coming in. A good deal of lilac is in fine condition, also hardy azaleas, deutzias, German iris, single pyrethrums and pansies. Orchids are scarce, but there is little Memorial day call for them. Home-grown gardenias are few, but a good many are coming in from Texas in fair condition.

Greenery of all kinds is selling well and laurel and magnolia wreaths are having a heavy sale. More artificial flowers and wreaths are being disposed of than ever before. The demand for geraniums, pansies, forget-me-nots and other popular bedding plants is heavy, while among flowering plants hydrangeas and roses are in greatest favor. Everything at the time of writing indicates a record business for Memorial day.

Club Meeting.

There was a good attendance at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, May 20, to hear F. E. Palmer's splendid lecture on "Accounting for Florists." In the course of his remarks Mr. Palmer, whom I know well as a successful business man, stated that he had great faith in expert accountants being called in at intervals. He stated he had found them a distinct help in his business, that many splendid suggestions can be got from them and their services are worth all they cost. His firm did a somewhat complicated business and he divided it into three departments, viz.: Greenhouses and nursery, store, and outdoor landscape department. Within another year he proposes to make the increasing nursery business a separate item. Separate accounts are kept of each department. He makes a complete inventory of stock twice a year. This entails much work, but is extremely important. Only by doing this can growers know how they stand. He keeps a separate purchase book to cover such expenses as telephone and telegraph charges, auto expenses, advertising, etc. The office manager indicates to the bookkeeper by a brief notation and red pencil mark in which column the charge should go.

A sales book is kept in the same way. Sales slips are used and each day's sales are clipped together and totaled by an adding machine. Each department making a sale receives credit for same. His drivers carry a shipping book, bound like those used by express companies, and in it is a signature from every customer receiving any goods. From the cash register nothing is ever paid out. All the money received one day is deposited in the bank the following morning. A petty cash account is always carried in the store and carries $10 or its equivalent in slips. Checks are sent for all accounts of $5 and over and all bills are paid by the tenth of each month. A yearly summary shows gross profit, from which are deducted all salaries, rent, repairs, postage, etc. Income tax officials had informed him that eight per cent was the average profit made in successful florists' establishments.

Overhead charges are steadily rising. Men without business capacity are constantly bewailing the necessity of advancing charges to customers. The day of secrecy and isolation is past. Tax collectors take away the privacy once enjoyed. No one need be deterred from starting on his own account, even if he is no longer young. Mr. Palmer had charts to illustrate his lecture, which proved to be one of the finest and most instructive the club has yet listened to. He was accorded an enthusiastic vote of thanks.

On the February banquet the committee reported a substantial balance. One new member was elected, from Lansing, Mich. It was voted to hold a picnic in July at Cunningham park, East Milton; to hold a field day at Faulkner Farm, Brookline, May 28, and also to hold a ladies' night in connection with the June club meeting. MOTT-LY MUSINGS

W. D. Snell, of Herkimer, N. Y., has purchased the establishment of Hakes & Son at Ilion, N. Y., and torn down the greenhouses, which will be added to the plant of Mr. Snell at Mohawk, N. Y. The land is considered too valuable for retention. The lease of the home place expires soon and, as it also has advanced in value beyond normal, it has not been decided where to establish headquarters. "Now is the time to decide as to whether one will go the limit or quit," observed Mr. Snell. "The temptation to go ahead is almost irresistible."

"Running at full capacity," reports John Lawrance, of Ogdensburg, N. Y. "Have been in this satisfactory condition right along. Mothers' day did not disturb the even tenor of our flower department. We have a large stock prepared for Memorial day and afterwards. The planting season is late, but no doubt will wind up good." Fred Lawrance is now an officer in the regular army, stationed in the Philippines. He writes that climatic conditions are ideal, even more equable than in California. While not located in the orchid zone, the young officer hopes to see the phalænopsis in its natural home before he returns to this country.

Sambrook Bros., of Troy, N. Y., report Mothers' day business "all we could wish and a precursor of Memorial day, when we hope to exceed our record mark."

• • • •

"Consistency, thou art a jewel," observed Henry Schrade, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y. "The authorities have placed an embargo on plants, etc., for the purpose of keeping out certain bugs, and now we are told that the use of tobacco is to be prohibited. Which species of bug, think you, will it be easiest to keep down? Also, how shall we hold the help that insists upon smoking in the houses while at work, gassing any insect within reach of the fumes issuing from the old pipe?" Mr. and Mrs. Schrade returned from their sojourn at St. Petersburg, Fla., in time for the Easter business, said to equal the best on record. Stock for Memorial day looks good. His son, William, is in charge of the store and mentioned that the prospects for summer business are extremely promising, owing to the possible lengthening of the season for racing. Henry Schrade, Jr., is in the service and was last heard from in Holland, where the bulb business is reported as being unsettled.

committee was appointed to consider a revision of the by-laws and report at some future meeting. Exhibits included some fine pans of Nemesia Suttonii, Spiræa Philadelphia from home-grown clumps, and Lister's Prolific tomato, from W. H. Golby; a collection of forced beans from W. N. Craig and asparagus from A. K. Rogers.

Florists and the Salvation Army.

The new Florists' Association, at its meeting May 20, voted to assist in the Salvation Army drive for funds and appointed J. M. Cohen, M. Liebman, P. Donahoe and William Penn a committee to manage the work. The committee voted to have a flower day on Boston Common May 22, and Mr. Cohen arranged for a band of twenty-two pieces to play at Liberty Cottage, and addresses by several noted military orators. A little boy was dressed to represent Uncle Sam and a little girl to represent Miss Columbia. Sales of flowers started at $50 per bouquet and realized over $800. Later contributions from growers and retailers will bring this to well over $1,000, furnished by the florists' trade to this excellent organization.

Various Notes.

Frank Edgar has a grand lot of Spiræas Queen Alexandra, Ceres and Gladstone for Memorial day. His hydrangeas are also in splendid shape. He has dropped the culture of bedding plants and vegetables under glass and now restricts his greenhouse space to flowering plants, which include begonias and cyclamens.

May 25, which was lilac day at the Arnold Arboretum, proved unfavorable climatically and the usual big attendance of the public was lacking. Vegetation of all kinds here and elsewhere is now luxuriant, thanks to the frequent copious rains and lack of excessive heat.

The death of Thomas A. Cox, of Dorchester, noted in the obituary column, removes one of the last of Boston's "Old Guard" of florists, which included such well known men as Fred Harris, William Robinson, C. M. Atkinson, James Comley, Joseph Tailby, Patrick Norton, Warren Ewell, W. J. Stewart, John Shepherd, Jackson Dawson and William E. Doyle. These made Boston horticulture a real force a generation or more ago.

The B. A. Snyder Co. reports an unprecedented call for artificial flowers and wreaths, several times in excess of a year ago. In spite of talk to the contrary in many quarters, they look for an adequate supply of natural flowers.

John A. Nelson, of Framingham, hit the Memorial day trade exactly right with a grand crop of ten weeks' stocks and feverfew, the latter the finest I have seen this season.

Business at all seed stores continues remarkably brisk in spite of the rather advanced date for the sale of seeds. Bedding and vegetable plants are selling heavily, while many orders still come in for roses, shrubs and perennials.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are tremendously busy this week and are selling a great quantity of artificial wreaths and sprays in addition to fresh flowers, laurel wreathing, etc. They look for the heaviest volume of Memorial day business they have ever had.

The newly organized Boston Florists' Association has decided to hold nine meetings per year, meeting on the first Tuesday in the month. Annual dues will be $20, with an initiation fee of an additional $5. A dinner will be served at each meeting.

Welch Bros. Co. is showing a handsome lot of well flowered hydrangeas for Memorial day. They have large shipments of all kinds of seasonable flowers and in addition have heavy calls for artificial material.

The grandest Hadley and Russell roses I have seen this season are being handled by P. Donahoe for the Waban Rose Conservatories. Killarney Brilliant is also fine. They have planted a good block of Premier for next season.

The Boston Floral Supply Co. was found to be a veritable hive of industry when called upon May 24. The demand for Memorial day has proved phenomenal and some lines are completely cleaned out. Sales of fresh flowers are becoming larger each week here.

Vegetation is fully two weeks behind 1918 here now. Last year we had quantities of rhododendrons, peonies and other hardy flowers open. This year there are practically none, with the exception of a few early sorts. On the other hand, many lilacs, deutzias, loniceras, viburnums and other shrubs are in superb bloom this week.

At Penn's an extra force and all night work rules this week. Great numbers of orders have been received for special wreaths advertised through the leading New England dailies. W. N. C.

TEXAS TOPICS

By Robert C. Kerr, of Houston.

Houston, Tex.—The R. C. Kerr Co. is putting in a heavy stock of chrysanthemums, roses and plants. The manager, A. F. Koehle, anticipated returning to Sherman and opening up for himself, but has changed his plans and will remain with this company.

Waco, Tex.—Our good friend Tom Wolf is still quite ill. The florists of Texas have been grieved over Tom's condition, but we sincerely hope that he is on the road to recovery. Waco has had a wonderful business; every available flower and plant sold Mothers' day and Easter. Things at the greenhouses look fine and Mr. Wolf is stocked up for a great business next winter.

Austin, Tex.—George Asmus, of Chicago, chairman of the S. A. F. finance publicity committee, has promised to appear before the Texas State Florists' Association convention here July 9 and 10, in the interest of the national publicity campaign. Texas expects to go over the top in the quota. Mr. Asmus will make a report of the work up to the present time and will stress the importance of every florist coöperating in this great campaign. In fact, the florists of Texas realize the importance of this campaign and attribute a large portion of their increase this year to the campaign carried on the past winter.

Houston, Tex.—Kerr the Florist reports a big business for Mothers' day, Easter and the entire winter, which has been by far the greatest in the history of the business. R. C. Kerr recently returned from a trip through northern Texas. The Brazos Greenhouses report a wonderful business; their great obstacle was the difficulty of getting enough stock. Taking the Mothers' day, Easter and the winter business, it was the most satisfactory they have had in the history of the business. Boyle & Pendarvis report an excellent business, as usual. They cleaned up in all their stock Mothers' day. Q. & S. and Carroll report an unusually large business. Taking everything as a whole, the florists of Texas are certainly well pleased with the winter's business and from all indications are in good condition. The florist who failed to pull out of the hole this winter is hopeless, but indications are that every florist in Texas has put himself in fine condition.

Dallas, Tex.—The Lang Floral Co. reports the greatest demand in the history of the business. Mothers' day doubled up over last year. Everything in the way of a plant or flower sold at a good price. Taking the winter as a whole, this year is a record-breaker. Henry Greve, proprietor of the Dallas Floral Co., reports wonderful business. The Green Floral Co. is filling its greenhouses to full capacity for next winter. Conditions in Dallas are above normal; everyone is making and spending plenty of money.

Sherman, Tex.—The Texas Nursery Co., Mr. Carpenter in charge of the florists' department, reports a great business, as usual. This concern sold out everything that was available for Mothers' day, and had a satisfactory business at Easter and during the winter months. While H. O. Hanna has been quite ill, his business has gone ahead. He says he has made more money this year than in any year since he has been in business and that he does not owe a dollar in the world and has money in three banks. This sounds pretty good.

Fort Worth, Tex.—J. E. McAdams reports a wonderful Mothers' day and Easter business. Everything sold at good prices. Mr. McAdams is cutting several thousand carnations of good quality and selling them as fast as cut. He has not bought a carnation this season, so he states. The Drumm Seed & Floral Co. reports heavy business Mothers' day, Easter and the entire winter. Mr. Drumm also is growing all of his carnations. Baker Bros. Co. reports an enormous business, having sold everything available for both Easter and Mothers' day. Fort Worth has been going through an oil boom for several months and money is plentiful. The Greenwood Floral Co. is making a fine showing in the greenhouses and is growing 80,000 gladioli outside. This concern has, without exception, the greatest outdoor stock in the state. The entire place is irrigated and it shows results in the extra quality of the stock. However, they have not needed to use irrigation for some time, due to the heavy rains. Texas is to be congratulated upon the modern greenhouses of this concern, the most modern and fully equipped in the state.

CHRYSANTHEMUM plants from 2½-inch pots never have sold so well as this season, many growers having cleaned out at a date when the strongest demand ordinarily is just beginning.

THE American people have more money than ever before and are spending it with a freedom that is without precedent. There is no reason why the flower business should not hold out as long as the supply of money does.

TAKE an afternoon off and visit a few growers; it will show that the description, say 4-inch as applied to geraniums, is absolutely no indication of their value. One man's stock in a designated size of pot may easily be worth twice as much as another's.

GERANIUMS have been slow to bloom this season in many localities, due to late propagation and unusual weather. Good 4-inch stock in bloom has been scarce so far, but there are quantities which will not have a flower before the time the demand usually lets down.

THE census taken by the government last year showed that the coal consumed by 8,412 greenhouse establishments in the United States amounted to 1,527,876 tons. This census was far from being complete, but from these figures an idea can be had of the importance of the coal question to commercial growers.

A GOOD many of the smaller growers of bedding stock who do local wholesale and retail business, have not advanced their prices as much as larger operators thought necessary. Where a man does most of the work himself, with the aid of his family, digging in twice as hard as hired hands will do, he is apt to miscalculate his costs and not get paid in proportion to the effort.

A. F. J. BAUR, secretary, has sent to members the pamphlet report of the twenty-eighth annual convention of the American Carnation Society, held at Cleveland, January 29 and 30. The list of members also is included and an insert says: "Have you or a member of your family been in the United States military service during the late war? If so, please communicate the facts to the secretary, giving full name and present address."

HENRY PENN, chairman of the S. A. F. publicity committee, is not alone in his optimism about the future of the florists' business.

THE Dutch Bulb Growers' Society already is planning for another great open-air exhibition, in 1921, similar to the one held in the Haarlem Wood in 1910, when the organization celebrated its golden jubilee. It is expected that by the spring of 1921 conditions of travel will have returned to normal.

ARE YOU AMONG THESE?

Day after day gr tifying letters from pleased advertisers pour into the office of The Review. These are samples of how they all sound:

Cancel pelargonium advertisement. It has done the business.—S. C. Templin & Son, Garrettsville, O., May 17, 1919.

Two insertions cleaned us up on 2,000 petunias and we have had to return several checks already. Some came from Montana.—D. R. White, Sandusky, O., May 22, 1919.

Kindly discontinue our chrysanthemum ad for the present. Our stock is practically exhausted. —Ellis the Florist, Griffin, Ga., May 18, 1919.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be p tty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

A BIG MONTH.

It is doubtful if the trade as a whole ever has had so big a month as the one now closing, May, 1919. At no other time have flowers been in greater esteem or request, nor has the business been on a better basis. The prices the trade has obtained, as a rule, fully compensate for the increased cost of production and distribution, with the result that May has been perhaps the largest, most profitable and, on the whole, the most satisfactory month in the history of the trade.

The Review is pleased to report that its own business also has been the largest for any May in the history of the paper.

A LIVE WIRE CLUB.

Here are just a few things that the Milwaukee Florists' Advertising Club is doing in the line of bringing the subject of flowers before the public. It is placing ads in six daily, one weekly and one semi-weekly newspapers, the combined circulation of which is 350,000. Every week over 2,000,000 advertisements, featuring the slogan "Say It with Flowers," go out among the people of the city. Every florist in Milwaukee has that slogan in or on the window of his store. Every other street car in Milwaukee has a card advertisement with the slogan "Say It with Flowers." And, when the billboards along the motor highways are painted up, the club expects to miss no one but the totally blind.

"SAY IT WITH CANDY."

Manufacturers and sellers of candy are about to flatter florists in a most sincere manner—by imitating them. At the recent convention of the National Confectioners' Association, at Springfield, Mass., it was decided to begin a publicity campaign along the lines of our campaign for flowers.

The candy men, like florists, suffered during the war because of government regulation and now see a new era dawning. They realize that the way to grasp the opportunity is to use publicity, intelligently and consistently.

Among the features of the advertising campaign contemplated by the confectioners is a plan to educate the public regarding the problems faced by the manufacturers of candy. This idea also is one on which our florists' committees have been working.

The makers of sweets are in favor of legislation for the standardization of manufacturing conditions, so that candy quality may be kept high; then they feel they will be in strong position to appeal to the public.

HANDS OFF.

During the war the people of the United States willingly accepted all acts of the government as for the general good, although it was apparent even then that some of the decrees, like the one on heatless Mondays, did more harm than good; but now we want hands off. As Elbert H. Gary, head of the Steel Corporation, said in a public statement last week:

"It is time that industry and enterprise in the United States shall be encouraged and protected instead of attacked, interrupted and destroyed."

Mr. Gary was not speaking of the activities of the Federal Horticultural Board, and it is doubtful if he ever heard of that body, but his words need not have been changed in the least degree had he held that destructive agency in mind.

A BRITISH VIEW.

"The approaching quarantine continues to occupy a large amount of space in the American trade press," says the Horticultural Advertiser (British), and "as far as outsiders can judge, opinions for or against depend almost entirely upon the effect the quarantine is presumed to bring about with regard to the financial interests of the writers.

"As we remarked when the subject was first discussed, the arguments about the exclusion of insect and other pests are mere 'camouflage' and are not apparently taken seriously by any of the parties concerned.

"The organs which represent the nursery trade proper, that is, the actual growers of trees, shrubs, etc., are working on the assumption that prohibition of imports will benefit the trade. It is, of course, realized that the exclusion of imports will cause temporary inconvenience, but writers have a robust faitl in the power of the American grower to produce anything which the country requires, if a profitable price is insured by the cutting off of all outside competition.

"On the other hand, the florists, who form a much larger and more influential body than with us, see plainly that prohibition means the loss of several profitable lines and the cutting down of their profits. Their three leading papers, which, without flattery, occupy a very high position in the trade press of the world, unite in condemning the quarantine from every point of view and in encouraging the agitation which is being carried on against it.

"We would not like to prophesy which side will win, but in view of the mischief which this new law will do, not only to our own trade, but also that of our friends on the continent, there is no need to make any declaration as to the direction in which our sympathy lies."

OBITUARY

Thomas A. Cox.

Thomas A. Cox, one of the oldest and best known florists in Massachusetts, died May 20 at his late home in Dorchester and was interred May 22. Mr. Cox had been a resident of Dorchester nearly half a century and had been in active business until a little over a year ago, when he disposed of his interests. For many years he was the largest and most successful local grower of smilax and earned the sobriquet of Smilax King. More recently he grew asparagus in quantity. He was a native of England and had reached his seventy-ninth milestone at the time of his death. Many of his confreres attended to pay their last tribute of esteem. Many beautiful floral tokens were sent.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market has been decidedly dull in the last few days, with clearances hard to make unless at concessions in price. There is no longer any equality in supply and demand, generally speaking, conditions of both being spasmodic. The big drive of the Salvation Army is thought to have had much to do with the curtailing of demand, and as other drives are expected to follow, retail florists are a little doleful as to their effect on the trade. Certain it is that they are likely to cause the turnover of a lot of money which ordinarily would be used in other directions.

Peonies from the south are coming in quantity, rather short in stem and of a quality hardly up to standard, but their movement militates against staple lines. A quantity of fine Spanish iris of really good quality is also coming from the south.

Roses are in oversupply with a diminished demand, and clearances at times are difficult. American Beauties in the special grades are considerably off in quality. The flower heads are small. The quality of the hybrid teas is better than usual at this season, the cool weather favoring them. Prices vary from day to day, according to conditions of supply and demand.

The demand for carnations is less than for some time; consequently prices have tumbled. While occasionally 5 cents is obtained for a few selected from the best, the price range may be said to be $2 to $4 per hundred, left-overs going for much less than the minimum. The quality of carnations is unusually good for the time of year.

The supply of cattleyas is somewhat in excess of the actual demand and when the best of arrivals have been taken the surplus is moved at prices varying according to conditions. Spray orchids, while not particularly plentiful, are hard to move without concession in price. There are not many lilies coming in, but the demand is light even for the small supply. Lily of the valley is plentiful and the quality of the top grades is good. A quantity of outside-grown stock is still coming in, as well as some frame-grown stock of splendid quality. The range of prices for forced stock is 2 to 6 cents.

There appears to be no reduction in the supply of miscellaneous flowers and the demand for them is anything but urgent; consequently much stock goes to waste. Sweet peas are particularly plentiful and some really fine stock is to be had. The best moves at $1.50 per hundred. There is an abundance of snapdragons, pansies, delphiniums, daisies, calendulas, stocks, primroses, myosotis and mignonette. A few outside-grown tulips are still in evidence. Lilac is in heavy supply, but moves fairly well at some price or other. Prices of white varieties are fairly remunerative.

Various Notes.

The list of new corporations for the state of New Jersey last week contained the name of the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., with Julius E. Roehrs, Rudolph Roehrs and Edouard Roehrs as incorporators. Capital, $15,000.

In the drive for funds for the Salvation Army, which occupied the attention of New York last week, florists and allied trades were allotted a quota of $500, but at the end of the week, as with most of the other trade committees, the quota had not been fully met. As the drive has been extended, it can hardly be imagined that this modest quota will not be met, even though florists have been liberal, individually, with subscriptions.

The Broadway Association at its meeting last week made public a list of excerpts from replies to 15,000 letters recently sent to business men and residents in the "Give a Thought to Broadway" campaign for the betterment of this highway. Prominent in the list was "flowers and plants in summer before store and apartment windows."

William Frazier, commonly known in Montana as "big-hearted Bill," general superintendent of the rich Davis-Daly mines at Butte, died May 17. He was a brother of Mrs. W. H. Long, wife of the Columbus avenue florist.

Theodore Weston, for many years in the employ of his brother, Henry Weston, of Hempstead, L. I., as a carnation grower, and later in business for himself at Bellmore, L. I., is now with one of the large establishments near Cleveland, O.

Lawrence Theiler, formerly bookkeeper for John Young & Co., and recently returned from service in France, is still suffering from wounds and shell shock, and is under government care at White Plains, N. Y.

The American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., of Pana, Ill., has been awarded the contract for the erection of a roof garden on the new Hotel Pennsylvania, the cost to be $20,000.

W. C. Rickards, Jr., for many years with J. M. Thorburn & Co., seedsmen, has severed his connection with that house and associated himself with William M. Hunt & Co.

The members of the joint flower show committee are to be the guests of Theodore A. Havemeyer, at his estate in Brookville, L. I., May 31.

International Flower Show.

The first preliminary schedule for the International Flower Show, which will be held in the Grand Central palace, Forty-sixth street and Lexington avenue, March 15 to 21, 1920, has made its appearance. The show will be held under the auspices of the Horticultural Society of New York and the New York Florists' Club.

An important feature of the show will be the trade exhibition. Floor plans are now available, showing the different sections reserved for trade displays. Greenhouse builders, manufacturers and dealers in florists' supplies, accessories, greenhouse supplies and equipment, fertilizers, garden furniture, garden and lawn tools; plantsmen, seedsmen and producers in any line connected with commercial or amateur floriculture are invited by the secretary of the flower show committee, John Young, to write for reservations.

The classes for which prizes will be awarded commercial growers include the following: Plants in flower, palms and foliage plants, ferns, bulbous plants, special open class, orchid plants and roses in pots and tubs. The private growers will enter in classes of their own. The special open class, which is a display of bulbs arranged as a bulb garden, covering 500 square feet, and the one for roses in pots and tubs, are open to both commercial and amateur growers.

T. A. Havemeyer is chairman of the show committee. Other members are as follows: Secretary, John Young; treasurer, Frederic R. Newbold; members, F. R. Pierson, George V. Nash, James Stuart, Joseph A. CHICAGO.

The Market.

During the first few days of last week there was a steadily declining demand, but Saturday the market cleaned up in beautiful shape at first-class prices. When the wholesalers saw the trend of demand, most of them sent word to the greenhouse men that it would be in line to cut a little less closely and thereby accumulate some small reserve for the heavier demand which was in sight for the present week. Consequently, prices were kept from breaking badly, even though the market had rather more flowers than were required. The principal difficulty was with sweet peas, which were in larger supply than at any previous time this season. These and certain miscellaneous items, like the double poet's narcissi which come in quantity each year from an Ohio shipper, and some outdoor irises, Paper Whites, valley, etc., had to be sold cheaply in order to move them. The average return to the growers for carnations and roses also declined, but remained considerably above the usual level for the penultimate week of May. Usually the market is loaded with stock at this time of year. Ordinarily peonies are coming in a flood and the majority of them are put in cold storage because there is no possibility of selling them as they arrive. Last week the peony arrivals were light and comparatively small quantities went into cold storage. Three houses received enough peonies so that they were able to put a few in the cooler against this week's big demand, but orders piled up as fast as the peonies did and at the opening of the present week some of the largest dealers had stopped taking out-of-town orders for them, a condition never before known in this market.

The market opened strong May 26 and there seems no possibility of anything except a general shortage of flowers up to Decoration day. The demand is greater than ever before, probably because of the season's general increase in business and partly because flowers are in smaller supply than usual at this date over the whole middle part of the United States. Orders are coming in from many buyers who are not usually heard from at this date and, while there seems to be a limit to the prices the buyers will pay, there does not seem to be any limit to the quantity of flowers they will take if they can get them at what they consider they can afford to pay.

The quality of flowers has suffered during the last few days. Roses are good and some of the Beauties are fine. The only fault to be found with the rose supply is that there are not enough of the lower-priced grades. While carnations are less plentiful than usual at this date, because so many growers dropped out last fall, the quality is above the usual May average, except in the case of a few growers who have been holding back too strongly. The peonies are neither so plentiful nor so good as usual. Sweet peas of the winter-blooming type are beginning to show the approach of spring. There is extremely little bulbous stock, including Spanish iris, outdoor Darwins, callas, Easter lilies and gladioli. Cattleyas and valley are not in special request for this holiday; their time comes next week.

Smilax is almost out of the market and Florida plumosus is scarce. Ferns have not arrived in the quantities expected and some of the dealers are out.

Geraniums.

When a reporter meets a florist from the residence districts the talk at once turns to geraniums. At this season of the year there is nothing so important to the man who does bedding work as the supply of the great bread-and-butter item. The supply of geraniums this year is smaller than in any recent season, due principally to two or three of the large growers having gone out of business. There is a general complaint that the stock is not blooming as early as the growers expected. Anyone who tries to buy geraniums in bloom finds the greenhouses almost devoid of color. But there will be plenty of geraniums a little later, unless the demand in June continues to clean them up as fast as the flowers open.

Expectations as to prices have not quite been realized. The wholesale price, which some of the growers thought would be $20 per hundred, is about $15, with an occasional sale being made at somewhat lower prices. If every plant were in first-class bloom no doubt the original figure would be easily obtained. As it is, the return to the growers is almost double that of recent years.

There is a great deal of difference in the quality of the stock one sees in different establishments, and a statement of size of pot and price means little until one has seen the stock.

Various Notes.

The peony crop sent to this market by Dr. J. A. Knapp, of Evansville, was the smallest in many years, because of weather conditions. Vincennes was hit still harder and W. A. Reiman's immense acreage gave him little to cut. Sarcoxie also suffered. There are few peonies coming in this week, but local growers will begin cutting early in June. There is fear that the local crop may also turn out badly.

Paul Klingsporn was at home, ill, for two days last week, a quite unusual occurrence with him.

Adam Zender has returned from a visit at Waukesha. He retired from the florists' business some time ago, except for the interest he holds in one of the large Milwaukee concerns.

The arrival of the first cut of Rose Premier is reported by the E. C. Amling Co.

Frank Schramm was in from Crystal Lake May 26, investigating the fuel situation. He has come to the conclusion that it is time to buy coal and says that he intends to have his entire season's supply on the place while people are still wearing straw hats.

Its annual excursion in the local retail plant trade is being made by the American Bulb Co. There is a steady sale to people passing the sidewalk display.

Joseph Foerster considers himself fortunate that the Alton peonies were just right for cutting last week. Edward Riehl is one of the growers who has the knack of putting up the flowers in fine shape for storage and Mr. Foerster accumulated some thousands of dozens of them last week. They will all be sold before this issue of The Review reaches its readers.

John Poehlmann returned May 27, from a two weeks' trip through the south. He says all the florists have had a prosperous season, but the condition of the cotton crops is not encouraging in Arkansas and Tennessee. He was in Memphis in time for the big centennial and says the town was wonderfully decorated and the parade brought out some beautiful floats. W. H. Mr. Poehlmann spent two days on the Arkansas state penitentiary farm; he and Kerby Boerstler, of Little Rock, were down there fishing. bulbs to a friend in the south, to be planted and grown on. It is too early to say as to the results, but the prospects are not discouraging.

The business established by Joseph Wall still goes under that name, but is run by his son, Julius Wall. The greenhouses, at 3235 North Springfield avenue, are worth a visit at this season, because Mr. Wall has the reputation of growing bedding plants rather better than most of the many small producers on the northwest side. Two large, light houses of geraniums, etc., were fine, the plants selling as fast as they come into flower.

W. K. Partridge, of the catalogue department of the W. W. Barnard Co., who has been critically ill in the County hospital, is convalescing.

Bassett & Washburn say business is twice as good as last year for Memorial day. They cater principally to the out-of-town trade.

A. Lange stated last week that by June 15 he expects to be located at 77 and 79 East Madison street, where he is fitting up a much larger store than he now occupies.

Stanley Serafino, who does business at the old A. Anthes site, 3440 North Lowell avenue, as the Grayland Florist, is one of the men, rare in the trade, who can see it when another grower's stock is better. He has been at the business ten years and has done well, but is in constant quest of knowledge. "The better the stock, the better it pays," he says; "I work hard and I want to learn so much about it that nobody can grow better plants than mine."

One of the curiosities of the trade is the establishment of F. L. Otto, at 2138 North Kedzie avenue. For several years he was located across the street, but the site coming into request for the large apartment house which now occupies it, Mr. Otto bought the lots nearly 300 feet deep at his present place, tore down the greenhouses and moved. He put up an enormous brick stack and set the pipe posts for a great greenhouse, glazing a small section at the boiler end as a protection for his stock plants—and there he stuck. There are hotbeds and coldframes among the piles of greenhouse material, and an old residence partly remodeled for sales-room use. There Mr. Otto lives all alone, with no assistants and so much work in sight he does not know where to begin. The location is one at which a fine business might be done by one who had proper equipment.

The Market.

A week of cold, damp, rainy weather held back all growing and greatly retarded stock for Memorial day. The late spring has greatly affected the peonies, the mainstay of the market on this day, so that this crop will not make it. A few will be available, but the great bulk will not come in until later.

Roses are in medium supply and range from $4 up. Carnations have been in rather limited supply and make from $6 to $10. Snapdragons are on the decline both in quantity and quality. Calla lilies are fast disappearing from the market. Sweet peas are also practically gone and those few that are available are of poor quality. Various small flowers, including pansies, calendulas, centaureas, poppies and early field Shasta daisies are on display.

Flowers for Memorial day will be scarce. Outdoor iris will help fill in, but the usual supply of flowers will not be available. Some stocks, candytuft and feverfew will also add to this meager amount.

The bedding season is just beginning to open up. Some few firms are doing box and vase filling, but the majority are marketing their stock in pots and letting the public do the planting. A great rush is expected in this line in the next week or ten days, as the season is growing late and the weather is just beginning to permit outside planting.

Various Notes.

The trade extends sympathy to the relatives and friends of S. T. Hitz, who died May 24 at the home of his son.

tory at the Soldiers' Home in Dayton. There is a splendid collection of palms, ferns and various foreign and domestic decorative plants here. A banana tree on which hangs the ripe fruit is an interesting feature. The grounds also are beautiful. The entire place is looked after by the veterans. E. E. T.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Peonies have come. The wholesalers welcomed them with a sigh of relief, for now the Memorial day crop is assured. That means not only that peonies will be here when they are most needed, but also that they will not be likely to overload the market in June. Peonies have come! It is the event of the week. The frequent tremendous drenchings followed by the warm sunshine have finished them well. They are excellent. Credit must also be given to the varieties grown for market. They are a vast improvement over the assortment offered a few years ago. They are selling well at good prices. There is every indication that the market will continue strong until May 28. After that it will depend on the local demand and on the weather. The out-of-town demand for peonies, and from the so-called battle towns up the state, is strong. Prices range from $6 to $12 per hundred.

Carnations are declining a little in price with the waning of the regular cut flower season, despite the approach of Memorial day. Sweet peas are of less and less account day by day. The indoor stock is not good enough in most cases; it does not ship well. The peas grown outdoors in frames do not arrive in sufficient numbers to make much of a market. Roses are good and plentiful. The cool spring has done a lot to help keep the roses in condition. They have sold well at fair prices.

The general tone of the market has been good all through the week. We have now passed the dangerous period and are reasonably certain that there will be no slump this month, with Memorial day close at hand. Brisk trading for the closing week is likely.

The Smoker.

The last Florists' Club meeting of the present season will be held at the Hotel Adelphia, Tuesday evening, June 3, at 8 p. m. Ladies are invited. There will be a vaudeville entertainment and there will be refreshments, besides the regular program and the fumigating. Better come and bring your sister, your cousin, your aunt or your best. They will enjoy it. Tickets, $2 each, must be engaged beforehand from Hugo Niessen, 120 Race street, Philadelphia.

The Price of Geraniums.

The geranium has been recognized as our standard bedding plant for many years and is still so. Neither the rose nor the canna (shall I say canna lily, Mr. Pyle?) has been able to displace it in popular favor. The standard price of geraniums for many, many years was $7 per hundred, wholesale. A few daring growers with fine stock obtained $8 per hundred, while the weak-kneed brethren who had stock to match were content with $6 per hundred. So firmly was the price of $7 per hundred standardized that it was considered as immovable as the laws of the Medes and the Persians. Duncan Macaw achieved in an instant a reputation for sagacity when he said that he did not see any profit in geraniums at $7 per hundred. The fixed retail price was then $1.20 per dozen, $10 per hundred. John Westcott highly disapproved of this retail price as soon as he went strongly into retailing geraniums. He offered fine varieties of geraniums in 4-inch, with a trowel (which was often returned) at 15 cents each.

Now in a few short weeks all this is changed and geraniums in 4-inch pots at $7 per hundred are a thing of the past, let us hope, never to return. The change was rumored when small geraniums from the cutting bench and from 2¼-inch pots got scarce in the late winter and early spring months. At Easter 4-inch geraniums in flower brought $15 per hundred wholesale readily. It was then predicted that they would not go below $12 per hundred in May. This prediction was wrong. Some lots sold at $100 per thousand, some at $120 per thousand; more sold at $16, at $18 and at $20 per hundred. It was amazing. Nobody seemed to know exactly how it happened; it came so quickly. The probable explanation is that the closing of so many private greenhouses and the restrictions put upon those commercial places that kept going, so restricted production that the supply came nowhere near equaling the demand.

All bedding plants have advanced in price in sympathy with geraniums, so that, while May has been cool and wet, conditions most unfavorable for planting out, this branch of our business is in healthier condition than it has ever been before. The retail price of geraniums in 4-inch pots is from $2.50 to $4 per dozen.

The advance in all other varieties of bedding plants, generally speaking, is in proportion to that of geraniums. As far as known, there has been no concerted action.

Geraniums Again.

The most remarkable sight in geraniums today is away out on the Mount Airy road between two cemeteries. There Harry Marchant has his entire place filled with geraniums. There are 25,000 of them, mostly 4-inch, a few 5-inch and a few 6-inch. They are exceedingly well grown and include the best varieties, Alphonse Ricard, Beaute de Poitevine, La Favorite and a few scattering. The funny part about it is that he won't wholesale, says he can retail them all and that he will do so.

You cannot help but admire Harry Marchant's purpose and pluck. The place was closed last winter owing to the government's fuel restrictions. Since reopening he has gathered all this stock together, grown into fine shape, and means to put it into the best market.

Various Notes.

Clarence Alwine, of Aldan, has leased the greenhouses of the Philadelphia Carnation Co., at Secane, Pa. This place was built by Horace T. Dumont. Associated with him was Harry Crawford. Later Robert Crawford, Jr., acquired the former's interest. The place was operated by the Crawfords, father and son, as a feeder for their Eleventh street store, until the war broke out, when it was closed. Carnations and ferns were specialties.

Clarence U. Liggit will remove his office June 2 from 325 to 303 Bulletin building. Mr. Liggit's new offices are much larger and better lighted than the old. They face on City Hall Plaza. It is a pleasure to see this sign of deserved success.

The Market.

The week before Memorial day finds the downtown stores ready for the occasion. The shortage on plants will not be so bad as was at first expected, although there will be far from enough to meet all demands and the prices will be considerably higher than usual. A surprisingly large number of made-up designs in magnolia leaves and wax and other artificial flowers have been ordered and are moving rapidly at from 98 cents to $5 each. In cut flowers the usual list of stock is offered. A larger number of orders than usual for Memorial day delivery of bouquets of cut flowers has been placed.

Various Notes.

Otto Hassert has added an auto truck and a runabout to his delivery department.

HARDENING OF THE STEM.

Will you tell me what is the matter with my petunia plants, of which I am sending you a sample? As you will notice, the bark dries up around the stem.

R. A. W.—Mich.

The trouble with the petunia plant submitted for examination is hardening of the stem bark. This is caused by allowing the plants to get hard and woody or rootbound at some stage of their growth. Dry stem-rot may also result from the same cause, especially if the plants, after being starved in the small pots, are potted in extremely rich soil. The heavy top growth, in comparison with the thin, wiry stem of the plant under consideration, would indicate that it had been so treated.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

CALIFORNIA NURSERYMEN MEET.

Endorse the Quarantine.

This is horticultural week at Riverside, with the annual conventions of seven or eight of the California organizations associated with horticulture.

The eighth annual meeting of the California Nurserymen's Association was one of the first on the schedule, opening May 26. President Max J. Crow, of Gilroy, started things by introducing Mayor Porter, who made a nice speech of welcome.

President Crow's address recommended consideration of the new federal quarantine order; it asked for consideration of the subject of bud selection and for coöperation between the nurserymen and the horticultural inspectors.

Dr. C. L. Marlatt, chairman of the Federal Horticultural Board, had come from Washington to explain the new quarantine order and was listened to closely. He was followed by George H. Hecke, of Sacramento, the state horticultural commissioner, who discussed the federal order as affecting California interests. George C. Roeding, of the Fancher Creek Nurseries, Fresno, was called on to speak for the trade and said nurserymen as a whole were in favor of the adoption of the quarantine and that interested importers are against it. He offered a resolution putting the meeting on record as favoring the quarantine and the resolution was adopted.

Buds and Bugs.

W. S. Shamel, of Riverside, introduced the topic, "Bud Selection: Are We Far Enough Along to Show Conclusive Results?" He said that citrus growers are recommended by their association to buy trees grown from selected buds, these buds being obtainable by reference to the association. Desultory discussion finally led to more pointed remarks from Messrs. Coats, Crow, Roeding, Gandy, Holder and others interested in deciduous fruits as well as citrus.

F. O. Popenoe, of Altadena, spoke on avocados, giving data on different varieties and illustrating his remarks with fruits from his own plants and others, showing the profits to be derived from their culture. D. W. Coolidge, of Pasadena, in his usual happy way, spoke on avocados, feijoas and custard apples, samples being passed around.

The session on the morning of May 27 was more or less in the hands of the bug men and it seemed to a trade observer that they felt that the same conditions that apply to fumigating a bale of cotton can also be applied to fumigating fruit trees. Nothing seems to stop the tax-paid bug men. One even went so far as to say that he had saved an orchid from the wreck of fumigation, while another seemed to hold it as an awful crime for a nurseryman to ship a cabbage plant with a live aphis on it. It was apparent that from their point of view the country would soon go to the dogs if it were not for the bug sharps.

George C. Roeding evidently was not sufficiently impressed with the value of the manifest law, although he was the sponsor for it originally. He showed what a boomerang it had been around Fresno county.

Those Present.

The ladies' auxiliary, organized at San Jose last year, had a successful meeting. Mrs. John Vallance, of Oakland, was reëlected president. Mrs. J. Armstrong was chosen as vice-president; Mrs. M. J. Crow, Gilroy, as secretary, and Mrs. E. Jackson, Cupertino, as treasurer. The ladies took an auto trip to Smiley Heights, Redlands, and to the state experiment station in company with the men interested. Last year there were sixteen members, this year forty-one.

The attendance at the meeting was exceptionally good. The Nurserymen's Association has 125 members, of whom eighty-five were present or represented. Among the well known people there were Max J. Crow and wife, Henry W. Kruckeberg and wife, F. R. Hills and wife, George C. Roeding, J. D. Meriwether and wife, J. S. Armstrong and wife and son, Mrs. John Vallance, H. Plath and wife, Mark Germain and wife, F. O. Popenoe, D. W. Coolidge, R. M. Teague, Charles Howard, T. W. Robertson and wife, John Morley, George Otto, F. Benard and daughter, Roy F.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Stock of all kinds has been plentiful during the week and both local and shipping business has kept up well considering the season. The way orders have been coming to the wholesalers, it looks as if the Decoration day business will be a record breaker. The demand from eastern and middle-west points for statice, strawflowers and other "everlastings" has been greater than ever before and, owing to the mild weather, the stock is in excellent condition for shipping.

Roses are of poor quality as a rule; carnations are good. With the arrival of Cattleya gigas, orchids are more plentiful, but the demand keeps up well. Sweet peas, Cecile Brunner roses and other corsage flowers are in good demand and altogether the business has a far healthier tone than usual at this time.

Florist Invited to France.

Fred Howard, president of Howard & Smith, starts this week on a trip to Europe. Mr. Howard has been invited by the French government to judge the roses at "Concours de Bagatelle" in Paris and has accepted. This is an honor only shared by one other American rose grower and naturally all of Mr. Howard's friends in the trade are elated.

It will be recalled that last year Howard & Smith won the coveted gold medal at the Bagatelle Gardens for the wonderful Los Angeles rose and this is only a small part of the success of this great variety. At present there is a block of 40,000 plants on the firm's grounds at Rivera in full bloom, at least 1,000,000 flowers being open. It is one of the greatest sights ever seen in this location.

Mr. Howard while in Europe will visit the Belgian, Dutch and English nurseries, as well as the French, and no doubt many novelties will be added to the famous H. & S. collections. The writer was at Montebello with Mr. Howard the morning he left and it is characteristic of Fred that, busy as he was, he found time to go around and say good-bye to practically everyone on the place, with a word or two for all and a cordial handshake. It is this kindly feeling and coöperation between employer and employee that has made the Howard & Smith corporation the big thing it is. And Fred is the active ruling head.

Changes in Wilcox Nursery.

A look around the nursery of Roy F. Wilcox at Montebello shows that the infusion of new blood has had its effect. Mr. Wilcox is evidently going to make use of every corner. One fine improvement is moving the stock of Cocos plumosa from the nursery lines and planting the specimens farther apart in rows. Between these are large blocks of Erica melanthera to be used for cutting and shipping to the east and the plants are looking fine. Mr. Wilcox is using large quantities of peat humus, several carloads having been supplied by the Los Angeles Floral Co. This material is especially useful on the heavy soil at Montebello.

Paul Steiger, who has charge of the nursery end for Mr. Wilcox, is also busy on kentias, another large shipment being en route to the east this week. On the occasion of our visit the work of making up was in progress and some fine stock is being developed. In the rose houses the benches as they are emptied are being drained with tile and broken brick. Mr. Wilcox is going at top speed and no doubt will reap the benefit later.

Various Notes.

Morris Goldenson is recovering nicely from his accident and has been at Gillman Springs for a course of treatment. Albert Goldenson had a rather bad case of poisoning in his finger from handling roses and had to have a slight operation. But he has been holding down the stand and is in good shape for the Memorial day business, which promises to be a record-breaker at West Third street.

SPLENDENS

Fischer's beautiful lavender Freesia—the great commercial sort—the Freesia that can be used for any and all purposes, from wedding decorations to funeral work, where lavender tone is wanted.

Can be used alone or combined with other tall flowers for decorative effect. Given rich culture, will produce large blooms with strong, stiff stems, two feet long and over, with luxuriant foliage well up the stem. Color is a lovely shade of bluish lavender, varying slightly; but all are of equal beauty and elegance.

Great care was used in propagating this stock and nothing but the choicest sorts were used. Each sort had to possess the following qualities: Large size; long, strong stems; healthy, vigorous growth; strong fragrance; beautiful color, and great keeping qualities. When a well grown bench of this superfine Freesia is in bloom, it is a grand sight.

Don't stock up with poor Freesias, when stock of this most elegant Freesia can be procured.

All of my other varieties of Freesias are of the same fine stock, flowers of which are eagerly bought by the best people of the land at prices never before paid for Freesias. I have now stock of SPLENDENS in sufficient quantity to offer it to the trade at a lower price than was ever possible before. Don't wait, as the price will not be any lower for some time to come, if ever, as growing conditions here in California are too uncertain to grow valuable stock outside. Therefore, stock will never be plentiful. Other good varieties will follow in quick succession, as soon as stock is ready.

Prices: $50.00 per 1000; $7.00 per 100; $1.50 per dozen. 250 lots at 1000 rates. Cash with order. Usual trade discount to dealers. Only good, flowering bulbs will be offered for sale.

John Scheepers & Co., 2 Stone St., N. Y., have the agency for my grand new Freesia Fischerii this season.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Extensive preparations are in progress here for Memorial day business, the general opinion being that a greater demand for flowers will be experienced this year than ever before. Various reasons are given for the optimistic attitude, but the outlook for particularly heavy sales is based principally on the general prosperity which prevails in this part of the country and the fact that more than the usual number of people have been laid to rest in the past year as a result of the influenza epidemic and the war.

For a good many years cut flowers of the cheaper varieties have been sold in great quantities by venders at the cemetery gates on the outskirts of San Francisco and people, finding that they could get flowers there, have been less inclined to come downtown to make their purchases. This has had a tendency to curtail Memorial day business with the florists to a considerable extent. The custom of buying from venders has not proven satisfactory to many people, however, who desire first-grade stock, so it is believed trade will gradually work back to the florists' shops again, with a noticeable increase starting this year.

Stock will be plentiful for all requirements, there being an abundance of outdoor flowers such as daisies, gaillardias, gypsophilas, marigolds, cornflowers, baby gladioli, marguerites and jelly stock. There will also be a heavy cut of fine roses, and carnations will be in better condition than at either Easter or Mothers' day. Large-flowering gladioli are beginning to appear and it is expected another week will see them in greatly increased numbers. Peonies are a prominent item now and will continue to arrive in heavy supply until after Decoration day. The market is flooded with sweet peas. In fact, there is an abundance of all seasonable offerings, but there is every indication that a close clean-up will be effected from day to day for the remainder of this month at least, especially in view of heavy shipping orders, which will require quantities of flowers early in the week, while local needs will take care of the receipts toward the end.

Various Notes.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee is much gratified over increased F. T. D. business, her establishment getting and sending many orders through this service now. San Francisco people seemed slow to avail themselves of this opportunity of having flowers delivered promptly in other cities, but many are now making liberal use of the service. This is especially pleasing to Mrs. Darbee because, although for a long time she received many orders from eastern florists, she did not seem able to work up any business here. Whether her two or three years of advertising and the efforts of other local florists are just beginning to bring cumulative results, she is not prepared to say, but at any rate a day seldom goes by now but what she has some orders to telegraph to other parts of the country. She enjoyed a fishing expedition in northern California recently and expects to take her vacation trip to the Yosemite valley next month. Her party will be joined on the trip by some florist friends from Ogden, Utah.

Mrs. Carlos, formerly of the Sea Cliff florists' establishment, is preparing to open a store on Sutter street, so it is reported.

H. Monroe, of Hollister, Cal., was a recent visitor in San Francisco.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is making use of a new wire box tightening arrangement, which, according to Manager J. A. Axell, is proving a big improvement over the use of rope in the packing of long-distance shipping orders. This company expects to have a big cut of large-flowering gladioli for Memorial day.

Fred Rowe, manager for L. W. McCoy, of Seattle, Wash., has been visiting the local trade.

The force of Albert O. Stein has had a rush week with decorations and funeral work. The decorations included an elaborate affair at the home of Mayor James J. Rolph, which required quantities of American Beauty roses, larkspur and pink peonies; also a nice execution for a navy party at the Fairmont hotel on "Navy day," utilizing a number of attractive basket arrangements of assorted spring flowers. For a large San Mateo funeral a pall of orchids, pansies and maidenhair ferns was made.

Mark Ebel, of Sacramento, Cal., was in town this week on one of his periodic visits. He reported business holding up fairly well in that city.

A. J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., says that business leaves no ground for complaint, sales being unusually brisk for this season of the year. On days when there is an extra amount of funeral work in addition to the general demand for cut flowers, the force is rushed.

V. N. Podesta, of Podesta & Baldocchi, sums up the situation in these words: "Flowers are plentiful and good, the demand brisk and prospects excellent for Memorial day."

Several large funeral orders caused a rush at Joseph's early in the week, the work including a pall of orchids and pink roses.

"Too busy to talk," was the greeting of Henry Avansino, of Avansino Bros., this week, which speaks well for the period between Mothers' day and Memorial day.

Mr. Enomoto, of Enomoto & Co., has been booking large shipping orders for Memorial day stock, which seems to vindicate his judgment in making big preparations for handling extra business at that time. There will be an abundance of stock, he says, and all indications point to a close clean-up.

Plenty of flowers and plenty of orders, is the report of the United Flower & Supply Co.

Miss Recardie Lee Murray reports enough decorations and funeral work to keep her fairly busy, together with the usual store trade. From present indications she thinks the demand for flowers will keep up better than usual straight through the summer.

Stephen Fazio, of the California Floral Co., near Hyde, used quantities of hawthorn in a large church decoration and supplied hundreds of roses given away on the occasion.

Having built up a nice business as a florist, John Scragg has severed his connections with the Redding Iron Works, at Redding, Cal., in order to devote his whole attention to his flowers and garden in the southern part of town. He had been a molder at the iron works for ten years.

Adolph Winters, of Richmond, an industrial suburb on the east side of San Francisco bay, has moved into temporary quarters at 327 Macdonald avenue, awaiting the erection of his own building at Eleventh street and Macdonald, work on which is to begin at an early date and rushed to completion in time for occupancy in the fall. In addition to his flower business, Mr. Winters carries a stock of musical instruments and merchandise.

A movement has been started in Santa Rosa, Cal., whereby rose bushes will be planted on either side of the state highway between that city and Sausalito, the intention being to make that stretch of highway one of the most picturesque rose drives in the world. Effort will be made to interest Luther Burbank in the project. M. M.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The market is well supplied with seasonable stock and business is reported good, with excellent prospects for the future. Growers are holding back everything as much as possible for Decoration day business, which promises to excel anything in the past. Graduation classes out of the city have drawn heavily on the trade the last week or two and some of the stores have done a good business in that line. The stores that handle plants and bedding stock are working hard these days to accommodate the throngs that crowd their places.

Various Notes.

The Portland Floral Society met this week. Considering that everyone is so busy at this season of the year, the attendance was fairly good. Mr. Clancy, of Salem, was present at the meeting and gave an interesting talk on the prospects and plans for the floral exhibits at the state fair, which will be held in September. He urged Portland florists to take a more active part in the displays, the premiums would be ample, suitable space and equipment would be furnished and every help given to make the floral exhibit a success. Many growers promised to contract for space.

Plans for the Portland rose festival are being steadily carried out, and Mr. Thelan, the landscape artist, reported that all the bedding space in the park

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Publicity Night at Your Club.

We are entering June with less than half of our required fund of $100,000 subscribed. It is quite obvious that we must speed up the campaign. Are our clubs and other organizations doing as much as they might? Why cannot they put on a "publicity night" occasionally and thus arouse local interest in the campaign? Any club or organization that is willing to do this can have the assistance of our committees, which, out of their membership, will supply speakers who can intelligently present the subject and meet any discussion. All that is necessary is to notify the secretary of the requirement and the speakers will be forthcoming. There are sixty or more organizations of florists in the country, but few only have so far made a push for the campaign fund through a "publicity night."

We ought by this time to be a long way toward our goal. Thousands of florists throughout the country have as yet given the fund no support whatever. As a subscriber said the other day: "What must be the feelings of those who have not subscribed when they see our superb advertisements in the magazines? They must, indeed, be hard-shelled if they do not immediately send a contribution to the secretary. They know that certain of their trade brethren are providing the campaign ammunition and they should be proud, rather than otherwise, to contribute."

A Campaign for Summer.

As has been said scores of times, the money collected is wholly expended for publicity for flowers. As fast as sufficient is collected for a magazine crusade, one is planned and put into execution. But we should keep continually at it; there should be no lulls. It is just as important that our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," be seen everywhere in summer as in winter. People have birthdays every day; it is estimated that there are daily about 20,000 in a city like New York, and naturally they occur in summer as well as at any other time.

Our committees have prepared a plan of campaign for the summer and are putting it into execution. We have to place our magazine advertisements well ahead of publication dates. Consequently the committees sometimes are called upon to anticipate income. This is not fair to them, but, Mr. Nonsubscriber, you are at fault for this condition. Of course you know that you intend to make a contribution, and would do it in a minute if you received a personal call for it. Will you not dispense with the necessity for this and send to the secretary forthwith whatever you wish to contribute? If you would first like to see a list of subscribers, one will be sent to you upon request.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Publicity Night at Your Club.

We are entering June with less than half of our required fund of $100,000 subscribed. It is quite obvious that we must speed up the campaign. Are our clubs and other organizations doing as much as they might? Why cannot they put on a "publicity night" occasionally and thus arouse local interest in the campaign? Any club or organization that is willing to do this can have the assistance of our committees, which, out of their membership, will supply speakers who can intelligently present the subject and meet any discussion. All that is necessary is to notify the secretary of the requirement and the speakers will be forthcoming. There are sixty or more organizations of florists in the country, but few only have so far made a push for the campaign fund through a "publicity night."

We ought by this time to be a long way toward our goal. Thousands of florists throughout the country have as yet given the fund no support whatever. As a subscriber said the other day: "What must be the feelings of those who have not subscribed when they see our superb advertisements in the magazines? They must, indeed, be hard-shelled if they do not immediately send a contribution to the secretary. They know that certain of their trade brethren are providing the campaign ammunition and they should be proud, rather than otherwise, to contribute."

A Campaign for Summer.

As has been said scores of times, the money collected is wholly expended for publicity for flowers. As fast as sufficient is collected for a magazine crusade, one is planned and put into execution. But we should keep continually at it; there should be no lulls. It is just as important that our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," be seen everywhere in summer as in winter. People have birthdays every day; it is estimated that there are daily about 20,000 in a city like New York, and naturally they occur in summer as well as at any other time.

Our committees have prepared a plan of campaign for the summer and are putting it into execution. We have to place our magazine advertisements well ahead of publication dates. Consequently the committees sometimes are called upon to anticipate income. This is not fair to them, but, Mr. Nonsubscriber, you are at fault for this condition. Of course you know that you intend to make a contribution, and would do it in a minute if you received a personal call for it. Will you not dispense with the necessity for this and send to the secretary forthwith whatever you wish to contribute? If you would first like to see a list of subscribers, one will be sent to you upon request.

gree that stock began to accumulate. As usual in such times, only poorly grown and inferior flowers suffered—all good stock moved quickly at fair prices. Roses are plentiful in all varieties and grades. Carnations are of exceptional quality and supply and demand about equal. Sweet peas are coming in plentifully, but they find a market quickly. Better lilies are coming in now than we had at Easter, but they bring only half the money. After having a good start, peonies are scarce and the demand cannot be supplied with good stock. The numerous odds and ends go to the early buyers, who always show the best variety in their stores. The bedding plant business is attaining life-sized proportions. Numerous sorts are sold out. Pansies are hard to find and bring good prices.

Seedsmen state that numerous war gardens are reverting to flower beds this year. The call for flower seed and seedlings is heavy, in some cases exceeding the supply.

Various Notes.

A visit to the Holton & Hunkel Co. plant at Brown Deer, nine miles north of the city, is well worth while. Thousands of cyclamens are coming on in 3-inch pots, as uniform and healthy as the U. S. army. The Boston ferns grown here have no superiors anywhere and justify the prices asked for them. The orchid houses were sweet and clean. The bench of Cattleya Mossiæ was full of fine flowers. A sturdy lot of Sansevieria zeylanica were in 6-inch pots and about ready for the retailer. Other foliage plants were dracænas, crotons, pandanus and aspleniums. In the rose section the Columbias are coming on with a growth of heavy flowering shoots. All of the roses look well, excepting a few benches in process of drying off. Several benches of young roses recently planted have had a pinch and will produce heavily this summer. About one mile from the greenhouses is the Holton & Hunkel dairy farm. "Modern" is the word which describes best the well kept premises. Probably the most valuable crop from the farm is the manure, which goes to the greenhouses.

Fred Bliese, of Waukesha, has a nice lot of French hydrangeas in good color. He is sending some to Milwaukee. Mr. Bliese grows some fine flowers, most of which go to his retail store in Waukesha.

Miss Rose Semler, of the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., was a buyer in the local market last Saturday. Mr. Leidiger, who attends to this daily, was out of the city. The company reports a good increase in business this season.

That The Review is read by most florists in Milwaukee was shown by the conversation that predominated at the wholesale houses last Friday and Saturday. Everyone was posted on the reproduction of the front-page article in the Harrisburg, Pa., Courier. Some sympathies were expressed for the Harrisburg florists. The general opinion was that such an occurrence was due to neglect among the florists in not establishing amicable relations with the newspapers. Here in Milwaukee we "love every newspaper in town."

Adam Zender, of Chicago, stopped in Milwaukee a few days en route from Waukesha to his home.

others in the floral offerings which their representative received. There were such designs as horseshoes ten feet high; there were numbers, designating certain wards, that could hardly be gotten into the council chamber. While all of these were not fine examples of the florists' art, they represented much money, and the larger a design the better pleased were those who gave the order. For a few days all of this kept the market well cleaned up.

Good roses have been scarce, and sweet peas are pretty well played out. There are still some good carnations to be had, but the majority of them may be classed as poor. Most of the outdoor stock is over and the market is fast getting down to a summer basis. Of course Decoration day is yet to come, as well as various commencements, but, as in previous years, there will be plenty of stock to take care of everything.

Various Notes.

The last meeting of the Florists' Club was held May 14 at Beethoven hall, on North Howard street, as the club was obliged to find new quarters for its home. The Florists' Exchange hall is owned by the S. S. Pennock Co., and running a hall in conjunction with a florists' business has long been a thorn in the flesh of John J. Perry; so when the opportunity presented itself to rent the hall to a religious body for their exclusive use, Mr. Perry accepted the chance to get rid of what has been a trouble to him. At the same time Mr. Perry was on hand with an offer to the club of the firm's showrooms in which to hold its meetings, free of charge. The club, however, felt that it should have a hall of its own, so the Royal Arcanum hall has been secured and the next meeting of the club will be held there.

One of the principal discussions of the last meeting was the high prices which are being obtained for bedding plants this spring. Most of the members reported no trouble in getting what they ask for their stock. One man said he had no trouble in getting $3 per dozen for geraniums which at one time sold for $1 per dozen. On Mother's day carnations sold for as much as $3 per dozen for cut stock. Some of the more conservative members took issue with their high prices, and freely quoted an article which had appeared in a recent issue of The Review, and which said that supply and demand regulated prices, but there was danger of such a thing as killing the demand if prices kept soaring. Should this be the case the many years spent in educating the public in the use of flowers for all occasions would be lost and the work would have to be done all over. The club's idea was that it is up to the grower to produce his stock and sell it as reasonably as would be consistent with a fair profit. It was pointed out that all the big industrial concerns spend untold money and devoted much study to manufacture their wares at the lowest cost possible. This should be the aim of the florists—to do everything to keep the prices of their stock within reason.

J. J. Perry is much elated over the fact that the 110th Field Artillery, with which his son, Ward, went overseas, docked at Newport News May 20.

Mary Johnston received a letter from her son, Robert, last week. For six weeks he has been at an embarkation port awaiting a boat. Robert says that this waiting, with nothing to do, is much worse than the war, and he never wants to see Europe again.

Robert Halliday, of the I. H. Moss Co., has been quite sick for some time, but at this writing I am glad to report him improving. Tate.

In its department of "Who's Who in Our City" the Washington Herald on May 21 ran a portrait and sketch of the life of Z. D. Blackistone, president of the Washington Florists' Club. The story said that Mr. Blackistone started in the flower business in 1898 with $10 and a reputation for integrity. The KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Preparations are being made for a big Memorial day. All of the holidays that mean business for florists have been better this year than ever before and this leads everyone to believe that Memorial day will be ahead of former years. The significance of this day is greater because of the losses in the late war and the sympathy awakened by the sacrifice of the boys who did not come back. Weather conditions have been most favorable for a good supply of peonies. Thousands of these flowers will be ready for cutting at the right time. There will be an abundance of roses, but carnations will be scarce. Prices will not advance much. Peonies are selling for 6 cents wholesale this week; roses from 4 to 15 cents, carnations 5 cents. Sweet peas are getting scarce, but there are a few selling for 50 and 75 cents per hundred, and extremely few irises at $2 per hundred.

Various Notes.

Arthur Newell has just received the largest shipment of fancy art crockery that he has ever bought. Part of the goods will be on display at his store and the rest of it he will keep packed until he moves this summer to his new location at 1122 Grand avenue.

William Hedges, of the 129th Field Artillery, is home, having received his discharge at Camp Funston. He is the son of Mrs. E. C. Hedges, of 304 East Tenth street. Mrs. Hedges is a member of the reception committee of the Woman's Auxiliary of the 129th Field Artillery, and in this capacity is busy preparing a big welcome party for the boys.

J. B. Masson, of Kansas City, Kan., who has been in the retail business there for the last six or seven years, has bought greenhouses at Whitechapel, Kan., and will engage in growing for the wholesale trade. His purchase consists of about 12,000 square feet of glass. It is fine property. The greenhouses were built about eight years ago and with improvements cost approximately $16,000. The plant has been idle for the last two years, but just last summer the buildings were repainted and cleaned up. Mr. Masson will take charge July 1 and will make a specialty of growing high-class pot plants. He

C. H. A. Convention.

Plans are being made for the biggest convention in the history of the Canadian Horticultural Association. The Gardeners' and Florists' Association and the Retail Florists' Club are cooperating in preparing the program for the entertainment of delegates.

The new dates set are August 12 to 14. For these three days Toronto will be the Mecca of growers, gardeners and retailers. The retailers are taking renewed interest in the association because of the work of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club, which has sent a questionnaire to every florist in Canada, urging attendance at the convention, with the idea of forming an organization. In the meantime the association has arranged to change its constitution to divide the organization into sections for growers, gardeners and retailers. A day of the convention has been set apart for the retailers.

The program, according to preliminary arrangements, is as follows:

AUGUST 12.

Address of welcome.
President's address.
Secretary's report.
Papers by Mr. Smart, Mr. Groves and Mr. Hall.

AUGUST 13.

Retail florists' day. Retailers' picnic, to which all attending the convention are invited.

AUGUST 14.

Paper on landscape gardening, by Mr. Harris or Mr. Hall.
Discussion on gardening, to be opened by George Thompson and W. G. Hall.
Paper on bulbs and seeds, by H. Simmers.
Paper on coöperation, by Mr. Groves.
Paper on national plant registration, by Mr. Moore.

A big exhibition will be held in the convention hall and American supply houses will be asked to take part. Florists from the United States will be cordially welcomed to the convention.

Hannibal, Mo.—Griffen & Sons are enjoying excellent business. This is a southern city of nearly 20,000 population and the Griffen place is the only downtown flower store. There is only one other greenhouse establishment. Business is steady and prices are fair.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; thirty-seventh annual convention, Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 24, 25, 26, 1919.

PETER HOLLENBACH, Chicago, was 69 years of age May 26.

CHARLES DICKINSON, president of the Albert Dickinson Seed Co., was 61 years of age May 28.

W. W. BARNARD, Chicago, is visiting his company's pea growing branch at Reeseville, Wis., this week.

THE seedsmen who are stuck this season are principally those who bought last year for much more than their previous requirements.

THE steamer from Bermuda which arrived at New York May 23 landed forty-six cases listed on the manifest as containing lily bulbs.

REPORTS are being circulated that drought in the vicinity of Ollioules has resulted in cutting the crop of Paper Whites and Romans below previous estimates.

SEVERAL St. Louis seedsmen made a special trip to Jefferson City last week to confer with Governor Gardner about the new state seed law which has been passed by both houses of the Missouri legislature, but which the governor has not yet signed.

As two employees of the Illinois Seed Co. were walking across Rush street bridge, Chicago, on their way home from work, May 23, two automobiles collided, and William Schoen, bookkeeper, 25, was struck and hurled through the smashed railing and drowned.

THEODORE OUTERBRIDGE, lily bulb grower at Sunnylands, Bermuda, was in Chicago several days last week. He says the 1919 crop of Harrisii bulbs for export will be a little larger than in 1918, but will not exceed 100,000, while the demand is for many times that quantity.

THERE was a meeting of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League in New York last week. The circumstances and attendance were as usual. The value of seeds at this time is more a matter of doubt than it ordinarily is and there are suggestions that the league can extend the scope of its operations to the profit of its present members and other wholesalers.

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

The thirty-seventh annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association will be held in Chicago, June 24 to 26, at the Hotel Sherman, the first session opening at 10 a. m. Reservations should be made as soon as possible, on account of the number of other conventions.

Notice is given of a proposed change in the by-laws, adding the following section:

No appropriation of money shall be made from the treasury of the association until the sum to be expended has first been referred to the executive committee for their consideration and recommendation.

Secretary Kendel says proper provisi n and distribution of badges requires as many names of those who expect to attend as possible, in advance of the convention, and sends out cards to be

The formal program is as follows:

"The Needs for Critical Study in Seed Production," by R. A. Oakley, U. S. Department of Agriculture.
"Is Seed Trading Worth While?" by Edgar Brown, U. S. Department of Agriculture.
"Our Seed Trade with European Countries," by W. A. Wheeler, U. S. Department of Agriculture.
"Concerning Article II," by Kirby D. White, D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.
"Commissions," by Leonard H. Vaughan, Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago.
"The Garden Army and Its Purpose," by Lester S. Ivins, Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C.

One of the features of interest that will be shown at the convention will be a moving picture with subjects and pictures of special interest to the trade. In this connection there will be thrown on the screen pictures of members and sons of members of the association who took part in the great war, as far as it is possible to obtain photographs of such persons. There are a good number who have not yet responded with photographs to the committee having this in charge. It is requested that any who have not will please mail such photographs immediately to Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn., together with as many facts relative to the subject as possible, including full name and address, branch of the service, when and where located, if duties overseas or domestic, so that as complete a record as possible can be shown representing the American Seed Trade Association.

SOUTHERN SEEDSMEN.

The Southern Seedsmen's Association held its first annual convention at Montgomery, Ala., May 26 and 27, with an attendance of about fifty members and other seedsmen and supply dealers.

The following officers were elected: President, E. A. Martin, Jacksonville, Fla.; first vice-president, R. B. Buchanan, Memphis, Tenn.; second vice-president, Richard O'Bannon; secretary and treasurer, Frank S. Love, Montgomery, Ala. H. H. Gardner was reëlected as field agent. It was decided that the allied traders be admitted as associate members. Jacksonville, Fla., was selected for next year's meeting.

The program of the meeting was as follows:

President's address, Louis B. Reuter.
Secretary's report, Frank S. Love.
"The Production and Supply of Velvet Beans for Seed Purposes," address by Professor J. F. Duggar, director of the Alabama Experiment Station.
"Seed Laws," address by Curtis Nye Smith, attorney for American Seed Trade Association.
"Advertising," address by Fred I. Meyer, advertising manager for Chris Reuter.
"The Relation of Seed Reporting Service to Southern Seedsmen," address by W. A. Wheeler, seed reporting service.
"Coöperation," address by Richard O'Bannon, president of the O'Bannon Co.

A banquet on the evening of May 26 was an enjoyable affair.

IOWA SEEDSMEN TO MEET.

The Iowa Seed Dealers' Association is to hold its annual meeting in Des Moines, June 3, at the Chamber of Commerce rooms. It has been decided to have a one-day session only this year, because everybody is busy and anxious to get home.

"The meeting is called for 9 a. m.," says Secretary A. M. Eldridge. "Be there without fail. We are going to have a good time, and I consider this an important meeting because there are so many things we will want to discuss. The college people will be there and,

ONION SETS AND BAGS.

Hearing at Chicago.

Representing all but two of the important dealers in onion sets at Chicago, Capt. Ralph B. Howe, of the W. W. Barnard Co., headed a committee which appeared before the Consolidated Classification Committee May 27 to oppose the proposal to prohibit the shipment of onion sets in bags. The statement filed contains many matters of general trade interest and is in part as follows:

"We are representing the Cook County Onion Set Shippers, whose shipments aggregate annually approximately forty million pounds, with an estimated value of two and a quarter million dollars.

Announcement

We beg to announce to our friends and patrons that we have removed from 1004 Lincoln Bldg., Philadelphia, to

50 PARK PLACE, NEW YORK CITY

Where we will be located in the future.

This important change in our business has been necessitated by conditions which we could no longer ignore.

Our increased importations of foreign stock, such as Japanese, French and Holland bulbs, etc., impel us to be at the port of entry. Other reasons, more or less of a private nature, likewise served to bring about this change.

We take the opportunity at this time to announce that our representative, Mr. E. F. Hoehl, has secured an interest in our business, and will continue traveling as heretofore.

We thank you for all past favors and confidently believe that, with improved facilities, we shall be enabled to serve you more promptly and efficiently than ever before.

S. S. Skidelsky & Company, 50 Park Place, New York City

ways to be had at the proper time in sufficient quantities. From that time to the present, the larger shippers of onion sets have found that, with the exception of a small percentage of the entire total, onion sets shipped in bags went through to destination with practically no deterioration.

"Thus the burlap sack has grown to be the customary package and to eliminate the bag as a shipping container will cause a radical readjustment of the onion set industry. The bag is used largely for the shipment of onion sets on account of:

1. Low cost.
2. It is a package convenient to handle.
3. It is economical of time and labor in packing.
4. It affords sufficient circulation of air.
5. It affords large quantity buyers an economical package because of less expense to unpack and re-store in trays.

"An examination of the claims which have been presented by two shippers, covering the crop seasons of 1917 and 1918, show that the reasons for these claims have been largely delays or losses in transit, which are factors affecting the operating conditions of the roads and would have occurred irrespective of the package used.

"Exhibit A, Section 1, represents claims filed by one large shipper during the season of 1917-1918, as follows:

3,200,000 lbs. of onion sets shipped, consisting of 48 straight cars, weighing 1,152,000 lbs., and L. C. L. shipments weighing 2,048,000 lbs.
48,500 bags were used,
3,000 crates were used,
6 claims were filed,
$173.70 amount involved in these claims,
2,784 lbs. involved in these claims,
.0014% ratio of claims filed to total amount of shipments made.

"Exhibit A, Section 2, represents claims filed by the same firm during the season of 1918-1919, as follows:

4,704,000 lbs. of onion sets shipped, consisting of 88 straight cars, weighing 2,112,000 lbs., and L. C. L. shipments weighing 2,592,000 lbs.
70,000 bags were used,
3,000 baskets were used,
4,000 crates were used,
11 claims were filed,
$611.08 amount of claims filed.
7,168 lbs. involved in claims,
.0028% ratio of claims filed to total amount of shipments made.

"Exhibit B, Section 1, represents claims filed by another shipper during the season of 1917-1918, as follows:

1,632,293 lbs. total amount of onion sets shipped,
25,362 bags were used,
95 barrels were used,
100 1-bu. crates were used,
864 2-bu. crates were used,
35 claims were filed,
25,634 lbs. involved in claims,
.0105% ratio of claims filed to total amount of shipments made.
$926.48 amount of claims involved.

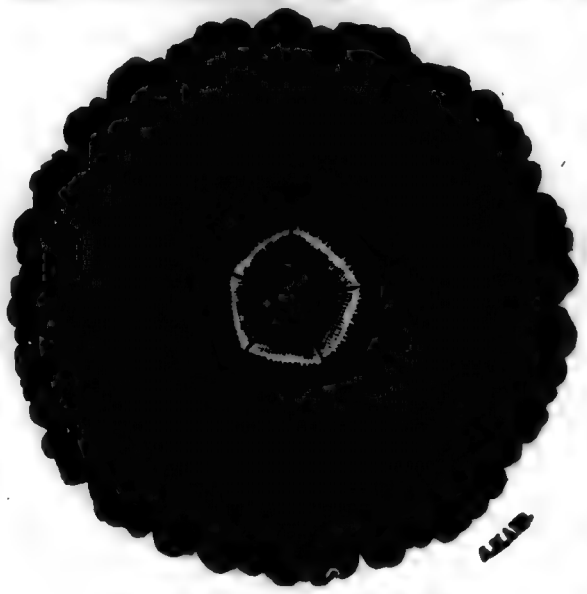
"Exhibit B, Section 2, represents claims filed by the same shipper during the season of 1918-1919, as follows:

1,356,599 lbs. total amount of onion sets shipped,
25,524 sacks were used,
65 barrels were used,
213 1-bu. crates were used,
673 2-bu. crates were used,
6 claims were filed,
$127.76 amount involved in claims,
2,368 lbs. involved in claims,
.0018% ratio of claims filed to total amount of shipments.

"In view of the foregoing data regarding claims covering onion set shipments, the onion set industry cannot justly be penalized as a whole because of the carelessness or inefficiency of a few small shippers.

"After a full discussion of the proposed elimination of the bag as an onion set package, the following resolutions are presented:

The Shippers' Resolutions.



WHEREAS, The Consolidated and Western Classification Committees of the United States Railroad Administration have now under consideration the question of discontinuing the bag as a container for onion set shipments, and

WHEREAS, In view of the nearly universal practice and custom among onion set shippers of using the bag as a container, it being the best, most economical and efficient one known to shippers, as proven by years of experience and use, and,

WHEREAS, Among the principal reasons for its use in preference to any other form of container are:

1. The result of the thirty odd years' experience of the onion set growers and shippers of Cook county, which comprises the largest producing and shipping center of the United States, is that the bag is the most desirable package in which to make shipment of onion sets.

2. Onion sets in bags can be delivered more easily and quickly and the bags have a longer life as a container than one made of wood or other material.

3. Onion sets in proper condition and under proper inspection shipped in bags will remain sound if shipped to any part of the United States; on the other hand, if they are soft or sprouting and have not been properly cured, they will deteriorate and rot, irrespective of the package in which shipped. The losses that have occurred when shipped in bags have been either due to delays in transit or lack of ventilation. Inasmuch as probably ninety per cent of the entire shipments go out in sacks, it is natural that the greater apparent loss is on shipments made in sacks.

4. During the shipping season our experience has been that we were unable to secure other than bag containers in the quantity and at the times needed, and owing to the perishable character of the goods every delay is serious.

5. The weight of a bag is one-twelfth that of a wooden container for a like quantity of onion sets. For instance, a two-bushel bag weighs less than one pound, a one-bushel crate of wood weighs from six to eight pounds.

6. That the cost of a wooden crate as compared with the cost of a bag carrying a like quantity of onion sets is greater by at least 600 per cent.

Therefore, be it

RESOLVED, By the Onion Set Shippers of Cook County, Illinois, that we are unalterably opposed to discontinuing the bag as a container for onion set shipments for the reasons above set forth, but are ready and willing, as we have always been, to ship in wooden crates or barrels or baskets where the purchaser so desires, and we now earnestly urge that you do not order the discontinuance of the use of bags as containers for onion set shipments. We further resolve that the bag as a shipping container should be retained for all shipments and onion sets in bags take the same classification as heretofore.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Unsettled weather conditions during the last week, with terrific rains which have practically held up all outdoor work and which have wrought considerable damage to many growers in this locality, has not been helpful to business. The rains have fallen with such force that many buds have been cut off from the trees and bushes and many of the spring flowers are so badly bruised that the blossoms will be entirely ruined. Unless the weather changes there is likely to be a shortage in the usual outdoor flowers, as peonies, irises, lilacs and other shrub blooms, which are in big demand for Memorial day.

The market continues quiet. The demand is fairly good and plenty of stock arrives daily to take care of all demands. The market is such that it is cleaned up fairly well each day, with little or no waste. Roses of all kinds and grades are in good supply and move fairly well. The heavier supply is in the medium grades and those appear to be the most needed. Excellent stock is seen, in both blossom, stem and foliage. Ophelia, the demand for which is always good, is in good supply. Russell, Ward, Sunburst, Prima Donna, Shawyer, Columbia, Maryland and September Morn are included in the daily shipments. The violet season is over for this year. There is an abundance of excellent sweet peas and they find ready sale. Good stock is seen at $1 per hundred, with shorter stock at 75 cents. The supply of carnations is not too large, but the quality is keeping up well for the lateness of the season. Orchids are in fair supply, but the demand is not large. Good outdoor valley is beginning to arrive and sells well.

Bulbous stock continues in good supply, most of it coming from outdoors. This includes poeticus, Golden Spur, Darwins and Romans. Spanish iris is in fine condition and sells readily. Long spikes of delphiniums and snapdragons are seen daily and sell well, being particularly well adapted for decorative purposes. There is a good assortment of miscellaneous stock, for which the demand continues good. This includes calendulas, wallflowers, myosotis, candytuft, yellow and white daisies, mignonette, stocks, primroses, alyssum, pansies and genistas. The market is slowing up

FRAT-M
FRATERNAL EMBLEMS

What are they?

They are 4-inch reproductions of emblems in the highest-class Gold and Color embossing that can be done.

How does the Florist use them?

They are attached to the ribbon or chiffon of any floral piece.

Why are they of such help to the Florist?

1. The florist can use any color of flowers in the design as the colors demanded by each organization are embossed on the FRAT-M.
2. The florist does not have to worry about keeping a large stock of wire designs on hand; any pillow, spray or wreath, at the price the organization wants to pay, becomes a special fraternal piece by simply attaching a FRAT-M.
3. They do away with the nuisance of lettering, and the keeping of a supply of letters on hand.
4. They get new standing business for the florist who uses them, for any small organization can get its emblem on any priced piece purchased.
5. They are worth many times their cost, if they were used for door badges alone.

What do they cost?

They cost 20c each, or $2.00 a dozen, and if you will give them a trial, they will do for you what they have done for us. The dies to make each emblem average a cost of $75.00, and yet they are worth that to us in OUR retail business alone. A hustling florist will find them a great help. If you will sit down right now and send an order to your supply house, or to us personally, you will find we have told you the truth.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex.; vice-president, J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa.; secretary, Charles Sizemore, Louisiana, Mo.; counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass.; treasurer, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; forty-fourth annual convention, Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 25 to 27, 1919.

A RECENT addition to the equipment of the Newport Nursery, Aquidneck, R. I., is a two-ton automobile delivery truck.

THE California Association of Nurserymen is holding its eighth annual convention this week. A preliminary report will be found in the Pacific Coast Department of this issue.

THE rush of imports of nursery stock has let up, although this week remains during which stock to be quarantined June 1 may still be imported. The Noordam, which arrived from Rotterdam early last week, had no nursery stock, but a few small lots of bulbs.

MANY nurserymen have contributed shrubbery to be planted about the new Red Cross convalescent home for wounded soldiers at Fort Snelling, near St. Paul, Minn. These contributions came from a distance, as well as from nurserymen of St. Paul and Minneapolis.

DOUBTS that the country's post-war adjustment would not progress far enough to increase the nursery stock sales this season are now happily removed. Every indication now points to an activity in both fruits and ornamentals far surpassing anything the trade has ever experienced.

STOCK NOT TRUE TO NAME.

Proposed Act to Protect Buyers.

Representative Cramton, of Michigan, has introduced in the United States Congress a bill which should receive the immediate attention of nurserymen. It has been referred to the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce and is designated "a bill to prevent the shipment and sale in interstate commerce of nursery stock not true to name."

Representative Cramton stated to the representative of The Review that he intended to press the measure and that he invited suggestions from those interested. He said that the measure was especially intended to protect buyers of apple and other fruit trees. In his district in Michigan, he stated, many persons had purchased apple trees represented to be of a certain kind or stock, and that when the trees reached maturity or when they were near maturity and began to bear it developed that they were of a different stock or kind. He pointed out instances where such stock had been sold in a vicinity where the growing was devoted to a certain kind of apple, and when the trees matured they were of a different kind, thus placing that particular grower "out of step" with his fellow producers when it came to selling and shipping. In other cases, he said, stock had been sold which matured earlier or later than represented. Mr. Cramton seems to think that the measure will have direct bearing on other nursery stock than fruit trees.

Full Text of Bill.

The following is the text of the measure:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That it shall be unlawful for any person to ship or deliver for shipment from any state or territory or the District of Columbia, to any other state or territory or the District of Columbia, or to receive in any state or territory or the District of Columbia from any other state or territory or the District of Columbia, and having so received, to deliver in original unbroken package, for pay or otherwise, or offer to deliver to any other person, any nursery stock which does not bear on each tree, shrub or plant, or on the original unbroken package thereof, a label stating the true, accepted and correct name of the variety of such nursery stock, the name of the person who grew the same, and the place where it was grown. The accepted name of a variety shall be the name accepted by the recognized authority for the class of nursery stock in question, such as, in the case of fruit trees, the American Pomological Society. "Nursery stock," for the purposes of this act, shall include all field and greenhouse-grown plants, such as fruit trees, fruit-tree stocks, trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings, grafts, scions, buds, and all other plants or parts of plants for planting or propagation.

Sec. 2. That no person shall so ship or deliver for shipment or so receive and deliver or offer to deliver to another, any nursery stock that is not true to name or that is wrongly or improperly labeled in a manner that will tend to mislead or deceive.

Penalties for Violation.

Sec. 3. That any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this act or who shall forge, counterfeit, alter, deface or destroy any label, certificate or invoice provided for in this act or in the regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture, made and promulgated under the authority of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $200 or by imprisonment not exceeding six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. Upon conviction of any person of violation of any of the provisions of this act, the Secretary of Agriculture shall publish the name of such person.

Sec. 4. That it shall be the duty of each district attorney to whom the Secretary of Agriculture shall report any violation of this act, or to whom any director of experiment station

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

Business continues good, while the supply of stock is short. As it is the time of the year when schools and colleges close, the demand for flowers is great. There has been a heavy demand for funeral flowers and with stock of all kinds scarce it has been a hand-to-mouth proposition with florists. Owing to the backward season, outdoor stock is slow about coming in. Peonies, which are generally in full crop at this time, are arriving slowly and Lilium candidum is also backward. This, however, will have a tendency to prolong the crop, the quality of which was never better.

Prices hold up well. Roses bring from $2 to $6 per dozen; sweet peas $2 and $3 per hundred; orchids $1.50 and $2 each; snapdragons $2 and $3 per dozen. The season for carnations is about over and the few that still remain are small, but owing to the scarcity of stock of all kinds they are still bringing $2 per dozen. Bedding plant season is now at its best and the demand was never better. The stock is unusually good this season, but the supply is inadequate. It is not a matter of finding a customer, but rather that of finding plants with which to fill the orders. Geraniums, coleus and petunias are leaders, but all kinds of plants are in great demand.

rists' Society, May 16, the following officers were elected: President, Addison J. McNutt; first vice-president, Prof. G. M. Bentley; second vice-president, Mrs. A. H. Dailey; secretary-treasurer, Robert E. Mapes. On account of a number of the members being called to the colors early in 1918 and other war-time conditions, which made it impracticable to have meetings, the meetings of the society were temporarily suspended. With the exception of one, all the members have returned and the monthly meetings of the society will be resumed. Arrangements are being made for the annual picnic.

A. H. Dailey recently made some changes in the interior of his store, which add much to its attractiveness. He is cutting some fine peonies, and is doing a land office bedding plant business.

Mrs. Rosa Hall Ryno probably has the best bedding plants in the city and the season is proving a great success for her. She has also been busy with funeral work and her rather limited supply of cut flowers has kept her hustling to find stock enough for her orders.

Charles W. Crouch is cutting some extra choice peonies, but, owing to the backwardness of the season, the main crop is not so early as usual and the cutting of this stock will be extended over a longer period than it has heretofore. This concern has an unusually heavy demand for graduating flowers. Funeral work has also been heavy.

Mrs. Custer has a nice assortment of bedding plants and is doing an excellent business.

C. L. Baum, as usual, is busy. The continuous run of funeral work, the request for graduating bouquets, the calls for seeds and plants and the increasing demand for cut flowers for any and all occasions keep the force on the jump. At the greenhouses the planting of chrysanthemums and carnations is well under way and everything is in excellent shape. Down on the farm the planting of gladioli and dahlias is going on as fast as the weather will permit. Charles L. and Karl P. Baum each recently purchased a Studebaker car.

Addison J. McNutt purchased a new Overland delivery truck lately. He has been doing a good business and is cutting some fine stock. His Mothers' day business figured up practically as good as Easter business.

The Howell Nursery Co. is closing out an eminently successful season. Bruce Howell has just returned from a trip through the southwest, where he has been seeing to the planting of shrubbery on government property.

G. W. Chesney purchased an Overland passenger car recently.

Matt Schilz, representing the Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind., was in Knoxville May 23. R. E. M.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Funeral work continues heavy. There are a good many weddings. Planting out has been delayed by the heavy rains which we have had all this month. Last week it rained every day. Outdoor flowers are plentiful, but show the effects of the rain. Peonies are on the market in large quantities, although the crop will be shorter than usual.

Various Notes.

William Halbrooks, superintendent of Oak Hill cemetery, who had a leg amputated a few weeks ago, is getting along well, despite his advanced age.

O. S. Smith has become a coal dealer. He and another man leased a mine near Newburgh, which is in operation. At present the output is sold at Newburgh and at the mine, but Mr. Smith plans to ship coal into this city.

C. L. Niednagel has a few benches of old roses pruned back and growing again. He is filling benches for the planting of young stock of Columbia and Premier.

The Lockyear Floral Co. has plans about completed for the building of the new houses, which will be begun soon.

Charlotte, N. C.—Tastefully colored folders announce the opening of the new flower store of Louis G. Ratcliffe, 322 South Tryon street.

Mums and Poinsettias

Our list of Chrysanthemums is composed of the best commercial sorts. We will have a fine lot of young plants established in pots, ready to ship at benching time. $40.00 per thousand.

Last year we declined orders for as many Poinsettia Plants as we delivered. We have trebled our propagating stock this year. So come along with your orders. We root them as readily as Coleus. $8.00 per hundred; $75.00 per thousand.

Have you placed your order for our new Carnation, Ruth Baur, for 1920 delivery? Write us, too, for field-grown plants of standard varieties to bench this summer.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Receipts have shortened materially this week and prices have advanced somewhat. Prices quoted for Memorial day are on a par with those quoted for the various holidays this year. The supply will be large, but not so large as hoped for and expected. The demand from out of town is extremely heavy. Roses are in good supply and generally of high quality. The carnation cut is fair but not equal to the demand. Easter lilies are scarce. However, some excellent candidum and a few rubrum lilies may be had. The peony cut amounts to almost nothing as compared with that of other years. There are a few, but they are only a small part of what might be used if the flower were more available. Sweet peas are in fair supply. Snapdragons are fairly plentiful, although the cut of this flower is not so heavy as it has been for some time. Irises are in fair supply. Gladioli sell readily. Stocks are finding a good market. Among other offerings are callas, cape jasmines, a few calendulas, cornflowers and forget-me-nots. Greens are in fair supply. New ferns are finding an excellent market.

Various Notes.

All Cincinnati wholesale florists have arranged to close Sundays, beginning June 1.

Miss Margaret Weiland, of Evanston, Ill., who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Olinger, returned home the middle of the week.

C. E. Critchell made arrangements for an excellent lot of candidum lilies for Memorial day.

The William Murphy Co. expects an excellent lot of peonies for Decoration day.

Recent visitors were Ed. Ruch, Richmond, Ind.; Fred Rupp, Lawrenceburg, Ind.; J. R. Goldman, Middletown, O.; J. W. Rodgers, Dayton, O.; Miss Harriett Van Meter, Springfield, O., and Mrs. F. K. Schweikert, Hinton, W. Va.

The Market.

Business has been changeable, like the weather, the market showing a surplus one day and a scarcity the next. This has its effect on both wholesaler and retailer. The retailer in booking orders ahead is likely to be disappointed by the price he must pay and consequently feels ill-disposed toward the market and the wholesaler.

Roses are of best quality and if not cleared the first day they are sure to be the next. White Killarney is an exception. It is not of good quality and not in oversupply. The staple varieties, such as Ophelia, Columbia, Russell and Hoosier Beauty, are the first to be sold and they bring a good price at this season of the year. Short roses are scarce. American Beauties are good and, compared with other roses as to price and quality, in better demand.

Carnations are plentiful, the best quality naturally being somewhat scarce. Tulips are in great quantity and the price remains steady, some bringing as high as $10 per hundred. A few gladioli reach the market each day, but as yet there is no demand for them. Iris, baby gladioli, calendulas, poeticus, myosotis and mignonette are to be had. Peonies are plentiful, but do not seem to be as strong as other years as to demand. Peas have been poor in quality and high in price.

Various Notes.

The Michigan Garden Club held its annual tulip show at the Hotel Statler May 24. Local florists also had exhibits. It was better than ever. The feature was the exhibit of the new, beautiful red tulip, Pride of Haarlem.

J. Carey, of Mount Clemens, is sending in the best tulips this market has ever seen. They are about three feet long, with nice, large flowers.

Thomas Browne, of Redford, is marketing his large supply of bedding stock. A. J. Stahelin, as usual, is bringing in roses of quality. He also has a fine lot of Darwin tulips.

Robert Klagge, of Mount Clemens, has had his share of the fine tulips, also some fine iris.

Sydney Tinkler, of Mount Clemens, has the best in carnations and sweet peas.

The Pontiac Floral Co. ships in choice roses and especially fine white carnations.

William Dilger, of Breitmeyer's Sons, is a busy man these days, as are all nurserymen and seedsmen.

Albert Vick, of Rochester, Buffalo and Pittsburgh, has now located here with the Pontiac Floral Co. Mr. Vick may grow pot plants and if he does we know they will be in demand in this market.

Detroit expects to be well prepared to receive the peony exhibit. The show will be held at the Detroit board of commerce.

Joseph Streit, captain of the bowling club, has his plans all made for bowling when the S. A. F. meets in Detroit. The bowling will take place in the Recreation building, the entire top floor of which has been engaged.

Portsmouth, O.—A retail flower store has been opened by Miss Mary Stokley. The establishment is located at 1715 Fifth street.

GERANIUMS

We suggested last season about this time that orders be placed for the coming season. Some heeded this suggestion and had Geraniums to sell this spring. Others put off ordering until they were ready for them; therefore they had none to sell. Can you give any reason why they will be more plentiful next season than this? We can give a number of reasons why they will not be.

We are booking orders for the wise ones now at $25.00 per 1000. The price will not be any less, perhaps more.

Greenhouse Heating

Subscribers are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

THE TIME HAS COME.

To Buy Your Coal.

If you have no regard for the condition of your bank account, or if you feel as though your greenhouse will not need coal next winter, you will procrastinate in the matter of your coal buying; but, if you are a long-headed florist and want to operate your establishment as economically as possible and avoid the risk of having your stock freeze when Jack Frost begins his work in earnest, you will buy your coal now—and the word "now" should be capitalized.

The foregoing paragraph is the consensus of the best informed coal men, government experts and economists. Without any intention of being alarmists, apparently, these authorities declare that the prospects for a shortage of coal next winter are nearly a certainty. Some even go so far as to say that there will be a famine and that coal at times will be unobtainable at any price. All agree that the price will be high—much higher than at present.

Dealers Advertising.

Coal dealers in many cities are having published coöperative advertisements calling the attention of the public to the need of early purchasing of coal.

There are a number of reasons for the prospective shortage and possible famine. Prominent among these is that 40,000 foreigners, mostly natives of southern Europe, are expected to return to their Old World homes. These foreigners constitute the major portion of the mine labor of this country and their departure will mean a great loss to the operators. The latter say that other laborers are leaving the mines for other pursuits and that there are practically no new men going into that field of labor. It is estimated that altogether the mining industry will lose 150,000 men through emigration and other causes. Immigration is expected to be at low ebb for a time at least, so little hope is entertained that new labor will come from across the ocean to fill the depleted ranks of the mine workers. Furthermore, there has been less coal produced during the last year than for most years.

Prominent Authority Explains.

Here is an explanation of the situation by J. D. A. Morrow, general secretary of the national organization of coal mine operators and general director of the U. S. Fuel Administration:

"We face one of the most serious shortages of labor in the whole history of mining. Coupled with that, is the decreased output of mines, which during the past calendar year are short 48,-

BUY YOUR BOILER DIRECT

TO THE MAN WHO DOES NOT OWN A KROESCHELL—Possibly you may have wondered why KROESCHELL Boilers are not sold by any of the Greenhouse Building or Construction Companies. If so, we feel it is our duty to state, in fairness and justice to all concerned, that KROESCHELL Boilers are never sold by anyone but KROESCHELL BROS. CO. We do not quote anyone dealing in Greenhouse material or boilers, special resale prices. We have no Agents, and therefore our prices are based on sales direct from Factory to user.

Our stand in this matter has brought out a lot of rivalry; nevertheless, the great efficiency of the KROESCHELL Greenhouse Boiler cannot be disputed, and in spite of the increased competition, the KROESCHELL Boiler is heating more glass than any other make.

Our business (ESTABLISHED 1879) is to build boilers of all types, from the smallest house heater to the largest 600 H. P. Water Tube Steam Boiler. For forty years we have confined our entire efforts to the designing and construction of high-grade boilers, and during this time have served the Florists' Trade of this country and Foreign Countries, to the full satisfaction of every one of our customers.

"The customer's interest first"—is the basis of the KROESCHELL standard. This principle makes the KROESCHELL Policy the most liberal of all in the Greenhouse Boiler business. The great variety of boilers that we make places us in a commanding position. It is the KROESCHELL principle to supply only the type of boiler best suited for the conditions. For this reason we always furnish the most efficient boiler unit in every case.

000,000 tons, in comparison with the preceding calendar year. There are few orders at the mines, not only because of the shutting of war industry plants, but also from the indifference of the consumers, who believe that they can get coal at any time and consequently are not laying in a stock of coal. In ninety days there will be an awakening and a clamor for coal, and the people will not be able to get it. My advice to the public is, to buy coal while there is still an opportunity."

Mr. Morrow's words seem to be a general summing up of the opinions of all coal experts, so heeding his advice would seem to be wisdom on the part of all florists.

A LEAK IN THE FIRE BOX.

One of our hot water boilers, a "camel-back," leaks at the farther end of the fire box, inside. We have tried

Help Save the "White Coal of Industry"

The boiling hot water resulting from condensation in your steam lines is worth money. You have paid for it in terms of coal. It contains valuable heat units. It is the "White Coal of Industry"—it should not be wasted.

And it need not be wasted. The Morehead Back-to-Boiler System will save it for you by returning it to the boiler at temperatures as high as 400 degrees Fahrenheit. It reduces coal consumption an average of 20%. At the same time your steam will be "drier" and more efficient; your production speeded up and profits increased.

Write today for facts and figures on what the Morehead System will do in your plant.

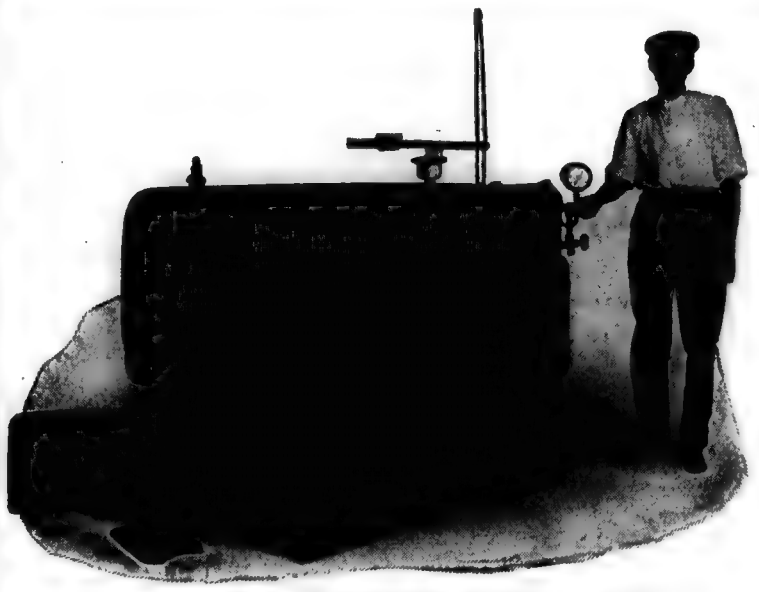
several applications of "Never Leak," but have not succeeded in closing the aperture entirely. Do you think the rusting of the boiler during the summer would answer the purpose, or what would you advise doing to remedy the trouble? A. B.—La.

Whether the leak can be closed by rusting will depend upon the nature and size of the opening. We would suggest painting the crack with a rather thick mixture of litharge and glycerine, working as much of the mixture as possible into the opening. If this does not stop the leak, try muriatic acid in the same way, to hasten the rusting. These remedies should be used after drawing off the water.

GREENHOUSE AND HOTBED.

I have a proposition on greenhouse heating, as indicated in the rough sketch enclosed. I have everything ready to start building, but will not break ground until I get my heating question solved. The greenhouse will be approximately 14x24, seven feet high to the eaves and twelve feet high to the ridge, with four feet of glass in the side walls. A service room, 12x14, will be attached to the east end of the house. The floor level of the service room will be about three feet lower than that of the greenhouse. I expect to heat with hot water, using a boiler with a rating of 700 feet of radiation. Would a boiler of that rating have an objectionable amount of excess capacity? South of the greenhouse there will be a lean-to hotbed, which I also wish to heat. Any suggestion on heating and ventilation will be greatly appreciated. E. J. S.—Ky.

The letter of inquiry gives no idea of the temperature required in the greenhouse, and this information is needed in order to make any definite estimate of the necessary radiation.



For a minimum temperature of 60 degrees at night, we would suggest the use of a 2-inch flow pipe upon each plate, each flow connected with four 2-inch or five 1½-inch returns in a coil underneath. In case bottom heat is desired under the middle bench, one main 2½-inch flow pipe may be used. With this supply three coils, each containing four 1½-inch pipes, under the benches. Another way would be to use one 2-inch flow upon each plate and another a foot or two below the ridge. With this arrangement only three 1½-inch returns would be required in each of the three coils. All flow pipes, as well as the returns, should have a fall of about one inch in ten feet.

To supply heat to the hotbed, we would run a 2-inch flow pipe on the wall next to the greenhouse and a 2-inch return on the front wall. This will be possible if the return is above the top of the heater. Otherwise we would run a 2-inch return on each wall of the hotbed and connect them with one of the flow pipes in the greenhouse, and in that case we would use the last arrangement suggested for piping the greenhouse.

For ventilating purposes we would place a row of sashes on the side of the roof away from the prevailing winds, with about three sashes extending from the sill to the plate, and containing two rows of glass, in each side wall of the house.

A boiler rated for 250 square feet of hot water radiation will be amply sufficient to heat the greenhouse and hotbed to 60 degrees. Unless the glass area is to be at least doubled within two years, we would advise getting a smaller boiler than the one mentioned in the inquiry.

Dayton, O.—H. J. Keller has taken over the business of L. H. Horlacher.

The Marmarose Landscape Co. has resumed operations, following an idleness of eighteen months on account of the war. The manager of the company, Joseph R. The Market.

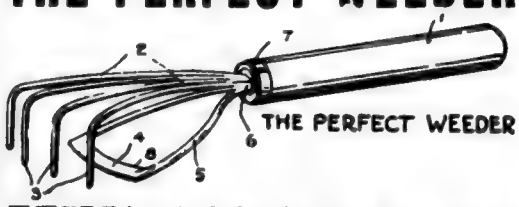
Almost incessant rain during the first part of last week had a bad effect upon outdoor flowers and many arriving in the market were of poor quality. A large quantity of funeral work made trade more flourishing Thursday. There was also considerable decorative work for social affairs and moderate-sized weddings. May day processions in various churches Sunday, May 25, called for a large quantity of smilax and white flowers for wreaths and boutonnieres. A benefit performance for the soldiers' Community House was given at one of the theaters. Many thousands of flowers were sold, which were all donated by local florists.

Carnations were slightly on the short side and some inferior stock arrived on the market. The wholesale price was 8 cents. Roses were unimpeachable in quality and of large quantity. There was an increase noted in the supply of callas. Greenhouse-grown gladioli are in splendid quality and sell readily at high prices. Outdoor iris meets with a good call and lily of the valley also sells well. Shrubbery, such as deutzia, spiræa, snowballs, etc., is used to good advantage in the flower stores. Double poeticus is meeting with popular favor at 50 cents per dozen. Locally grown peonies are on the market and bring $2 per dozen and up. Cattleyas are in short supply. Sweet peas are selling well. There is a shortage of snapdragons at present.

The bedding plant season has started with a vim since the advent of warm weather. Geraniums are considerably higher than last year, but the public, as a rule, is paying without question. All kinds of foliage plants are on sale and going fast for Decoration day. Home-grown lilacs appeared here last week. Blooming plants offered at present include hydrangeas, calceolarias, begonias, Shasta daisy plants and yellow daisies. Hanging baskets with vines and other plants are having a better call this year than ever. Boston ferns are also selling well.

Various Notes.



Miss Margaret Vesey, who will leave within a week or two for France to do Y. M. C. A. work, was given a bon voyage dinner May 24.

The Market.

Continued cold weather has kept production down to demand, with a slight shortage in carnations. At this time of the year stock is expected to be plentiful. At least it has been abundant for many years, so the ready sale that stock is finding this year is establishing a new precedent in market conditions. Of all the crops grown in this city, carnations have brought the best returns. Their price has been exceptionally good, averaging far better than any other year. Roses have not fared so well. Their prices have been good, but they have not established a decided increase in proportion to carnations.

Memorial Day.

The stores are endeavoring to make this day an important factor in their year's business. In the past years those who dealt in vases, veranda boxes and filled pots for the cemeteries made preparation and let business take its natural course, and so progress has been extremely slow. The advertising bug had stung other trades but ours up to the last year. It appears now that the majority see that if much business is expected they must let the public know that they are in business; and that instead of bringing a geranium to the graves it is proper to take a beautiful wreath or a gorgeous bouquet. As stock has averaged a good price throughout the entire year, it will be an easy matter to sell a $5 bunch for Memorial day.

The market is now experiencing the severest shortage in Boston ferns ever known. F. P. A.

ROCHESTER NOTES.

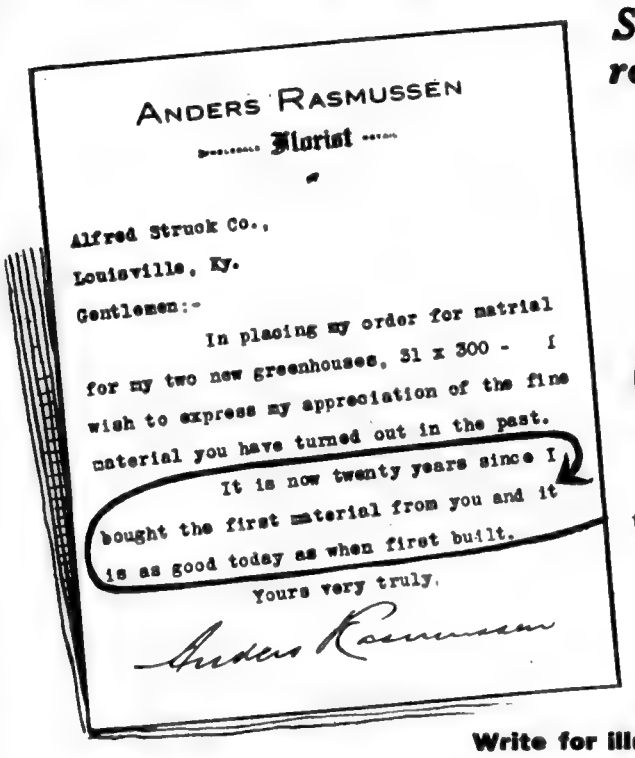
Various Notes.

Preliminary steps in the formation of a rose society in this city were taken May 23, when Rev. Edmund Mills, president of the Syracuse Rose Club, made an address on rose gardens and their culture. Nearly 100 persons, mostly amateurs, were present. A meeting will be called in the near future, when officers will be elected and the details of the organization completed.

Calvin C. Laney, superintendent of parks, has announced that Lilac day, which was to have been held on Sunday, May 25, has been postponed to Sunday, June 1, on account of the cold and rainy weather which has prevented them from coming into blossom.

Visitors last week included J. F. Ward, of Mumford, N. Y.; F. W. Jones, of the Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, and the representative of A. Leipzig, Inc., New York city.

The Maurer-Haap Co. reports big business in bedding and nursery stock this season. There are some well developed shrubs on exhibition at the warehouse.



We are glad to learn that John Dunbar, assistant superintendent of parks, is making good recovery from the two operations he recently submitted to. Previous to the operations he was confined to his home with Spanish influenza and then pneumonia. It has been a strenuous pull for Mr. Dunbar for several months, but his physician is most hopeful for a complete recovery. He is still confined to his home, but is able to get downstairs each day.

George M. Keller is disposing of a large quantity of bedding stock, which is in excellent condition. Most of his geraniums are in good bloom.

Edwin P. Wilson was in charge of the decorations at the memorial services held in the convention hall May 25, and the community wreath was contributed to by nearly 300 small girls. Each little girl carefully placed a flower in the mammoth wreath in honor of those who so gallantly gave up their lives in the world war. Following the service, the wreath was hoisted up and suspended above the names of the Rochester heroes on the temporary memorial recently built over the main entrance to the hall. Many thousands of people were present.

George Pringle, formerly of Salter Bros., has recently returned from St. Petersburg, Fla., where he spent the last six months. He has thoroughly gotten over his severe sickness and is looking the picture of health. H. J. H.

The Last Minute

IS NOT THE TIME TO ORDER CEMENT

ORDER NOW

When cement is needed, it is needed at once. Delay may mean loss of time, money and temper.

WHY RUN THE RISK?

Order your Federal Greenhouse Cement now, so that there will be no delay when you are ready to use it. Don't wait until the last minute, or depend on prompt deliveries by the railroad companies.

In Federal Greenhouse Cements you will find the acme of perfection—you will wonder how you ever got along with the inferior cements.

We make the following Black Greenhouse Cements:

Federal Greenhouse Cement No. 1.—Thick paste consistency, especially adapted for use on metal, slate, composition and other roofs, and for effecting general repairs. Some florists use this consistency for glazing, although it is rather hard to apply, because it works stiff. It can be handled fairly well, however, in the greenhouse gun.

Federal Greenhouse Cement No. 2, or Regular.—A medium thick consistency. We consider this the ideal consistency for glazing work, not too thick nor too thin. Can be used in greenhouse gun, putty bulb, or other instruments. Those who prefer a slightly thinner consistency can thin with Federal Special Greenhouse Thinner.

Federal Greenhouse Cement No. 3.—Semi-liquid consistency, especially adapted for lining gutters, etc. Last year we sent out this consistency for glazing work in general, and many florists prefer it. It of course works very easy in the putty bulb. We believe it is a little too thin for glazing, and consider No. 2 better.

Federal Greenhouse Cement No. 4.—Made on a different base, from the products of wood distillation. This cement is similar—in fact identical with certain competing brands of greenhouse cement on the market. Some florists prefer this base. We do not consider it nearly as permanent as No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3.

Federal Greenhouse Cement No. 5 and No. 6.—Respectively paste and semi-liquid, made on a gilsonite base. Very quick setting and efficient; preferred by carnation and rose growers, but not quite as good for general work as No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3.

Federal Greenhouse Thinner, in 10, 5 and 1-gallon cans, is an excellent article to keep on hand to restore cement not used at once, to just the consistency that you like, in case the cement thickens somewhat.

ROOTED CUTTINGS.

Wietor Bros., Chicago, are famous as suppliers of Chrysanthemum cuttings. For many years the largest growers of cut mums for the Chicago market, their stock includes only varieties of proved commercial value. For many years hundreds of other florists have each season obtained their young stock from Wietor's and never been disappointed. We have an immense stock, but it is wise to order early.

A Glazing Putty of Real Value

In all our experience and investigation we had never found a preparation for bulbing over the outside of a greenhouse that was quite satisfactory, until we ran across PERMANITE. This was about four years ago. At that time we set about investigating the merits of PERMANITE and proceeded to watch the results of its application to greenhouse roofs.

Last year we were entirely convinced of its high quality and durability, and accepted the western agency for the sale of these goods.

We applied PERMANITE to hundreds of greenhouse roofs, over almost every part of the United States.

The results obtained were highly satisfactory indeed. Glass roofs of all kinds, both old and new, were made water-tight and air-tight, saving thousands of plants from being spoiled by water dripping on them and saving many hundreds of tons of coal by making the roofs proof against the wind and storms of winter.

We give PERMANITE our unqualified endorsement and recommend it highly for all kinds of glazing.

We have a very large stock on hand in our warehouse and can ship immediately.

Permanite

Another Pennsylvania Florist writes:—

That Permanite has "held fast" for over three years and has the appearance of holding for many more years. Mr. Clinger, of the Fair View Greenhouses, at Milton, Pa., wrote the letter —another proof that you can't go wrong with Permanite.

"We have used your Permanite on our entire range and would never think of going back to the use of putty.

"Permanite has 'held fast' for over three years, sheds the water better and certainly is DURABLE; in addition it stays put wherever used, whether it is old or new work. We also used the Permanite on a cement tank to close up the pores and it certainly did the work in great shape. There are so many different ways in which we have used your material that we certainly would't want to be without Permanite."

Permanite, that ever-elastic glazing cement, can be used for glazing, re-glazing or repair work of any kind; it is as good for one purpose as it is for another. On new work Permanite does away with the usual bedding—the Permanite on top the glass making an absolutely air and water-tight joint; on old work Permanite is far more economical than putty—doing the work with less material and in less than half the time—and when it comes to mending broken glass, repairs of any kind, etc., Permanite will do the work quickly, efficiently and economically.

Ever-elastic and lasting—guaranteed to outlast putty three to four times—Permanite is the ONE SURE WAY toward better, more economical and dependable glazing; write for our latest four-page folder—it will show you how—and why!

CYPRESS FOR STAKES AND CYPRESS FOR LABELS

A tree or plant Label is a small matter, just a thin strip of wood with notches near one end. A whole pocketful may be bought with a penny or two, yet the cost of them counts in the year's expenditures. And there's no need in buying new each year, unless you really prefer to spend your money. Get them of Cypress and they will last. So with stakes—they are made of Cypress and cost little more than those made of woods that begin to rot as soon as they are placed in the soil. Every dollar you save in these small matters stays in the bank to help swell your balance.

JUST ONE TESTIMONIAL

C. E. Robbins, 4 Vanden Bosch Avenue, Auburn, N. Y., writes: "My attention was first drawn to Cypress several years ago by using some of it for dahlia stakes, along with some pine, etc., and after the pine had rotted away the Cypress showed no sign of decay. Since then I have used it for boats and canoes, and it has been very satisfactory." This is a small matter, but it is worth while to listen to the experience of others.

INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS—PAGES TWO AND THREE

Taking as a basis the stress and strain of wind and snow, we built our main truss to stand strains and stresses largely in excess of its needs. To make sure it would stand that excess, the roof was loaded down with a dead weight of iron bars. Not till then did we decide to use that truss in our Standard Iron Frame Construction.

So scientifically framed is that part of our house included between the two columns, that it would stand staunch and firm entirely independent of the side posts. The part from the side posts to the column is really a lean-to. This being so, the needlessness of a post heavier than we use is apparent.

Counsel Counts

Every day, at a certain time, in the offices of the big business concerns of the country, the heads of the company gather in a room and counsel together.

When they decide to do things, it is not the decision of one man; but the multiplied decisions of all the experience and ability of the men present.

At such gatherings, possible mistakes are seen and prevented.
They can tell pretty close what will happen, before it has happened.
Counsel Counts.

It is from such concerns that you are today getting the finest of service and the best value for your money, whether it is a suit of clothes, an automobile or a greenhouse.
Counsel Counts.

That is exactly why all our salesmen and department heads get together at regular stated times and thresh things out.

It may be the question of some construction problem, in the house you intend buying from us.
Or it may be your heating that has not proven quite satisfactory.
Whatever it is, it is threshed out right then and there, to the last point.

When you get the decision, it will not be one man's idea; it will be the majority conclusion of all those men.
Counsel Counts.

The Annual

Roll Call

of WHITE TRUCK FLEETS

ACCORDING to its annual custom, The White Company is now publishing its Roll Call of fleet installations (ten trucks or more) in national magazines and metropolitan newspapers.

Year after year this Roll Call grows. It is something more than a list of well-known concerns owning ten or more White Trucks. It represents a yearly progress in added trucks per owner—the most extensive growth of individual fleets ever published by a truck maker.

The rate of growth of the installations which comprise ten trucks or more is shown in the following summary for each year:

1911..194	1913..1001	1915..2601	1917 .7436

TODAY. 9227

There are now 2,774 White fleets in active service, totaling 33,139 trucks, exclusive of all single truck installations.

A copy of the 1919 Roll Call will be sent to anyone interested upon request

The Two Most Important Factors in the Ribbon Industry are

Raw Silk and Skilled Labor

To those of you who have not yet taken our advice and placed your Fall Orders with us for RIBBONS and CHIFFONS, we want to explain why we recommended buying now to save you money (see last week's ad).

RAW SILK (the basic material in ALL ribbons) is continually advancing in price, and SCARCE considering the demand, which has never been so great. IT IS FREELY PREDICTED IN SILK CIRCLES that RAW SILK will touch higher figures in the next six months.

SKILLED LABOR is demanding and obtaining higher wages and shorter hours all the time, continually raising the labor cost in production.

Ribbons and Chiffons of "KEYSTONE QUALITY" are an exceptional buy at today's prices

Many florists who have recently been conducted through our establishment were amazed at the enormous stock we carry and the facilities we have for distribution.

Advantageous early purchases of the raw material enable us to undersell the market in many instances.

Our modern factory in Paterson is continually weaving the latest creations for Florists, and in New York four great floors are loaded with merchandise ready for distribution.

We advise immediate purchases for Fall requirements in anticipation of higher prices and unexampled prosperity in the Floral trade.

GROWING PALMS FROM SEEDS

The famous Quarantine No. 37 has been in operation, technically, since June 1. Among the plants excluded by the new restrictions are palms. The war-time difficulties of importation suggested the desirability of growing more seedling palms in America. Now the desirability has become a necessity.

THE production of palms from seed is an interesting process, but is frequently long-drawn-out, and, from the varying quality and condition of the seeds when received from their native habitats, is not invariably a highly profitable department of the business. The kentias are the most prominent among the florists' palms, owing to their comparative hardiness and owing, also, to the fact that they show character when quite small and are therefore useful in all sizes.

Kentia seeds come from Lord Howe's island, in the South Pacific, and are consequently many weeks in transit, the steamer service being irregular. Therefore, unless the seeds are carefully packed, there is always the possibility that they may heat in the cases and thus suffer serious injury.

Sowing Kentia Seeds.

Kentia seeds usually arrive in this country in the late summer or in the autumn and are sown in various ways, according to the quantities the grower may have to handle. Growers having large lots stratify them in benches, or sometimes even under the benches, using a light and open soil, such as peat or sandy loam, for the germinating medium. If the seeds are sown on a bench, about two inches of soil are first put in; then the seeds are sown as thickly as they will go in a single layer, are covered with soil to the depth of one inch and are well watered in.

Small lots of kentia seeds may be sown in trays, or in pans if the latter are at hand, using the same soil as already noted and sowing in the same manner, afterwards keeping the soil moist at all times and maintaining a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees at least. These seeds germinate quite irregularly and it is best to save and replant any that do not come up with the first growth. Some kentia seeds have been known to come up after a period of three or four years, while some come through in two months.

When the kentia seedlings have expanded the first leaf, it is time to pot them off into 2-inch or 2¼-inch pots. They should then be placed in a shaded house, with a temperature of not less than 60 degrees, and should be regularly syringed in bright weather in order to keep down the insects.

Cocos Slow in Early Stages.

Seeds of the dwarf coconut, Cocos Weddelliana, are usually on the market in the early spring, and these, in common with all such seeds, should be sown immediately after their arrival. The cocos is a rather slow proposition from the seeds, and it is not uncommon for six to ten months to elapse from the time the seeds are sown until the seedlings are ready for 2-inch pots. Some growers sow their cocos seeds in pans, but the long and brittle roots of this palm are likely to suffer in potting, so it seems preferable to sow two or three seeds together in a 2-inch pot, thus training the roots to curl around in the pot in readiness for potting.

This palm is slow in the early stages and requires a fairly high temperature for success. It also needs careful watering, for the plants do not make an extensive system of root-fibers in their juvenile stages.

Cocos seeds vary in size considerably. Some are about the size of a large pea, while others may be found in the same lot that are over half an inch in diameter. While there is but little difference between the large and the small seeds in the percentage of germination, yet the larger seeds generally produce the stronger plants.

Seeds of Areca lutescens usually arrive from South America in the early summer and are sown in either pots or pans in light soil.

When given sufficient heat and moisture, areca seeds will germinate in six or eight weeks, provided they are fresh and in good condition when received. These seeds soon suffer from dryness when exposed to the air, and after the germ becomes shrunken they often fail to germinate.

Arecas Love Heat.

Some growers sow three or four Areca lutescens seeds in a small pot and then pot off the whole of the seedlings together, instead of separating them and potting singly. This method is followed on account of the fact that this palm is more generally grown in the form of compound plants than as solitary specimens. But, whatever method of handling the plants is adopted, it is well to remember that this palm is a heat-loving subject. The seeds should be placed in a shaded greenhouse where a night temperature of 70 degrees is ordinary, and the soil in which they are sown should at all times be kept moist.

Latania borbonica is the commonest of the fan-leaved palms that are used commercially. Seeds of this species are received from various parts of the world and usually arrive in good condition. These seeds germinate quickly. They are sown in any light soil, in pots, pans or trays, and are covered with soil to the depth of half an inch. The seedlings, as their roots are easily broken, require careful potting, but when placed in a warm and shaded house they soon become established, if looked after carefully. Being reasonably rapid growers, the plants soon reach a salable size.

Livistona and Phœnix.

Livistona rotundifolia has been grown in quantity for some years, but the seed supply seems somewhat uncertain and the seeds vary in percentage of germination. However, if the seeds are received in good condition and are sown according to the same methods as those suggested for arecas, there is a reasonable prospect of success, although it must be borne in mind that the livistona requires some attention in order to attain the perfection of shape and size that is sometimes seen.

Most kinds of phœnix come readily from seeds, but practically all of the species that are found in commercial collections are somewhat slow growers during the first year or two from the seed, and hence can scarcely be considered easy-money propositions, but they are undoubtedly ornamental and useful to the decorator and certainly should form part of the stock of a progressive grower.

By way of summary, it may be said that fresh seeds, prompt sowing, careful handling, sufficient heat and moisture, and precautionary measures against insects on the young plants, are among the high lights on the subject of growing palms from seeds. It is hoped that the suggestions here offered may serve to encourage some beginner in this line of work.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

PAGEANTS AND FLORISTS.

Dollars for Decorators.

Among the things that are coming back are the flower pageants, put in eclipse by the world war. They have started again and they mean a lot to florists.

Before the war put an end to all such nonessential demonstrations, half the towns in America had their annual parades of floats, most of which included some form of flower decorations, while some were exclusively flower parades. These were of all degrees of ostentation, from the famous Pasadena pageant and the wheeled-chair parade at Atlantic City, which we all have seen pictured in the movies, to the Fourth of July procession of dolled up "Lizzies" at Pumpkin Center. And they are coming back. The first one reported was at Memphis the other day, a feature of a centennial celebration. Florists, who are skilled decorators, should welcome the return.

Our Services in Request.

At Pumpkin Center the vehicles all may be of amateur preparation, but in the cities there always is someone, usually several somebodies, shrewd enough to see that the work of the professional decorator is almost certain to eclipse the best the novices can do. That means a call for the florist, even though no natural flowers are used.

Usually the florist's work wins whatever prizes are offered, justifying the professional fee, so that it is only a matter of comment when several florists are employed by as many contenders. But, aside from the fee, there is valuable publicity for the florist who gets a good job to the attention of a large part of the people of his community.

How It Worked at Memphis.

To stimulate interest in the Memphis centennial pageant May 20 some good prizes were offered, a flower bowl valued at $500 for first and a large silver vase worth $350 for second. The result was that the Idlewild Greenhouses received commissions to decorate two automobiles and won for its customers the two premier prizes. To quote W. H. Englehart, vice-president and manager, "We have received a lot of advertising out of this."

The "floral" parades are quite likely not to call for the use of many natural flowers, but they are just as much within the florists' province for all that. The success lies as much in the idea for the decoration as in its execution and, if natural flowers are not used, natural greens usually are and the rest of the stock comes from a dealer in florists' supplies. As Mr. Englehart said, "We used the finest ribbons on these cars, along with the other material, and they sure did show up wonderfully well."

As this class of business develops, the florists' only real competitors will be the decorators for the department stores, most of whom use a distinctly inferior class of material in their work.

AN ATTRACTIVE GOTHAM SHOP.

One of the neatest and most attractive flower stores on upper Madison avenue, New York city, is that of A. Meyer. As will be seen by the accompanying illustrations, Mr. Meyer has an exceptionally modern home for his business, although the building it occupies is far from being a new one. He is one of the progressive New Yorkers who have turned the homes of the wealthy into business establishments on the lower floors and apartments on the upper, thus cutting considerably the rent in the most desirable neighborhoods.

One of the great attractions of the store, 1062 Madison avenue, is the show window. It is equipped with a system of ventilation which keeps moisture from the windows and the stock in good condition. Mirrors are so arranged that the window has the appearance of being much more extensive. It can be seen for some distance by pedestrians. The floor of the store is of tile, sloping toward the center, so that it is possible to spray the plants, which are arranged along the sides, without much labor afterward.

Mr. Meyer occupies the first three floors of the building. One of them is devoted exclusively to artistic pottery.

One of the illustrations shows the interior of the store, with Mr. Meyer seated, and the other the attractive front and the window with its display of fall flowers.

A BOOST IN BALTIMORE.

Baltimore's new mayor is a gentleman and a scholar; we owe him a good turn when the time comes because he certainly gave the trade a big boost when he issued a proclamation, printed conspicuously in the Batimore newspapers May 29, as follows:

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS," URGES MAYOR BROENING, CALLING UPON THE PEOPLE OF THE CITY TO DECORATE LIBERALLY FOR RETURNING HEROES.

Mayor's Office, Baltimore, Md., May 28.

To the People of Baltimore:

To the end that the home-coming troops may have every physical evidence of the joy in the hearts of Baltimoreans over their safe return, I call on everybody along the route of the parade on Saturday, May 31, as well as throughout the city generally, to decorate liberally.

"Say It with Flowers" is particularly applicable to the present home-coming, and it would be a splendid idea if potted plants and flowers are placed in front of dwellings, as expressing the love we bear our heroes, who translated patriotism into service, and as honoring the memory of those brave boys who gave the last full measure of devotion.

Every home in Baltimore should fly a flag and enter into the spirit of this great occasion.

William F. Broening,
Mayor of Baltimore.

SOME BUSY TRUCKS.

The White Co., of Cleveland, manufacturer of automobiles, recently has published in metropolitan newspapers a list of White trucks which have piled up mileage exceeding 100,000 each. In it there are the names of several florists. The delivery trucks of Malandre Bros., New York, and M. Weiland, Evanston, Ill., are recorded as having run over 100,000 miles. That of A. Graham & Son, Cleveland, is in the group of those which have made over 150,000 miles, while the cars of Kirchner's, Cleveland, and Baum's House of Flowers, Knoxville, Tenn., have made from 200,000 to 250,000 miles on florists' business errands. As they are still going, they seem to justify the statement that the ultimate mileage of White trucks has never been measured.

Incidentally it may be of interest that it was a letter and photograph sent The Review by Mr. Baum which first attracted the attention of the White Co. to this trade as one of its good fields and that pictures of all the florists' cars mentioned in these large general newspaper advertisements have appeared in the company's pages in The Review during the last five or six years.

THAT HARDY BEGONIA.

The "hardy begonia" referred to by H. W. Peterson, in The Review for May 29, was quite common years ago, although seldom, I think, offered by the trade. I think its name is Begonia Evansiana and it was hardy in the 70's in Germantown, where I remember it on Tulpehocken street, near where our dear old friend, Thomas Meehan, used to live; John Burton, John Savage and Edwin Lonsdale, too.

I have had it here in the west, but never tried leaving it out in winter, but left it in the pot in the cellar, where it remained dormant, after falling to pieces. It is a really desirable plant for the home collection and I would like to get it again. It used to be called locally Beefsteak begonia, but I guess several kinds have been called by that name. Geo. S. Woodruff.

I notice an inquiry in The Review of May 29 entitled "A Hardy Begonia" and would like to say that, according to the description, the plant is Begonia discolor, or B. Evansiana, a native of China and Japan, a very old species. Around Cincinnati it is seen quite frequently in small gardens. It thrives best on the east or north side of a house. It is quite hardy and, once planted in the border, is always with you. For description see Bailey's Cyclopedia of Horticulture, volume 1, page 474. J. A. Peterson.

BRIEF ANSWERS.

K. F. Co., Minn.—See page 20 issue for May 15.

C. M. G., Ill.—It depends on the artistic taste and decorative abilities of the florist.

H. J. B., Ia.—The sand will do no harm. Heavy soils can be lightened by using horse manure in composting.

F. B. R., Md.—Don't tie up the peony plants if you want best results. The trouble with pansies is not due to the seeds, unless you are saving them yourself. Use fresh soil.

GROWING ROOTED CUTTINGS.

I wish to get such information as will be needed to enable me to go into the rooted cutting business and carry it on successfully. Please state how many stock plants will be required in order to be able to take off 2,000 cuttings of each variety per week, from November 1 to February 28, if the varieties are as follows: Ageratums, double alyssums, begonias, daisies, coleuses, heliotropes, fuchsias, lantanas and pelargoniums.

I have not been able to get stocky plants from cuttings of Begonia luminosa and Erfordii, such as I get from cuttings of B. Chatelaine. The luminosa and Erfordii come blind or spindling after I top them. How can I induce a bushy growth? Perhaps these two varieties are more bushy when grown from seed. When should the seed be sown to have plants ready for 2-inch pots by December 1? Will plants produce more cuttings if shifted on into pots or if planted 10x10 inches apart in a bench? I shall be thankful for any information concerning this line of business, as there is no one in this vicinity who grows rooted cuttings. B. J. P.—Pa.

The inquirer states that he wishes to take 2,000 cuttings each week, from November 1 to February 28, a period of about seventeen weeks. In other words, he proposes to take 34,000 cuttings of nine different varieties of plants, or over 230,000 cuttings for the four midwinter months. That would constitute a good-sized rooted cutting business in itself, requiring a good-sized place and a specialist to operate it. The number of plants required would depend greatly on the grower and his system of culture. One who is used to the business of producing rooted cuttings in large quantities knows quite well the importance of giving his stock plants the best of culture in every respect, so as to enable them to produce cuttings to their limit.

In making an estimate in answer to the question, I would divide the plants mentioned into two classes, placing in one class the ageratums, double alyssums, begonias and coleuses and figuring that in these each stock plant would produce an average of twenty-five rooted cuttings for the four months mentioned. In the other class, which would include sown in any light soil, in pots, pans or trays, and are covered with soil to the depth of half an inch. The seedlings, as their roots are easily broken, require careful potting, but when placed in a warm and shaded house they soon become established, if looked after carefully. Being reasonably rapid growers, the plants soon reach a salable size.

Livistona and Phœnix.

Livistona rotundifolia has been grown in quantity for some years, but the seed supply seems somewhat uncertain and the seeds vary in percentage of germination. However, if the seeds are received in good condition and are sown according to the same methods as those suggested for arecas, there is a reasonable prospect of success, although it must be borne in mind that the livistona requires some attention in order to attain the perfection of shape and size that is sometimes seen.

Most kinds of phœnix come readily from seeds, but practically all of the species that are found in commercial collections are somewhat slow growers during the first year or two from the seed, and hence can scarcely be considered easy-money propositions, but they are undoubtedly ornamental and useful to the decorator and certainly should form part of the stock of a progressive grower.

By way of summary, it may be said that fresh seeds, prompt sowing, careful handling, sufficient heat and moisture, and precautionary measures against insects on the young plants, are among the high lights on the subject of growing palms from seeds. It is hoped that the suggestions here offered may serve to encourage some beginner in this line of work.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

PAGEANTS AND FLORISTS.

Dollars for Decorators.

Among the things that are coming back are the flower pageants, put in eclipse by the world war. They have started again and they mean a lot to florists.

Before the war put an end to all such nonessential demonstrations, half the towns in America had their annual parades of floats, most of which included some form of flower decorations, while some were exclusively flower parades. These were of all degrees of ostentation, from the famous Pasadena pageant and the wheeled-chair parade at Atlantic City, which we all have seen pictured in the movies, to the Fourth of July procession of dolled up "Lizzies" at Pumpkin Center. And they are coming back. The first one reported was at Memphis the other day, a feature of a centennial celebration. Florists, who are skilled decorators, should welcome the return.

Our Services in Request.

At Pumpkin Center the vehicles all may be of amateur preparation, but in the cities there always is someone, usually several somebodies, shrewd enough to see that the work of the professional decorator is almost certain to eclipse the best the novices can do. That means a call for the florist, even though no natural flowers are used.

Usually the florist's work wins whatever prizes are offered, justifying the professional fee, so that it is only a matter of comment when several florists are employed by as many contenders. But, aside from the fee, there is valuable publicity for the florist who gets a good job to the attention of a large part of the people of his community.

How It Worked at Memphis.

To stimulate interest in the Memphis centennial pageant May 20 some good prizes were offered, a flower bowl valued at $500 for first and a large silver vase worth $350 for second. The result was that the Idlewild Greenhouses received commissions to decorate two automobiles and won for its customers the two premier prizes. To quote W. H. Englehart, vice-president and manager, "We have received a lot of advertising out of this."

The "floral" parades are quite likely not to call for the use of many natural flowers, but they are just as much within the florists' province for all that. The success lies as much in the idea for the decoration as in its execution and, if natural flowers are not used, natural greens usually are and the rest of the stock comes from a dealer in florists' supplies. As Mr. Englehart said, "We used the finest ribbons on these cars, along with the other material, and they sure did show up wonderfully well."

As this class of business develops, the florists' only real competitors will be the decorators for the department stores, most of whom use a distinctly inferior class of material in their work.

AN ATTRACTIVE GOTHAM SHOP.

One of the neatest and most attractive flower stores on upper Madison avenue, New York city, is that of A. Meyer. As will be seen by the accompanying illustrations, Mr. Meyer has an exceptionally modern home for his business, although the building it occupies is far from being a new one. He is one of the progressive New Yorkers who have turned the homes of the wealthy into business establishments on the lower floors and apartments on the upper, thus cutting considerably the rent in the most desirable neighborhoods.

One of the great attractions of the store, 1062 Madison avenue, is the show window. It is equipped with a system of ventilation which keeps moisture from the windows and the stock in good condition. Mirrors are so arranged that the window has the appearance of being much more extensive. It can be seen for some distance by pedestrians. The floor of the store is of tile, sloping toward the center, so that it is possible to spray the plants, which are arranged along the sides, without much labor afterward.

Mr. Meyer occupies the first three floors of the building. One of them is devoted exclusively to artistic pottery.

One of the illustrations shows the interior of the store, with Mr. Meyer seated, and the other the attractive front and the window with its display of fall flowers.

In the other class, which would include the daisies, fuchsias, heliotropes, lantanas and pelargoniums, I would allow twelve to twenty cuttings from each stock plant. By figuring on that basis, the number of stock plants required can be determined.

It is easier to keep the stock plants in active growing condition when they are grown in benches than when they are pot-grown. All of the flowering begonias of the gracilis or luminosa varieties make better plants when grown from seed than when grown from cuttings. The seed is slow to germinate and produce plants during cold, dark weather, and I would not delay the sowing of it beyond September 15 if strong 2-inch plants are wanted by December 1. M. P.

BADLY INFESTED WITH MIDGE.

I am sending, under separate cover, a sample of chrysanthemum plants of late propagation. The stock was thrifty and clean-looking and was rooted in a cool temperature. What is the trouble? Is it midge? We had no such annoyance last year. Last summer we bought some stock that proved to be of poor quality, but it did not show any symptoms of the present trouble.

J. R. J.—O.

The chrysanthemum plants are badly infested with the chrysanthemum midge. Indeed, if the plants sent for examination are a fair sample of the stock on hand, I would advise the inquirer not to plant them under any consideration, but to procure clean plants elsewhere. The midge has so firm a control of the plants submitted that it would be useless to try to clean them up. M. P.

OUTDOOR CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

I have a piece of sod land which was plowed last fall and which I now wish to plant to outdoor chrysanthemums and asters for the market. Please give me the names of chrysanthemums suitable for my purpose. How close together should the plants be placed? I have a Skinner irrigation system for installation on the land. I. H. J.—W. Va.

A list of chrysanthemums which would do well outdoors includes the following: Smith's Advance, October Frost, October Queen and Oconto, white; Belle Mauve, Unaka, Pacific Supreme and Charles Jolly, pink; Yellow Advance, Cranfordia, Chrysolora and Vivian Cook, yellow; Firelight, Mrs. Harrison Craig, Nellie Blake and Bronze Unaka, bronze.

The rows should be about three feet apart, in order to give the cultivator room to work between them, and allow the plants to grow. The Skinner irrigation system will work splendidly in this place. C. H. T.

THE MIDGE AGAIN.

I am sending you a sample of my chrysanthemum plants. Will you please tell me how to get rid of this disease? A spot appears on a leaf, and when the leaf is split open a small worm is found. Would like to hear of a remedy.

J. A. M.—Ill.

The chrysanthemum plant submitted was infested with the midge, a pest which has been blighting mum crops and rapidly spreading the last three years in this country.

As before stated in these columns, the only means of exterminating this insect is fumigation with tobacco dust for five or six weeks, about every second night. This is an expensive remedy, but absolutely the only way to get rid of midge. If J. A. M. does not have a large stock of mums, it would be cheaper to burn his entire lot of plants and fumigate the house, then start in with new, clean stock and watch all future stock that he purchases, to see that it is not affected, before placing it in the house with his other stock. C. H. T.

TRUE TO TYPE FROM SEED.

I have about 100 plants of fringed single petunias, which I selected from a stock of 2,000 plants. I should like to grow my own seed from these selected plants, if there is a good prospect that the resultant flowers will be fringed. Will seed saved from deeply fringed pink petunias yield pink fringed flowers? Also, can I save my own pansy seed from the plants now seeding and expect good results? H. A. C.—Ala.

Unless there are other petunias near enough so that bees will carry pollen from them to the fringed flowers, a majority of the seeds should produce plants with fringed flowers, but the only sure way to keep any flower true to type from seed is by hand-fertilization under glass or protecting the seed-bearing flowers by enclosing them in thin cloth bags.

There is not any reason why good results should not be obtained with seeds saved from the pansy plants at this time. Gather the seeds as soon as ripe and keep them in a dry place until the time comes for sowing. M. P.

WOULDN'T IT PAY?

Would it pay florists and nurserymen to boost landscape gardening in the country, where there are many homes that would be beautiful if the owners only could be made to take interest in plants and flowers, shrubs and trees? How could such work be started?

W. H. J.—O.

Of course it would pay and it has paid. Many a florist and nurseryman has been boosting home planting in his local town these many years. And recently both the Society of American Florists and the American Association of Nurserymen, not to mention numerous florists' clubs, have taken up the work, in a national way, of stimulating public interest in our wares. Any member of the trade can start the work in his neighborhood by making his own home place a reason for envy. Make your own place a model and do not be backward about telling what you can do for others.

MUST PAY FOR DELAY.

Express Companies Liable.

In no other line of business are prompt deliveries of express shipments so important as in the florists' trade. Flowers sent with the expectation of delivery for a wedding, a holiday or a funeral, if delayed by the express company and delivered after the time they are wanted, lose all their value. This fact, however, has not been recognized by the government-controlled express companies and the florists have been forced to accept such losses without hope of regaining them. It is a long lane that has no turning, however, and a recent court decision will be cheering news to the trade.

G. M. Rittenhouse & Co., commission merchants, of New York, recently obtained a judgment of $1,977.65 against the Adams Express Co., in a New York court. Legal authorities declare this establishes beyond question the liability of the carrier for loss caused by avoidable delay in delivery beyond a specified schedule, when such loss is due to shrinkage of market value because of delayed delivery, or to other results of the delay.

Trial Over Eggs.

The case arose from the delay in delivery of three express shipments of eggs in February, 1917. Samuel Bingaman, of G. M. Rittenhouse & Co., about February 18 purchased two cars of eggs in Tennessee, upon assurance of the Southern Express Co. of a sixty-hour delivery at New York. The cars were shipped from Nashville February 19 and 20. A third purchase was made at an Illinois point and shipped in the regular express car under assurance of the agent that delivery would be made by February 23 at latest.

The egg market was at that time in a sensitive condition under prospects of increasing supplies; a near future decline was expected and Mr. Bingaman made the purchases and shipments only under the reasonable expectation that deliveries would be made on schedule time.

None of the eggs was so delivered. Part were delivered in seventy-two hours and the others at later intervals up to about ten days from date of shipment. In the meantime the market made a considerable decline and heavy loss was incurred, whereas a profit would have been gained had the goods arrived on time.

Two Companies Sued.

Suit was brought against the Adams Express Co. and the Southern Express Co., claiming damages for breakage and shortage and for loss due to shrinkage in value due to delay. In May, 1918, the express companies settled for the breakage and shortage—an amount approximating $800—and it was stipulated that on the claim for loss by delay one of the cases would go to trial, the others being settled according to the result of the one.

The case was first tried before Judge Ferguson in the Sixth District Municipal Court, in Brooklyn, who found for the defendants. Appeal was taken to the Appellate term and Judges Manning, Clark and Kelby reversed the previous decision and judgment was rendered for the plaintiff for tne full amount claimed, amounting in the three cases to $1,682.20, with $225.85 interest and $69.60 costs.

It was shown by the evidence that the shipments arrived at Jersey City, N. J., on time, but that their delivery to the consignee in New York was delayed by congestion in the former city and lack of adequate facilities.

A GLIMPSE OF HOLLAND.

It is the general view that there is no other place in the world where one interested in the trade can see as much and learn as much in a short time as in Holland, which is the reason for reprinting here extracts from an Englishman's notes in the Horticultural Advertiser, descriptive of an April visit:

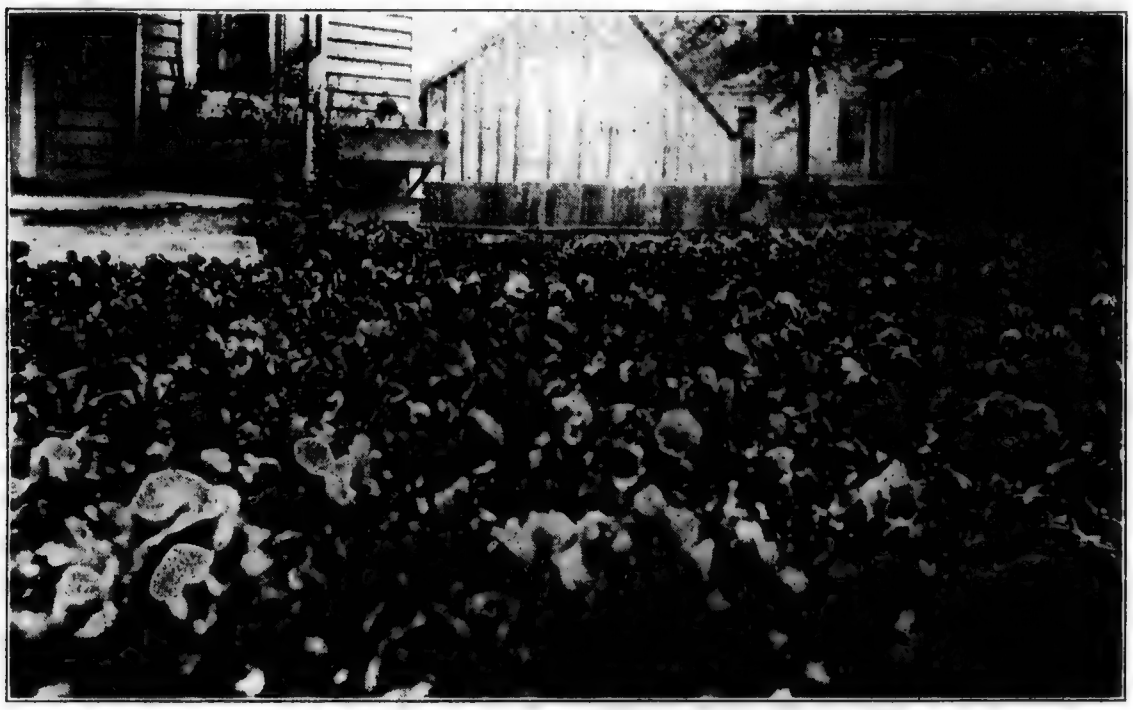
"It was not till we reached Leiden that flowers began to predominate over less interesting crops, but between that city and Haarlem the country either side of the line was like a map painted in patches of the most vivid colors imaginable.

"Haarlem in spring is a veritable city of flowers. The Haarlemer Meer, within the memory of living men a big lake, is a sea of flowers, and not only is the landscape flowery, but almost every shop in the city was a mass of floral decoration; carters decorated their horses, costers trundled gorgeous heaps, and every second person carried gay bunches.

"After lunch at Noordwijk, a seaside resort, we were taken to the top of a small hill, from which the whole of the flat country to Leiden, some eight miles, lies stretched out like a map. Nearly the whole surface is tulips and hyacinths; gorgeous stretches of golden yellow (Mon Tresor), vivid scarlet (Vermilion Brilliant), soft pink and rich blue hyacinths, make up a feast of color which no visitor should miss, and this point of view gives perhaps the best idea of the extent of the bulb-growing industry to be gained in the country.

"If Haarlem is a city of flowers, Boskoop is a city of shrubs, and as such, absolutely unique on the face of the earth. Its situation is peculiar. Lying eight or nine miles from the railway, it can only be reached by road or water. Boskoop consists chiefly of one extremely long street; a ditch, almost a canal, runs on either side. Each house stands on its own little island, with a drawbridge to the street, and behind stretch endless vistas of nurseries divided by more waterways, on which all traffic is done in flat-bottomed boats. I did not see a cart or horse on any of the nurseries visited, and in fact there was no scope for their use. The land is flat and no part of it much more than about eighteen inches above water level. The soil is all of a peaty nature, but it is marvelous the variety of shrubs and trees which flourish in it. Azaleas, rhododendrons and other peat-loving shrubs one would expect to be happy, but it was a surprise to find collections of some 500 species and varieties of conifers, trees and shrubs in perfect health, with not an average of one unsalable tree to the acre. Of the culture one can only speak in superlatives. There are said to be 700 nurseries in Boskoop and they vary from an acre up to well over a hundred, but one could walk miles among them without seeing a neglected tree. The clipped trees, of which there seemed to be millions, are trimmed with mathematical exactitude, everything which needs a stake has it, transplanting appears to be an annual affair, and though there are more trees to the acre than in any British nursery, no two touch, or are allowed to injure each other. It would require a fortnight to do Boskoop thoroughly and nearly as long to describe it, so that my sketch is necessarily superficial."

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY



JOHN KUNTZ.

JOHN KUNTZ was born a florist and reared in the atmosphere of flowers. He is now the successful manager of the Crescent Street Floral Co., of Grand Rapids, Mich., which was founded by his father forty-four years ago, and says that he cannot remember when he did not work at the trade. He is 35 years old and lives today in the same house in which he was born. Mr. Kuntz does his own propagating, as he considers this the mainspring of the business, not a matter to be trusted to other hands. The business of Mr. Kuntz is located in the finest residence district of Grand Rapids and is a thoroughly modern plant. The founder of the business was the oldest florist in Grand Rapids when he died, six years ago, at the age of 75 years. The first greenhouse operated by the elder Mr. Kuntz was heated by means of brick flues, wood being used as fuel.

WANTED—NAME OF PLANT.

We are sending you, under separate cover, a branch of a plant that came to us without a name. It seems somewhat similar to a cactus in appearance and in manner of growth, but has no thorns and, as far as we know, has no bloom. Can you give us its name?

W. F. C.—Ind.

As nearly as I can tell from the piece of branch sent, the name of the plant is Sedum ternatum. M. P.

"SHOW ME" PANSIES

It is not so many years ago that the trade was accustomed to look to Europe for its pansy seeds, but this is one of the items on which America now is self-sustaining. One of the recent additions to the list of those who make the pansy a specialty is C. W. Harold, proprietor of the Cottage Greenhouse at West Plains, Mo., a glimpse of whose establishment is afforded by the accompanying illustration. May 12 he stated that he then had harvested about fifteen pounds of seed from plants shown in the picture, which had been selected by him for what he calls an Ozark Mammoth strain.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Memorial day business was, on the whole, decidedly good. Outside of a few peony shippers, whose shipments did not arrive until the morning of the holiday and were, in consequence, left over, everyone appeared to clean up well. There was plenty of stock in practically all lines, with a plethora of outdoor material, such as shrub flowers, irises and the like.

As is natural, the holiday is followed by the usual dullness. On Saturday, May 31, the movement of practically everything was sluggish. The warm weather of the last few days has resulted in an increased cut of roses and carnations, the latter particularly. Much stock is moved now only under difficulties. White carnations seem to be especially on crop and can be cleaned out only under concessions.

American Beauty roses continue in plentiful supply, and move fairly well at summer prices. Hybrid teas are also plentiful and the quality is remarkably good for the season. Advance shipments of the new Premier continue to arrive and open up well; it appears to have all the attributes of a good summer shipping variety, and its color is superb.

More than enough carnations are coming in and the quality in general is poor, much stock appearing to be weather-worn. However, the season now passing has been especially favorable to carnations, and we are not likely to have them with us much longer.

The supply of orchids is not extremely large, but sufficient for the demand, which is kept up largely through wedding requirements. Arrivals of Phalænopsis amabilis and odontoglossum in the light shades move well for the same purpose.

Lily of the valley is scarce and arrivals quite insufficient to meet the demand, which, of course, is seasonably heavy just now. Easter lilies are not particularly plentiful, but there are quite enough to go around. Sweet peas are plentiful and some of the offerings are of unusually high grade for this time of the year. The best bring as much as 2 cents per spray.

There appears to be no diminution in the supply of miscellaneous flowers. As one variety disappears another quickly takes its place. Peonies are today perhaps the most important of all and they are coming in large quantities. If the weather continues as warm as at present, the season will not be an extended one. Festiva maxima, the white midseason variety, is already strongly in evidence. Irises, calendulas, delphiniums, daisies, forget-me-nots, stocks and gladioli are all prominent and clear at some figure or other.

Various Notes.

The building at Forty-sixth street and Fifth avenue, occupied for many years by Charles Thorley, has passed, under a twenty-one year lease, to the Tiffin Products Co., controlled by General T. Coleman Dupont, L. M. Boomer and the newly formed Louis Sherry, Inc. The adjoining building on Forty-sixth street also is included in the lease, and the rental is said to be $60,000 net a year. Mr. Thorley's gross rental of the corner building was in the neighborhood of $30,000. Both buildings are to be razed and, it is understood, a modern business structure will be erected on the site. The Thorley lease does not expire until May 1, 1920. It is not yet known where the new quarters for the Thorley business are to be.

The Horticultural Society of New York will hold an exhibition of peonies, roses, hardy flowering shrubs and trees and hardy herbaceous plants in the Museum building, New York Botanical Garden, June 7 and 8. The classes are open to all.

E. Allan Peirce, Waltham, Mass., was in town June 2, en route to Washington, D. C., where he was to attend the fifth annual inspection of the National Rose Test Garden. He is a member of the executive board of the American Rose Society.

Fred Howard, of Los Angeles, Cal., spent a day or two in the city last week on his way to Europe, where he will spend several weeks.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held June 9, at the club's rooms, Grand Opera House building, Twenty-third street and Eighth avenue. Chairman Roman J. Irwin, of the exhibition committee, is anxious that a fine exhibition be staged at this meeting. Besides plant and flower novelties, the committee will be pleased to stage exhibits of flowering shrubs and outdoor roses of interest to the trade. Exhibits should be received not later than Monday afternoon, and should be addressed to R. J. Irwin, in care of John Young & Co., 53 West Twenty-eighth street.

The members of the joint flower show committee visited, by invitation, the beautiful estate of Theodore A. Havemeyer, Brookville, L. I., New York. Mr. and Mrs. Havemeyer, as usual, were ideal hosts. During the period of the visit a business meeting was held. There were present: A. L. Miller, P. F. Kessler, Max Schling, G. E. M. Stumpp, C. H. Totty, W. H. Duckham, Arthur Herrington, Richard Holloman, W. H. Siebrecht, P. W. Popp and John G. Scheepers.

The New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association arranged an excursion to Coney Island, for June 3.

The next event of trade importance in New York is the annual meeting of the American Sweet Pea Society. The exhibition opens June 21, at noon, with the business meeting at 3 p. m. The show will continue open through Sunday. The premium list and program are included in the bulletin just issued by Secretary William Gray, of Newport, R. I. George W. Kerr, of Burpee's, is president, and Walter Sperling, of Stumpp & Walter Co., is a director. Each of these seed houses is actively assisting the society, as are many others specially interested in the sweet pea, and a good show is expected. A large attendance of the public is assured.

Bloomingdale Bros. are profiting by a novel window display, the idea of Manager Warendorff. The window is all decorated in dogwood and a bride and bridesmaid are seen walking back and forth with various bouquets. The models are alive and attractive. The bouquets are of artificial flowers, showing the range in price to be made up in natural flowers. The display is attracting much attention and praise.

Harry A. Barnard, of Stuart Low Co., Bush Hill Park, England, left New York May 31 on his way home from what may be the last of his many trips to America; he says he probably will not come back as long as the quarantine prohibits the importation of orchids. Mr. Barnard had expected to sail from New York June 2, on the Aquitania, but received notice to board the steamer at Halifax instead.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The last week in May ended with an abundance of flowers and prices somewhat broken. The weather has been hot—the first protracted hot spell of the year—and its effect has been felt by the growers. It was hard for the wholesalers to get enough stock to look after shipments and also supply local buyers early in the week. But by Thursday afternoon things congested somewhat and late buyers found prices easy.

Peonies and carnations were the only flowers which were scarce. These maintained their prices throughout.

Memorial day was satisfactory generally. Florists near the cemeteries did a wonderful business, those growing their own stock being compelled to call on the wholesalers for new supplies.

In this latitude lilac is seldom fit for bouquets by May 30. But the past cold weather retarded it and made it just right. Some florists complained bitterly about the abundance of lilac used on Memorial day.

A general summary of the month of May, 1919, gives it the distinction of being about the most satisfactory florists' month in the calendar. The growers received good prices throughout, the wholesalers never lacked buyers and the retailers found the demand steady, with Mothers' day and Memorial day high lights in the record of sales.

Various Notes.

The Fox Point Floral Co. is consigning some of the finest snapdragon we have ever seen to Gust Rusch & Co. Hans Deering, proprietor of the Fox Point Floral Co., has a knack of growing that is all his own. Everything grown here commands a little better than market price. Mr. Deering not only knows how to grow flowers, but shows painstaking thoroughness in grading and bunching his stock.

The directors of the Florists' Advertising Club met June 3 at the Hotel Blatz. An appropriation of $1,000 for newspaper ads to boost "Say It with Flowers" in June was one of the items brought up.

The Cudahy Floral Co. is planting four houses to Premier and Columbia. This concern has had good cuts of Ophelia, Shawyer and Killarney all spring.

J. P. McCarthy, representing M. Rice Co., and Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., called on their Milwaukee patrons this week.

William Zimmermann is moving his business one door west. His former store is being transformed into a bank entrance. Although Mr. Zimmermann's store has been torn up for three weeks, and adorned with a boarded front instead of show windows, business has been good with him.

Gimbel Bros. were closed on Decoration day. Mr. MacDonald, who is in charge of the floral department, says that the sales May 29 were larger than May 29 and 30 of last year. The employees enjoyed their day of rest.

CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

Decoration day found the market well supplied with nearly all varieties of flowers except peonies, which did not quite make it, owing to the rainy weather. There were only a few of them and the supply was far short of the demand. It was possible to get southern peonies, but most florists who had had experience with them preferred to pass them up and use the flowers available in the local markets.

This shortage of peonies created a good demand for carnations and roses, which cleaned up well. Carnations were not of first-class quality, but fair. There were also a few calendulas, Easter lilies, yellow and white daisies, outdoor valley, violets and good sweet peas, which, for the most part, cleaned up nicely.

Greens of all kinds, Plumosus Sprengeri and string smilax went quickly and considerably more could have been disposed of had they been on hand.

Various Notes.

Frank Ritsenthaler, of Knoble Bros., has purchased a new machine and now goes around in great style.

Walter Havlicek, of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., has been doctoring for some time owing to the effects of wounds and poison gas received in France.

Charles Bastian, of the Cleveland Plant & Flower Co., reports his daughter quite ill. W. F. B.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Decoration day was a fine, clear day and business was good. There was a large supply of flowers and plants of all kinds and an equally great demand. The market gardeners brought in large quantities of cheap flowers, also peonies. Peonies sold at $1 to $1.50 per dozen.

The spring planting is not yet finished, owing to the long wet spell.

Various Notes.

The Lockyear Floral Co. has advertised a clean-up sale for this week. It will dismantle two houses at once to make way for two new houses.

The Florists' Club will have a meeting at Theodore Kuebler's place June 11. This will be the first meeting for a year.

Las Vegas, N. M.—The Firemen's Flower Festival will be held June 9 and it promises to be the best ever.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

"Whoe'er has traveled life's dull round,
Where'er its stages may have been,
Has paused to think he oft has found
The warmest welcome at an inn."

"True," observed Robert Greenlaw, of the S. S. Pennock Co., Philadelphia, "the clerk extended the glad hand and possibly handed out rosy mail from one's best girl or from the house. All was serene and the day was not sufficiently long to tire. How conditions have changed! Now, quite frequently, as one approaches the hotel desk, possibly feeling almost all in after a strenuous day's work, the clerk greets you with the, to him, happy remark, 'House full,' and your dream of a room with bath is changed to an icy shower that chills the spine. The mail, if any, corresponds at such times with the surroundings. Wife is worried; babe has measles; house writes that, owing to the extraordinary and unexpected returns through an ad in 'the' trade paper, the special line upon which you figured to make a big drive has been gobbled up, and you are left to peg away with the regular list and try to increase your sales by personal magnetism and persistent effort. Meanwhile, however, you are conscious you are 'doing your bit' and you are moralizing that 'such is life' and things might be worse."

• • • •

The Peck Floral Co., of Gloversville, N. Y., notes a healthy condition of trade. This company is a late addition to the ranks of the F. T. D. and received seventeen orders through that organization for Mothers' day, including one from San Francisco. The Barson greenhouses, formerly at Johnstown, have been removed and added to the Peck range.

John Sambrook, of Sambrook Bros., Troy, N. Y., speaking for his fellow Trojans, declares the demand has been limited only by supply and he opines that the present bedding-out season is the busiest on record.

• • • •

Sam Hanson, of North Troy, N. Y., has a sign conspicuously placed: "Please do not handle the flowers." "Each of the plants is so valuable this year that we just have to protect them," observed our prosperous confrere. "We expect a clean sweep of every plant, in bloom or out, at prices decidedly in advance of former seasons."

• • • •

W. E. Cahill, of the traveling force of Roman J. Irwin, New York, dropped in at the C. F. Baker & Son place, Utica, N. Y., during a discussion of Mothers' day and previous business. It was generally agreed that it was, from all points of view, the best yet. There were some weak points. The big inflation of prices is regretted. Memorial day loomed up with a call from the city children for 1,500 geraniums for the graves of the veterans and this was only a starter. After the busy season, Frank Baker proposes to take a brief vacation, possibly to fish. This elicited a remark from "Billy" Cahill to the effect that there is a striking similarity between the traveling salesman and the fisherman, in that the rod represents the fisher; the line, the "long green" necessary to provide the means of communication; the reel is the brain working; the dobber, the pleasant line of talk which goes on while the bait is being nibbled at; the bait is the goods offered—the better the quality, the quicker the bite; the customer is the fish, and the basket the order book. FOR the general welfare of the trade we need, not more stock, but better stock. The money is in the quality.

AS a general rule this season, buyers have paid more and received less, which has subtracted somewhat from the joy of a middleman's life.

A ONE-MAN florists' business is a mighty nice thing, but it has its strenuous seasons. Why not take in a young fellow who likes the trade and make it worth his while to stick to it?

THE Holland bulb salesmen, each of whom represents a large grower, tells you to beware the man who is only a jobber; he won't be able to buy up the stock to fill his orders with this season.

IT has been two or three years since there have been good bay trees and boxwoods in quantity. There are plenty now, but when the present supply is gone it will be a long time before there are any more, unless the quarantine is canceled.

THE American Sweet Pea Society will hold its eleventh annual exhibition at the American Museum of Natural History, New York, opening June 21, with the annual business meeting that afternoon. Anyone wishing a premium list should address William Gray, secretary, Bellevue avenue, Newport, R. I.

THE trade never approached the quiet summer time in such good financial condition as now. With only a few exceptions, the trade has welcomed and taken full advantage of the unexpected opportunity this season has afforded to make collections and pay bills. Not in years has the trade approached summer with so few liabilities.

THE call for bedding stock runs down fast after Memorial day, but there are several reasons why it should continue later than usual this season. In the first place, May was a cold, wet month, and over the greater part of the United States bedding operations were delayed. In the second place, the trade has been unusually short of help and has not caught up with planting orders. Also, geraniums have not come into bloom as early as they should, and the better stock now becoming available may be expected to create continued demand.

IS it reasonable to expect the best stock when one seeks the lowest price?

IF buyers would not be quite so insistent on early deliveries they might get a little better stock.

THE addition of packing costs has become so general that moderate charges have almost ceased to cause comment.

A YEAR ago everybody was storing coal for domestic, manufacturing and all other purposes. Now nobody is storing, a sure sign of a scramble later on.

EVIDENTLY the cyclamen is to be called on to play a leading part in next season's plant business. Numerous growers are bringing on large batches of young stock.

DID you read on page 80 of last week's issue of The Review the bill now pending in Congress to provide penalties for shipping stock not completely labeled and true to name? If the bill becomes law it will apply to greenhouse and field-grown florists' stock.

THE end of the war again has brought the middle west to the front as the part of the country in which the greatest trade development is likely to take place in the next few years. Food production will bring fabulous sums to the agricultural states this year.

THE surest way to get something for yourself is to do something for others. If you stop to analyze any successful business, whether it be a greenhouse, a flower store or a newspaper, you will find that it has been built on that principle; by serving well it prospers.

ANOTHER BIG ONE.

Memorial day has gone on record as in line with Christmas, Easter and Mothers' day, bringing the largest demand the trade ever has known at this holiday. It becomes trite to say that each special flower day was "the biggest ever," but it is the fact this season. But the records will be hard to beat next time.

TAKE DR. GARFIELD'S WORD.

Last season we, as florists, as well as all the other people, took Dr. Harry A. Garfield's word on coal matters, for he had the say. When he told us, as florists, to cut our coal purchases to half, what he said went. Today Mr. Garfield says:

> The best time to put in orders for next winter's coal is NOW, when coal is plentiful and demand for it light. Analysis of coal production records since November 1 indicate that fuel will be far from plentiful next winter if production continues to fall.

Unfortunately, Dr. Garfield's words do not now carry the weight of command.

ENOUGH FLOWERS.

For almost the first time since late September there are as many cut flowers, all over the United States, as can be used. Unfortunately, with sufficiency has come overabundance, the spring glut, as it were, but it is worthy of note that the trade never in all its history has enjoyed so long a season of uninterrupted prosperity. There always comes a time each spring when weather conditions force flowers to the markets faster than they can be sold. It is notable that the condition has been so long delayed and it is not to be taken that this first glut in many, many months indicates an end of the good times. Not necessarily. In a few days the oversupply will pass and the trade will settle down to steady summer business, to the best summer business, unless all signs fail, the trade ever has enjoyed. Then, with returning cool weather we shall open an autumn season which will break all records for volume of business. It may be that we shall have more stock and less demand than last autumn, but none of us would wish for a recurrence of the conditions which created the special call for funeral flowers last fall. Instead, we shall have a demand for social affairs next season.

DR. GALLOWAY WAS RIGHT.

When Dr. Beverly T. Galloway told the hecklers at Boston a few months ago that the plant quarantine was going into effect in spite of all h— (those may not have been his exact words, but one got the idea) and that the trade might as well make the best of it, he was right, absolutely right.

The quarantine did go into effect, June 1, and we might as well do business—what we can.

Let us agree that the quarantine is an extremely crude piece of work; that it does a great deal of needless and admitted injury to accomplish a debatable amount of good; that it is the work of men without practical knowledge, of men obsessed with the sense of their own power, and that it probably would not have come to pass had not certain growers supported it in the belief that it would act for them even more effectively than the most impossible tariff wall. Let us agree to all that, and more—the quarantine is in force.

Now the question is, what can each of us do to produce at home something to replace the stock that is beyond our reach? What can you do? Ask yourself that. Well, go do it!

Dr. Galloway also is quoted as telling the Bostonians that the quarantine not only was going on, but that it will stay on till the proverbial hot place freezes over. (Those may not have been his exact words, but that seems to have been the idea.) Perhaps! But it is just barely possible that the present bunch will be gone from Washington while the pitch is still hot and it may be the next outfit will listen to reason—unless we should happen to like the quarantine when we all get adjusted to it!

SOLD OUT?

It is apparent that a large number of producers of plants for the trade have sold out this spring before the demand has been satisfied and that there is the opportunity for others to turn surpluses into cash by the simple process of making known their offers. Like this:

> Please stop my ad of ageratum, as I am sold out.—F. Sokol, Worcester, Mass., May 24, 1919.
> We are entirely sold out on vincas and petunias advertised in the Classified section of The Review.—Wm. Schwan & Son, Fredonia, N. Y. May 25, 1919.
> The Classified ad cleaned up our pansies.—Port Washington Floral Co., Port Washington, Wis., May 24, 1919.
> Kindly discontinue our Display ad of spring plants, as the stock is all sold.—C. H. Frey, Lincoln, Neb., May 26, 1919.

When you hear a florist complain of the cost of advertising you may be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

Stephen T. Hitz.

Stephen T. Hitz, of Indianapolis, Ind., died at the home of his son, Bert Hitz, May 26. Mr. Hitz had always been a very active business man of this city and at the time of his death owned the Hitz Storage Co. and the Florists' Supply House. He had been a partner in the firm of George Hitz & Co. from 1903 until two years ago, when, because of ill health, he retired from the firm. He started the firm now called S. T. Hitz & Son, operating a large greenhouse range in the eastern part of the city.

Three months ago he met with an accident, in which a nail penetrated the great toe of his right foot. Blood poisoning set in. Three separate operations were performed, but, because of his ill health, they were not successful.

Mr. Hitz was born in Cincinnati, January 27, 1847. Later, his parents moved to Madison, Ind. The greater part of his life had been spent in Indianapolis, where he was a successful and respected business man. He is survived by his wife, a son, Bert, and six brothers.

E. E. T.

James Hay.

James Hay, one of the best known florists of Rhode Island, died suddenly May 31, at his home in East Greenwich. He suffered an attack of influenza last fall and was confined to his home with a recurrence of the attack this spring. His heart became affected and while he was able to attend partially to his work, his general health did not permit him to engage fully in business.

Mr. Hay was born in Scotland fifty years ago, his father being the late Lawrence Hay. He came to this country while a young man. He came of a family of floriculturists and horticulturists and obtained the first rudimentary knowledge of the guild from relatives and later with one of the best known private gardeners in Scotland. Before he attained his majority he decided to follow his brothers who had emigrated to America. Upon his arrival here he settled in the vicinity of Boston and at one time was under gardener for Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, whose famous estate near Brookline, Mass., attracted world-wide attention for a number of years. He remained there for several years under the late Monty Atkinson.

On removing to Rhode Island he accepted a position as head gardener for the Moses Goddard estate at Pottowomut, in East Greenwich. For about three years he engaged in the florists' business in that town for himself, his greenhouses being objects of special interest to visitors. He is survived by his widow, one son, three daughters, and two brothers.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Memorial day from both the wholesale and retail point of view was the best in the history of the local trade. Influenza, the toll of death from pneumonia and other diseases in cities and camps, increased the amount of cemetery decorations beyond anything heretofore dreamed of. The lack of outdoor flowers, owing to the continuous cold weather throughout the month, made the public dependent upon the markets. For these reasons Memorial day, 1919, exceeded that of previous years.

Peonies alone did not meet expectations as to quantity as practically every other variety did. There were not nearly enough peonies for even home demands. The day before Decoration day they sold at $6 to $12 per hundred.

Roses and carnations fared nicely, the latter wholesaling at $10 per hundred. There was little change in the prices of roses. They brought from $6 to $15.

Various Notes.

Edward L. McGrath expects to leave the first day of the week for a three weeks' automobile tour of New England and the White mountains. He will be accompanied by Mrs. McGrath, the younger son, Edward, and two or three friends of the family.

Anthony W. Smith, Jr., expects to attend the annual convention of the Rotary Club, which will be held in Salt Lake City, Utah, June 16 to 21. Later he will spend his vacation on Long Island.

David Hill has spent the last ten days in New York city. He went east to meet his brother, Private James O. Hill, who landed May 22. Private Hill had some thrilling experiences in his year overseas. He is one of the most enthusiastic members of the Candle Club, an organization of the younger florists of the city. Miss Bess Hill, who helps her brothers during the busier seasons, was in the store all last week.

Howard Andrews, of the landscape department of the A. W. Smith Co., has returned from France and is located in Seattle, Wash.

Harry Elicker has returned to his home in Homestead after a year's overseas service with the 28th Ambulance Division, and will shortly resume his position with his brother-in-law, A. C. Miller. Mr. Elicker is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Elicker, veteran florists of Allegheny county.

Hiram A. Frischkorn has become identified with the supply department of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. and, following three weeks' experimental work in the city, he left June 2 for a business trip through Indiana. He is the only son of Manager Augustus Frischkorn, of Beckert's Seed Store, and returned some weeks ago from overseas, where he was a member of the 319th Infantry. Mr. Frischkorn has the territory formerly traveled by William T. Usinger, a stockholder of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., who has reënlisted and will remain in France all summer.

The revised by-laws of the Pittsburgh Florists' and Gardeners' Club were up for consideration and adoption at the last meeting of the organization, June 3. "Seasonable Flowers" was the subject of the program, in addition to which there was a talk by "A Lover of Gardens."

Louis B. F. West, who was seriously injured nearly a year ago while stepping off an elevator in the Farmers' Bank building, has gone east for treatment in the hope of ultimately recovering the use of his spine.

Miss Sarah Pattee, who has been identified with the landscape department of the A. W. Smith Co., has resigned and returned to her home in State College.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

It was one of the trade humorists who remarked, June 2, that the week opens with the market full of sun flowers—he referred especially to the large quantities of roses popped open by the heat. May 31 there were more flowers than the market could use, but it was not a serious oversupply until June 2, when there was a deluge of all seasonable flowers. The first days of this week have seen the buyers in control of the market for practically the first time since the latter part of last September. There is so much of everything except cattleyas, valley, lilies and one or two minor items that it is impossible to move the surplus. It would not be so bad if the flowers were of better quality, but the heat has made everything open and soft. The condition is one that is met every spring, usually in May, when the first hot days come.

The market was as clean at closing time May 29 as it ever is likely to be on the eve of a holiday. Practically everything except a few cold storage peonies had sold out. Early in the morning May 30 some of the city buyers had trouble in finding badly needed flowers, but toward closing time large shipments again came in, so that most of the wholesalers closed with a good many flowers in the iceboxes, flowers which came in too late to be of use. This gave the market a bad start on the after-Memorial-day business. While at present the supply cannot be moved, it is expected that a few days of spring heat will run the crops down so that a fair balance between supply and demand will be established, probably by the time this issue of The Review reaches its readers. In the meantime the wholesalers are busy sorting stock to get out the moderate quantities required for shipping orders. The rest goes for what the local buyers will pay, but the city stores are not buying much.

From the wholesalers' end there are nothing but highly satisfactory reports of the Memorial day business and of the May business. While the supply of flowers was not so large as in most recent years, receipts were heavier than expected and the demand was strong enough to take everything in sight, with the exception of a few peonies, which could easily have been sold if the holders had been willing to take lower figures while the shipping was going on. The shipping demand was far stronger than the city business. The local retailers report nothing more than a good average Memorial day. They do not complain, because they had a really good business, but it scarcely came up to the sanguine expectations of a good many of the downtown stores and quite a few of them had enough stock left over so that they bought little for Saturday or Sunday. A visit to the cemeteries in the afternoon showed that large quantities of flowers had found their way there, principally peonies. There were few wreaths or other made-up pieces.

Both the Memorial day sales and the May month record were much ahead of recent years. It was because of better prices. While there were not nearly so many peonies as is usual at Memorial day, the prices obtained went a long way toward making up the difference. Peonies were sold at all kinds of prices, but not much good stock was sold below 8 cents and from that up to 15 cents, with an occasional small lot of fancy stock bringing $2 per dozen. The price of carnations also was much better than in recent years. There was a lot of poor stock which had accumulated earlier in the week and which was sold off, principally to out-of-town department stores, at $30 per thousand. It was probably the most expensive stock that left the market, though most of the sales were at $8 to $10 per hundred. More of the shorter grades of roses could have been used, but there were enough of the fancy grades and it was necessary to shade the prices to clean up. The public does not care to pay $6 or $7 per dozen for roses to take to the cemeteries. Sweet peas gave the wholesalers more trouble than anything else. The sweet pea is not a cemetery flower and the stock offered in most cases was the end of the winter crop, short in stem, soft in flower and hard to sell at anything like the prices that have been prevailing all this spring.

The weather probably never was better for Memorial day, but nevertheless there were numerous complaints; they always come at this season Not unnaturally, a good many of them came from south and southwest. It is a common experience to have a heat wave strike the Memorial day shipping, but this year it held off until most of the orders were out. Most of the complaints had to do with carnations.

Ferns are scarce; the new crop is too soft and buyers will not take them if they can get storage ferns.

Weather in May.

May was a most unusual month for flower production, being much cooler than usual. The mean temperature was 55 degrees, against 64 degrees in the same month of 1918. The rainfall was about half an inch more than normal, but the percentage of sunshine was sixty-six, whereas May averages only sixty-four percent of the possible duration of sun. There were eleven perfectly clear days on none of which did the temperature exceed 72 degrees according to the local weather office. As a consequence, cut flowers averaged of much better quality than usually is available in May.

to the intersection of Michigan avenue and Twenty-second street. In its early days it was one of the most fashionable sections of Chicago. As the growth of the city drove the residences out, there was consideration of a removal of the flower store to some other locality, but recently another trend has been strongly apparent. The character of the business places of the neighborhood is changing and is a marked improvement. With the increase in the business population of the neighborhood, the call for flowers has increased, so that this spring's business has been the largest in the history of the store. There is still some family trade, principally by telephone, but there has been a great increase in the cash business and in the call for funeral flowers. The store, according to Ed Enders, now makes as many funeral pieces in a day as were made in a week when the neighborhood was one of residences.

C. J. Michelsen reports with a smile that the May sales of the E. C. Amling Co. were even better than the April sales, made historic by a big crop of Easter lilies on a market that hadn't many others. It had not been hoped to equal the April record for many a month.

Walter Kennicott, one of the largest of the local peony growers, reports that he cut his first Old Red May 31. Since then they have been received from a number of the local shippers and the home season will be on in full force before the week is out. The stock of storable quality is going into the freezer because at present the market will not take it.

2. The downtown flower stores and the seed stores are wishing the boys would all come home at once and get it over with, for each parade absolutely kills business for them for two or three hours, and after that the people are so tired that most of them go home without buying much. It is just another confirmation of the old belief that the flower business prospers best when the excitement is least.

Nearly all those who are in the florists' business are in it because they like it, but it is doubtful if any of them get more fun out of it than Archie Spencer does. No one ever saw him otherwise than serene and smiling. He says he does it by cutting out parts of the business that afford irritation; it is not the way to make the most money, but the way to enjoy business most.

Back of these is a fine service building, including space for two trucks which have done many a mile of service. Back of the "shed" is open ground and hotbeds. office at 11 South La Salle street since the armistice, now have a fully equipped refrigerator factory at 1246 West Twelfth street. Sidney Buchbinder says he never before has had in hand so many inquiries for estimates.

President Peter Reinberg, of the Cook County Forest Preserve, and Ransom Kennicott, his appointee as chief forester, have taken up the idea of planting memorial trees for the men who did not come back from France. The idea of the memorial trees carries with it a plan to label each one with the name of a soldier or sailor and the sites are to be selected by the families or friends of the departed hero.

One day this week Poehlmann Bros. Co. gave between 12,000 and 15,000 roses to Marshall Field & Co. for display in the tea rooms, but Poehlmann is not selling to department stores or peddlers in the street, even in face of the enormous quantity of stock which is coming in daily, the object being to keep the flower business on the highest plane. It is John Poehlmann's belief that flowers which are sold by department stores and peddlers at low prices cause the public to become misled as regards the true value of flowers. The retailer, and the retailer only, he thinks, should use these flowers to advertise his business and when flowers are plentiful the retailer can buy in quantity, stock that can be used to this advantage at reduced prices.

Members of the Chicago Florists' Club who are members of the S. A. F. are eligible to bowl in the tournament to be held at Detroit during the S. A. F. convention in August. A meeting will be held Tuesday, June 10, at 8:00 p. m., at Bensinger's alleys, 29 West Randolph street, to select a team to represent Chicago at this convention. All bowlers who intend going to the convention must meet every Tuesday at 8:00 p. m., at Bensinger's, to practice. The five highest men will be selected for the team and the next five highest will be selected as alternates. All bowlers should be at the meeting for the try-out.

J. E. Pollworth has returned to his desk with Kennicott Bros. Co., after being in the care of a doctor since February 5, on account of trouble with his eyes. He has made only an occasional visit to the store during the interval.

A new store was opened May 8, at 2810 North Clark street, known as the Armstrong Shop of Flowers. Edward Armstrong had a large banner announcing the opening and on it in large lettering was, "Say It with Flowers." He also sent cards through the neighborhood offering wreaths and peonies for Memorial day. There was a fine business, considering that there are two other stores within a block, which are old ones in the district and which each also had a large trade.

C. L. Washburn, while watching the parade of the 33rd Division June 2, was asked by a woman if he would hold her little girl up so she could see her

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

To make a clear description of the doings in the cut flower market during the closing week of May, certain factors must be borne in mind. Memorial day is far more of a plant than a cut flower occasion in so far as Philadelphia is concerned. A geranium or a rose plant in bloom has many more friends here than a bunch of cut flowers, however beautiful. This is probably due to the fact that Memorial day comes in the month when most of the soft-wooded plants are transplanted outdoors and they are, therefore, more suitable at that season for beautifying the cemetery. The cut flower demand comes from out of town, mostly from the battle towns in Pennsylvania and in New England, where the occasion is marked by handsome floral displays. The success of Memorial day in the cut flower market is dependent on two things: First, the supply of carnations and of peonies in this market; second, that the season be not so far advanced that the districts from which the orders come have their own outdoor flowers. Given the first and without the second, a good Memorial day business is almost certain. There is a third important condition necessary. That is cool weather. Hot weather spoils business.

All the conditions were favorable in the main. Carnations were good and fairly plentiful. Peonies were in from the sheltered districts. Central Pennsylvania had few outdoor flowers, New England none, and the weather was cool until the last moment; then it became warm. The result was the best Memorial day business this market has ever enjoyed. Prices were firm and pretty high until the shipping orders were all filled. Peonies went out in one, two, three, five and even ten thousand lots. Extraordinary efforts were made to get them in as late as Wednesday night. Great quantities came, but not enough. Some orders were held until Thursday morning for want of stock, when they were all filled. The warm weather came and more peonies and more and more, and the market broke and thousands of late arrivals were unsold. Most of the peonies that came by May 28 brought $8 to $10 per hundred; a few brought $12 per hundred. Those that came in after noon May 29 brought about half those prices and many of them remained unsold. The wholesalers are not keen about putting peonies in cold storage. There is too much loss. Where it is a choice between putting them in cold storage or losing them altogether, those not too far developed are apt to go into cold storage.

Carnations brought $6, $8 and some extremely fine blooms $10 a hundred. That was found to be the most that the market would stand. While the supply was short of the demand, the wholesalers found that the market would not pay more and wisely let well enough alone.

There was no special demand for fancy roses. There were not enough Beauties to make an impression, but there were lots of Russell. The top grades were neglected. Russell at $15 to $20 was not wanted. Ordinary grades of the smaller roses sold well at $4 to $8 and occasionally $10.

Ten weeks' stocks, feverfew and other garden flowers were wanted. Asparagus sold as it rarely has at Memorial day.

Heavy receipts of peonies have depressed the market at the close of the week. The continued warm weather has brought in lots of all kinds of flowers.

The choice flowers of less prominence are orchids, which include two cattleyas, Mossiæ and gigas; sweet peas, mostly from coldframes, although there are still a few fine indoor-grown blooms; larkspur and Canterbury bells. Valley is over. Gladioli are in moderate supply. The best come from the greenhouses. There are also some from the south, grown outside.

The Plant Market.

The general impression seems to be that the plant market is healthy, but not buoyant. Most of May has been unfavorable for outdoor planting, owing to the frequent rains. Prices have been extremely high; still, the market has been good. Memorial day with those florists who do a cemetery business has been better than usual. The difficulty is the old one; buyers will not take blooming plants that are not in bloom. Practically all the geraniums that had a bud or bloom on them have been sold. The demand has been greatly strengthened by the purchases of those who formerly depended on their own greenhouses to produce plants for their own places, the country places employing their own gardeners.

The Shower.

The fashionable florists nearly all employ experts, mostly women, to arrange the ribbons for their shower bouquets and to tie the bows. When the florist who does not have much of this kind of work has to make a shower bouquet, he, or even she (though women are cleverer at this sort of thing than men), often has a dickens of a time. To meet this difficulty the ribbon shower can now be made on a machine. Sydney H. Bayersdorfer showed a sample of this machine-made chiffon shower which was neatly done. He said that while there would be florists who would prefer to continue making their shower bouquets entirely by hand, there would be many others to whom these machine-made showers would be a boon.

The Ellenwood Greenhouses.

A good deal of interest has been manifested in the use to which Alfred M. Campbell will put his new venture near Hatboro. The place is planted entirely with roses; 10,000 Premier, 5,000 each of Ophelia and Double White Killarney. Regarding his selection of varieties, Mr. Campbell believes that the final decision depends on the buyer. To quote Mr. Campbell's Lincoln-like utterance on this point, "It may not do to grow the varieties the buyer likes, but it will not do to grow the varieties he does not like."

The Market.

It can be stated without qualification of any kind that Memorial day business went far ahead of all previous years. Growers, retailers and wholesalers unite on this fact. The weather was clear and pleasant. May 29, with a maximum of 94 degrees, caused some misgivings, but the intense heat lasted but a day and had no effect on sales. Buying started with a snap early in the week. The markets May 28 and 29 were extremely active and what flowers arrived Memorial day morning were easily sold at good prices. Boston never had so satisfactory a Memorial day. Roses were in good supply and of splendid quality. Short-stemmed stock was, as usual, in the greatest demand at from $5 to $6 per hundred upwards. For the fancier grades there was only a slight advance. Reds and deep pinks, as usual, were in greatest favor. Carnations made from $6 to $10 per hundred and far more could have been sold. There was, as usual, some salted stock, which brought the lowest prices.

There was a large supply of fine sweet peas. The bulk sold at $1 and $2 per hundred, with some fancy stock higher. Marguerites mostly sold at $2 to $4 per hundred; callas at $15 to $20. Of Easter lilies there were practically none offered. Gladioli of the large-flowered type sold well at $16 to $24 per hundred, and small-flowered sorts at $8 to $12. Spanish iris made $12 to $16. Of ten weeks' stocks there was a large supply. Good colored varieties made $8 per hundred and in bunches made 75 cents to $1 per bunch. Candytuft and double feverfew sold at 75 cents to $1.25 per bunch. Spiræa Queen Alexandra sold well; gypsophila dragged somewhat. Peonies from local sources did not appear until May 31, but a good many from a distance came in and sold at an average of $8 per hundred. Few tulips were offered, but calendulas and pansies sold well and there was a splendid market for snapdragons.

The pleasant weather gave an impetus to the sale of bedding plants and growers of these had their hands full. Apart from cut flowers and plants, the call for magnolia and other wreaths reached tremendous proportions. Sprays of artificial flowers were also offered at many other than florists' establishments.

Few flowers came in May 31. Growers in many cases had heavy local demands and few cut carnations arrived. The majority made $6 per hundred.

June 2, flowers were much more abundant and prices showed considerable declines. Some local single peonies, also irises of the germanica section and other open-air flowers were noted. One of the most popular of these is the acquilegia. Retailers have a good number of weddings and prospects are good for a fine June business.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club held a successful field day May 28 at Faulkner Farm, Brookline, where W. N. Craig has charge. The date coming so near Memorial day prevented some commercial members from attending, but there was an attendance of seventy-five, of whom twenty were ladies. Weather conditions were perfect and all vegetation looked fresh after recent rains. The Italian and rock gardens seemed to specially interest the visitors and the outing proved an enjoyable one.

J. C. BULIS MFG. CO., 1124 S. 12th St., St. Louis, Mo.

The B. A. Snyder Co. was cleaned out of practically everything, both in the way of fresh and artificial material, for Memorial day and had the most strenuous time in its history attending to the great volume of business.

Carbone had the decorations for the Sprague-Sefton wedding at the Church of the Redeemer, Chestnut Hill, May 31. Banks of Tausendschoen roses and Delphinium Belladonna along the sides of the chancel were most effective. Lilium candidum was mostly used on the altar. The decorations were much admired.

Recent visitors included F. C. Green, Providence, R. I., and Anthony Waterer, Philadelphia, who stated that he had sold several thousand dollars' worth more of bulbs in this section than ever before. B. T. Galloway, of Washington, D. C., also was here.

At Penn's, out of the immense number of artificial wreaths prepared for Memorial day, only four remained unsold. The call for fresh flowers also was tremendous. Henry Penn stated that their business showed an increase of thirty-eight per cent over 1918. A great many who had lost friends and relatives in the late influenza epidemic were purchasers and everyone was content to pay prices asked without demur.

Owing to the mild winter, all flowering trees, shrubs and climbers are blooming with wonderful profusion this season. In the Arnold Arboretum, wistarias, laburnums, viburnums, cratægus, rhododendrons, Ghent azaleas, deutzias and loniceras are remarkably good and many thousands attended to view the floral display June 1.

petitions asking for the repeal of the law would seem to make it imperative for the other side to be heard from if this excellent change is to be maintained another year.

There will be an exhibition of rhododendrons, azaleas, irises, herbaceous flowers and vegetables at Horticultural hall June 7 and 8. It should prove interesting.

Wax Bros. had a banner Memorial day business and were cleaned out of practically everything in the way of both natural and artificial flowers. They have a good number of weddings booked for June.

As the regular date of the June meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club falls June 17, a local holiday, the meeting will be held June 18. It will be ladies' night and an attractive entertainment has been arranged. The executive committee has decided to hold the annual picnic at Cunningham park, East Milton, July 24.

The Boston Floral Supply Co. was simply overwhelmed with Memorial day orders, which reached undreamed-of proportions. They are doing a splendid and steadily increasing business at their new Otis street store.

At the store of Welch Bros. Co., Memorial day business broke all records and an excellent June call for flowers is looked for.

At the establishment of the W. W. Edgar Co. the trade in bedding plants, hydrangeas and other seasonable plants was heavy and had kept all hands on the jump. Cyclamens and begonias for Thanksgiving and Christmas look fine and thousands of them are to be seen here. W. N. C.

TOMATO PLANTS DYING.

I am sending you a sample of my tomato plants and wish you would tell me what is wrong with it. Can you also tell me the cause of the trouble? I had 6,000 plants, all transplanted in dirt bands in the greenhouse. They grew well till they were about three inches high; then they suddenly turned yellow. We moved them outside, but they gradually died, like the sample. The whole stock seems to be affected.

J. J. U.—Minn.

The sample tomato plant shows clearly that the cause of the trouble is stagnant, wet soil, together with low temperature. This is an unusually backward season and there has not been a day up to May 20 when tomato plants would stand outdoors without suffering, unless it be in the southern states.

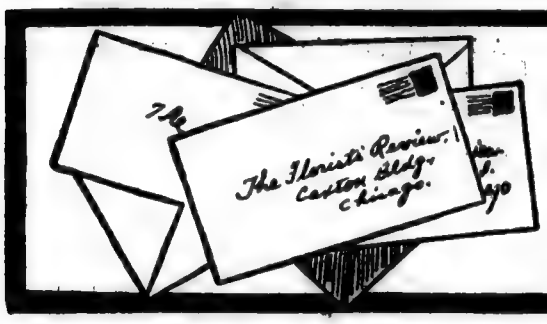
WHAT EVERYBODY KNOWS.

Everybody knows The Review is an exceptional advertising medium, but there still are a few who do not apply the idea to their own business, particularly if it is not a large business. Do letters like these mean anything to you?

Will you please cut out our vinca advertisement and the salvia advertisement? We are entirely sold out and are getting tired of sending back orders.—J. J. Clayton & Son, West Grove, Pa.

It pays to advertise in The Review. That little advertisement sold $1,000 worth of pelargoniums for me.—W. C. Knowles, Toledo, O.

Please discontinue our dracæna advertisement, as we are sold out.—H. B. Smith, Piqua, O.



I am sold out of carnation plants. Please discontinue my advertisement.—W. S. Kircher, Attica Floral Co., Attica, Ind.

We are sold out of pansies and verbenas. Please cut out our advertisement.—Addems, Morgan & Co., Paxton, Ill.

Please do not print the dracæna advertisement any more, as I am sold out and have to send money back.—B. C. Blake, Springfield, O.

If these friends of yours in the trade—all florists should be and most of them are friends—dispose of their stock in trade by using the columns of The Review, is there any reason why you should not use it, too? Ask yourself: Is there?

Marshall, Mo.—The Marshall Floral Co. reports the most successful season in its history of thirty-three years. Immanuel Wittrup, the manager, has made this company well known throughout central Missouri. The corporation produces a general line of plants and cut flowers and specializes in roses.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; thirty-seventh annual convention, Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 24, 25, 26, 1919.

IT is said that one of the contract growers of sets at Chicago has 23,000 pounds of onion seed in the ground in the growing section around South Holland, Ill.

SOME of the Holland bulb salesmen were so delayed by inability to get passports that they scarcely had reached the United States when the early birds began starting home. They say they find plenty of orders were left unpicked.

ANY seedsman who wishes a room at Hotel Sherman, during the Chicago convention, June 24 to 26, is urged to engage it today. The American Association of Nurserymen meets at the same place June 25 to 27 with the prospect of a record attendance and, anyway, all Chicago's leading hotels are full every night this season.

ANTICIPATING that the trade in England will be permitted to import certain classes of Dutch bulbs this autumn, the British Horticultural Trades' Association recently sent a committee to Holland to investigate conditions there, especially with regard to the quantity of bulbs likely to be available this season and the factors affecting the price. An interesting report is expected soon to be forthcoming.

THE Germain Seed & Plant Co., Los Angeles, has for some months published a weekly quarter page in the leading newspaper there. It is in the style of an imitation of a newspaper page and is called "Timely Tips." The unnamed author is one of those who know how to make advertising interesting and profitable. If your line is local advertising, send Germain a stamp for a specimen and you'll say so, too.

A HOLLAND concern with a New York office states: "From a cable received from Holland, it appears that England and Finland are both open to receive shipments from Holland. The cable states that no official confirmation has been given as yet, and we presume that this is advance information. If this is actually an accomplished fact and England will again take bulbs as formerly, this will have a big influence on the bulb market, and cannot be denied. Naturally, everything in the bulb line will be affected and the only variety that seems to be plentiful as yet is the hyacinth."

SUGAR BEET FROM GERMANY.

The War Trade Board announces (W. T. B. R. 764) that application for licenses to import sugar beet seed from Germany, or which originated in Germany, will be considered.

Licenses covering such importations, however, will not be issued until the importer in the United States has made effective arrangements to make the purchase of foodstuffs for Germany by depositing said purchase price with the American Relief Administration for remittance through said administration to the persons thereto entitled.

The duplicate receipt issued by the American Relief Administration must MISSOURI SEEDSMEN ORGANIZE.

The delegation of seedsmen which conferred with Governor Gardner about the new state seed law, brought about an organization of Missouri seedsmen, at Jefferson City, May 22, under the name of the Missouri Seed Dealers' Association. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, D. J. Bushnell; vice-president, Adolph Cornelli; secretary, Arthur W. Schisler, all of St. Louis; treasurer, H. Harnden, of Kansas City. J. J. B.

IOWA SEEDSMEN MEET.

The Iowa Seed Dealers' Association held its annual meeting at Des Moines, June 3. Because of the pressure of business, which most seedsmen still feel, the meeting was cut to one day this year. There was a good attendance and interesting sessions. Following officers were elected: M. Kurtzweil, of the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines; vice-president, B. H. Adams, of the Adams Seed Store, Decorah; secretary, A. M. Eldridge, of the Henry Field Seed Co., Shenandoah, reëlected; treasurer, Hon. John P. Hamilton, of the Hamilton Coal & Seed Co., Cedar Rapids, reëlected.

HOSPITALITIES AT MONTGOMERY.

As the guests of Greil Bros. Co., of Montgomery, Ala., the visiting seedsmen at last week's convention of the Southern Seedsmen's Association and a number of invited guests enjoyed a banquet at the Exchange hotel. A number of beautiful vases of sweet peas from the greenhouses of Rosemont Gardens, of Montgomery, graced the tables. Short talks were delivered by M. L. Greil, Terry T. Greil, Frank S. Love, Curtis Nye Smith and others.

After the banquet a picture of the convention was taken in the assembly room and then the members of the association and their friends attended the Grand theater as guests of the Harvey Seed Co.

President Louis B. Reuter, of New Orleans, La., was presented with a beautiful Elks' pin by the members of the association and Secretary Frank S. Love was presented with a handsome Knights of Pythias watch charm. The presentation of both gifts was made in one speech by Dick O'Bannon, of Claremore, Okla. Both President Reuter and Secretary Love were taken by surprise.

The association was organized in May, 1918, in Birmingham, Ala., with less than a dozen members present. The first annual convention of the association, which came to a close in Montgomery May 28, was attended by more than fifty delegates from practically all of the southern states. The new officers, whose election was reported in this column last week, are: President, E. A. Martin, of Jacksonville, Fla.; first vice-president, R. B. Buchanan, of Memphis, Tenn.; second vice-president, Dick O'Bannon, of Claremore, Okla.; secretary and treasurer, Frank S. Love, of Montgomery. The executive committee is: E. A. Martin, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Frank S. Love, of Montgomery; Dick O'Bannon, of Claremore, Okla.; L. B. Reuter, of New Orleans, La.; George B. McVay, of Birmingham. The mem-

Announcement

We beg to announce to our friends and patrons that we have removed from 1004 Lincoln Bldg., Philadelphia, to

50 PARK PLACE, NEW YORK CITY

Where we will be located in the future.

This important change in our business has been necessitated by conditions which we could no longer ignore.

Our increased importations of foreign stock, such as Japanese, French and Holland bulbs, etc., impel us to be at the port of entry. Other reasons, more or less of a private nature, likewise served to bring about this change.

We take the opportunity at this time to announce that our representative, Mr. E. F. Hoehl, has secured an interest in our business, and will continue traveling as heretofore.

We thank you for all past favors and confidently believe that, with improved facilities, we shall be enabled to serve you more promptly and efficiently than ever before.

S. S. Skidelsky & Company, 50 Park Place, New York City

bership committee is: C. O. Wilcox, of Louisville, Ky.; D. R. Mayo, of Knoxville, Tenn.; H. G. Rheney, of Charleston, S. C.; R. S. Lee, of Fort Smith, Ark., and H. D. McMichael, of Tampa, Fla.

TO PAY FOR FREE SEEDS!

The publishers of nationally circulated papers and magazines have a problem on their hands in the matter of the annual increases in postage under the present zone system. It had been figured that the zone system would be killed as soon as the war ended, but the second jump in the rates comes July 1, with no present indication that the obnoxious law will be repealed or amended before the third and fourth annual increases go into effect, in 1920 and 1921. For the first year nearly all publishers stood the increase as best they could, but many of those in the large eastern centers feel they have reached their limit and, one by one, are announcing special charges to some of their subscribers to meet the tax. The beginning seems to be, in most cases, to add $1 to the subscription price of the eastern papers for subscriptions west of the Mississippi river. In announcing the increase most of the publishers state their disapproval of the zone system in unmistakable language, but the best one The Review has seen is by the American Machinist, New York, which said:

> We are indeed ashamed that in this enlightened age of free schools and education it is possible to find men able and willing to sectionalize this country, to discriminate against the man who must get his education through reading and to make the mechanic and the engineer pay, in the form of postage on his technical paper, for the distribution of the farmer's congressional free seeds.

The inevitable result, unless this legislation is repealed, will be to put the distribution of all periodicals on the basis that existed fifty years ago, when readers paid a flat subscription price "plus the postage," but it is possible that when the members of congress west of the Mississippi begin to hear from their constituents they may not think so well of the zone system as they seem to have thought so far.

Sweet Pea Seed

For July and Early August to December Delivery

HAND PICKED—Not Machine Threshed. WINTER-FLOWERING SPENCER and ORCHID SWEET PEAS.

For Greenhouse Use

If you have been troubled with badly mixed Pea seeds, or immatured seed that does not grow, try our hand-picked seed. Each pod is picked when ripe and matured, instead of pulling up the vines and stacking them to cure, then threshing them in a machine as most growers do. While picking by hand the fields get rogued almost daily, not only for off colors but Winter flowering plants only are permitted to remain. Machine threshed seed has many mixed colors in it because it is impossible to clean the machine when changing from one color to another. Our system of hand-picking and hand-hulling does away with rogues and immatured seed. This seed is worth much more than others—but our prices are about the same.

This truly magnificent white was awarded a special Silver Medal when exhibited at the great International Show in New York March 20, 1915, also Certificate of Merit at the Spring Show of The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, March 23, 1915. Black seeded. Oz. $1.50, ¼ lb. $4.00, lb. $14.00.
Burpee's Improved Snowstorm. The result of a cross made between King White and Yarrawa, it embodies the best qualities of those two varieties and easily eclipses all early-flowering white Sweet Peas to date. The flowers are of Yarrawa size, but finer form, as the standard does not reflex but is magnificently bold, though charmingly waved. A vigorous grower, the immense flowers are invariably borne in fours on very long stems. This is the last word in White Sweet Peas. Oz. $2.50, ¼ lb. $8.00.

ADULTERATED OR MISBRANDED.

Proposed New Legislation.

Representative Byrnes, of South Carolina, has introduced in the United States Congress a bill "to regulate commerce in adulterated and misbranded seed, and to prevent the sale and transportation thereof, and for other purposes." The measure has been referred to the committee on agriculture, and Representative Byrnes states that he will ask an early hearing on it. The text of the proposed bill is as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the introduction into any state or territory or the District of Columbia from any other state or territory or the District of Columbia of any seed or bulbs adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act, is hereby prohibited; and any person who shall ship or deliver for shipment from any state or territory or the District of Columbia to any other state, territory or the District of Columbia, or who shall receive in any state or territory or the District of Columbia from any other state or territory or the District of Columbia, and having so received shall deliver, in original unbroken packages, for pay or otherwise, or offer to deliver to any other person any seed or bulbs adulterated or misbranded, within the meaning of this act, or any person who shall sell or offer for sale in the District of Columbia or any territory of the United States any such adulterated or misbranded seed or bulbs, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and for such offense be fined not exceeding $200 for the first offense, and upon conviction for each subsequent offense not exceeding $300, or be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

Rules for Enforcement.

Sec. 2. That the Secretary of Agriculture shall make uniform rules and regulations for carrying out the provisions of this act, including the collection and examination of specimens of seed and bulbs offered for sale in the District of Columbia or in any territory of the United States, or which shall be offered for sale in unbroken packages in any state or territory other than that in which they shall have been produced, or which may be submitted for examination by the chief agricultural official of any state, territory or the District of Columbia.

Sec. 3. That the examination of specimens shall be made in the Department of Agriculture or under direction and supervision of such department, for the purpose of determining from such examination whether such seeds or bulbs are adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act; and if it shall appear from such examination that any such specimen is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act, the Secretary of Agriculture shall cause notice to be given to the party from whom such sample was obtained. Any party so notified shall be given opportunity to be heard, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed as aforesaid, and if it appears that any of the provisions of this act have been violated by such party, then the Secretary of Agriculture shall certify at once the facts to the proper United States district attorney, with a copy of the results of the analysis or the examination of such article, duly authenticated by the analyst or officer making such examination under the oath of such officer. After judgment by the court, notice shall be given by publication in such manner as may be prescribed by the rules and regulations aforesaid.

Definitions of Terms.

Sec. 4. That it shall be the duty of each district attorney to whom the Secretary of Agriculture shall report any violation of this act, or to whom any commissioner of agriculture or agent of any state, territory or the District of Columbia shall present satisfactory evidence of such violation, to cause appropriate proceedings to be commenced and prosecuted in the proper courts of the United States without delay for the enforcement of the penalties, as in such case herein provided.

Sec. 5. That the term "seed," as used in this act, shall include all vegetable, flower, cereal, grass, clover, forage plant and other agricultural and horticultural seeds intended for seeding purposes.

Sec. 6. That, for the purpose of this act, seeds and bulbs may be deemed to be adulterated if any seeds or bulbs contain, respectively, dead seed, or weed seed, or dead bulbs, or any other substance materially reducing the value for seeding and planting purposes.

Sec. 7. That, for the purpose of this act, seeds and bulbs shall be deemed to be misbranded:

First. When one kind or distinguishable variety of seed or bulbs shall be offered for sale under the name of another kind or distinguishable named variety of seed or bulbs.

Second. If in package form and the contents are stated in terms of weight or measure, they are not plainly and correctly stated.

Third. If the article be falsely labeled or branded as to the state, territory, locality or country in which it is raised or produced.

When Dealer Is Exempted.

Sec. 8. That no dealer shall be prosecuted under the provisions of this act when he can establish a guaranty, signed by the wholesaler, jobber or other party residing in the United States from whom he purchases such articles, to the effect that the same is not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act, designating it. Such guaranty, to afford protection, shall contain the name and address of the party or parties making the sale of such article to such dealer, and in such case such party or parties shall be amenable to the prosecutions, fines and other penalties which would otherwise attach in due course to the dealer under the provisions of this act.

Sec. 9. That the term "territory," as used in this act, shall include the insular possessions of the United States. The word "person," as used in this act, shall be construed to import both the plural and singular, as the case demands, and shall include corporations, societies, companies and associations. When construing and enforcing the provisions of this act, the act, omission or failure of any officer, agent or other person acting for or employed by any corporation, company, society or association within the scope of his employment or office shall in every case be also deemed to be the act, omission or failure of such corporation, company, society or association as well as that of the person.

Sec. 10. That this act shall take effect and be in force upon the expiration of six months after its passage.

The bill probably will not be reached for consideration by the committee for a couple of weeks, and hearings will be accorded interested parties before action is taken on it. Tom.

The KENILWORTH Giant Pansy

Seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

All sorts and mixtures except where noted are: $5.00 per oz.; $1.30 per ¼ oz.; 4000 seeds, $1.00; trade packet of 1000 seeds, 30c; any 4 packets, $1.00. Please order by number.

22. GIANT KENILWORTH STRAIN. The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are from 3½- to 4-in. It is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings, rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.

24. GIANT KENILWORTH SHOW. An extra fine strain of large flowers; the immense flowers are of circular form and great substance. A beautiful collection of colors and markings.

26. GIANT KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE. Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 in. long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well.

28. GIANT MASTERPIECE. A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance; large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stems.

30. GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES. A superb mixture. Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich, velvety colors; reds are particularly conspicuous, the petals being distinctly marked with three or five large, dark blotches.

32. GIANT PARISIAN. The flowers are of enormous size and beautifully marked, mostly five dark blotches on white and yellow ground; an unusually showy mixture.

34. GIANT BRONZE. A fine mixture of all shades of velvety brown, bronze, Havana brown, mahogany and copper shades.

36. TRIUMPH OF GIANT. Remarkably beautiful. The imposing five-spotted flowers on long, vigorous stalks surmount the foliage in the most graceful manner, are of enormous size, perfectly round and of unusual substance. The individual petals are very broad and cover each other in such a manner as to make the flowers appear almost double, the border of every petal being conspicuously curled. The plants are of a robust growth and form compact bushes of a round shape.

40. GIANT BATH'S EMPRESS. The finest of fancy English Pansies. Flowers are very large, mostly frilled and blotched and of great substance and the colors are brilliant and varied.

10. KENILWORTH GIANT EXHIBITION is the very finest complete mixture ever sent out. Seed carefully saved only from marked plants of the best varieties, with the largest and best shaped flowers and richest coloring. It is impossible to convey an adequate idea of the delightful variations in color and markings of this unrivaled mixture. 500 seeds, 30c; 1000 seeds, 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.35; ¼ oz., $2.50; oz., $10.00.

12. KENILWORTH GIANT PRIZE is undoubtedly the largest flower and longest stemmed Pansy in the world. The enormous flowers are of perfect form and of great substance. Petals overlapped and undulating. The rich colorings and markings are widely varied, some flowers being almost self-colored. 500 seeds, 30c; 1000 seeds, 50c; ⅛ oz., $1.35; ¼ oz., $2.50; oz., $10.00.

New Early-Flowering or Winter-Blooming

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, with dark eye.

15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with dark eye.

16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.

17. CHARM OF MARCH. Dark velvety blue.

18. MIXED. The above four colors with other shades and variations. Each color separate or mixed.

500 seeds, 25c; 1000 seeds, 40c; ⅛ oz., $1.10; ¼ oz., $2.00; oz., $7.50.

20. PRINCESS. (The New Upright Pansy.) This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture on heavy stem carried well above the foliage. Attractive by brilliancy of its colors.

70. ORCHID-FLOWERED, MIXED. A dwarf, free bloomer, with a range of delicate colors that do not exist in any other Pansies; a remarkable combination of light rose, shell pink, blush mauve, fawn, light brown, orange and chamois.

GIANT PANSY SEED

In Separate Colors.

38. Mme. Perret. Red and wine shades.
42. Adonis. Light blue, white center.

58. Indigo Blue. Deep, velvety blue.
80. Purple. Large, rich deep color.
84. Mercury. New. A deep blackish purple; really self-colored.

The Market.

Memorial day business was excellent. The supply turned out to be larger than was expected. It came in at the last minute, however, and at the close of business for this day some stock was left over. As a whole, the day was the best Decoration day this market has ever had.

Roses are plentiful. All seasonable varieties may be had and they include many fancy blooms. The hot weather has affected carnations. Practically no Easter lilies are available. However, callas and rubrums may be had. Peonies are becoming plentiful and the price is dropping. The late varieties from this locality are in the market. Gladioli are fairly plentiful and have been finding an excellent market. Some home-grown lily of the valley met with good demand. Other offerings are cornflowers, snapdragons, marguerites, stocks and calendulas.

Greens of all kinds and particularly new ferns are meeting with a good demand.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Edna Belle Cordes, a sister of the late Mrs. C. E. Critchell, passed away May 27. She was buried from Mr. Critchell's Rose Hill residence June 3.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Its Effect Apparent.

The following letter, from Spokane, Wash., attests to the benefit resulting from the S. A. F. publicity campaign in a marked manner: "Enclosed please find my check for $10, doubling my subscription to the national publicity campaign. I am glad to subscribe this amount for the good of the cause. I am also glad to say that I have felt the effect of the last year's campaign. I hope to see this work continued, and you may call upon me for my subscription yearly. Yours truly, H. E. Reimers."

A press agency, through a regular dispatch, has also seen fit to publish an item dealing with the demand for flowers. The dispatch, sent out from Chicago, which has been widely printed, states that the flower business has had an unprecedented boom in recent months, according to information received, and the situation was declared to obtain not only in Chicago, but in all other cities.

Why Not Help?

Could anyone, in the face of this, truthfully assert that our campaign was not producing the results sought? What else could have caused a remarkable stimulation in trade, at a time when it would be least looked for? Not only has it been noticed by our florists, but outside interests, marveling at the condition, think it worth reporting. And yet there are thousands of florists who yet show no sign of willingness to share in the expense which such success entails. By this is meant growers as well as retailers.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Memorial day business was excellent. The supply turned out to be larger than was expected. It came in at the last minute, however, and at the close of business for this day some stock was left over. As a whole, the day was the best Decoration day this market has ever had.

Roses are plentiful. All seasonable varieties may be had and they include many fancy blooms. The hot weather has affected carnations. Practically no Easter lilies are available. However, callas and rubrums may be had. Peonies are becoming plentiful and the price is dropping. The late varieties from this locality are in the market. Gladioli are fairly plentiful and have been finding an excellent market. Some home-grown lily of the valley met with good demand. Other offerings are cornflowers, snapdragons, marguerites, stocks and calendulas.

Greens of all kinds and particularly new ferns are meeting with a good demand.

Take the carnation growers, for instance. We would ask them whether they had ever heard of a demand for carnations such as experienced this season, and also whether they would ever have dreamed of the possibility of such magnificent returns for their products as have been theirs this season. They may say, "Well, not so many carnations have been grown." None will believe this. Many of the biggest carnation growers, in spite of the fuel restrictions, planted their houses as usual, taking a chance on the lifting of restrictions, and they won out. Most of the rest curtailed on other plantings, but stuck to their carnations. What was the result? Our markets received the usual supply; if there was any diminution, it was negligible. And we have had no market gluts anywhere, a wonderful statement to make when we think of the gluts of other years.

Still, there are hundreds of carnation growers who have not supported the campaign fund. We all know that it is not because they cannot afford to do so.

Traveling Representatives.

Our committees have decided to put into the field representatives from the society to make personal solicitations of all who have not subscribed. Louis J. Reuter, one of our life members, has kindly undertaken to take up such work in New England. The assistance of all in the trade is asked wherever he may travel, in support of Mr. Reuter's efforts to increase the fund, in order that he may cover his territory to the best advantage. He is fully accredited, both in the matter of obtaining subscriptions for the fund and memberships for the society.

All local committees are urged to redouble their efforts in the interests of the fund. Time is passing and if we are to have the bumper business next season which we expect, and which our campaign is surely bringing us, we must complete our plans in time, but our fund must quickly be advanced to a point which will justify our committees in placing advertising contracts the necessary time ahead.

DENVER'S FLOWER INDUSTRY.

Enormous Quantity of Glass.

"If all the glass used in all the greenhouses of Denver were made into one huge greenhouse, it would cover the greater part of Cheesman park," said Maizie Donnegan in an illustrated special article in the Mothers' day issue of the Denver Post. Cheesman park is one of the largest in the Colorado city.

She then continued:

"As there are almost 2,000,000 square feet of glass used in these greenhouses, more than sixty concerns engaged in flower growing, and between 500 and 600 men earning their daily bread in this business, the growing of flowers may be classified as one of Denver's big industries.

"No manufacturers are producing more typical Colorado goods than the growers of roses, carnations, chrysanthemums and the great number of other varieties of sweet-scented and bright-colored flowers that Denver's florists produce.

Coal Consumption Large.

"Approximately 35,000 tons of coal are used annually in heating the greenhouses of Denver. Of this amount, John M. Mulvihill, of the Denver Gas & Electric Co., who has 135,000 square feet of glass at Elitch's Gardens, burns about 1,500 tons. The Park Floral Co. has 175,000 square feet; C. F. Maler has 140,000 square feet; Gaul Bros. have 125,000 square feet, and the number of establishments having in the neighborhood of 100,000 square feet are too numerous to mention. Among them, however, are those of the Boldt-Lundy Flower Shop, Charles A. and N. A. Benson, Emil Glauber, D. S. Grimes & Son, Fred H. Hall, C. Lengenfelder and A. E. Mauff.

"A large percentage of the flowers and plants grown in Denver are not consumed here, but are shipped to all parts of the west. Denver is the flower market for all the states of the Rocky mountain region, including Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico, Arizona, Texas, Utah, Montana, Idaho and parts of Kansas.

Supplies Big Territory.

"Climatic conditions make it necessary for the southern states to look to Denver for their floral products. For the northern states, too, this city has become the center of distribution on account of its railroad facilities.

"More than sixty concerns are engaged in growing flowers in Denver at the present time, but this is not counting the flower stores which do not produce flowers, but work them into attractive designs and sell them to the public. There are about thirty-five of these retail florists, who have the big problem on their hands of educating the public in regard to the different grades of flowers and the advantages obtained by buying a good quality of flowers, the same as in purchasing a good grade of any other article."

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Business was transacted satisfactorily during the last week. Ideal weather conditions were most helpful to the growers, so that bedding stock, the delivery of which had been greatly hindered, was all got rid of in good shape. Many thousands of geraniums were used Decoration day for the graves of the veterans. Cut stock during the last week was more plentiful. There was a good supply of lilac, valley, tulips, spiræa and other outdoor flowers, but the absence of peonies was noticeable. Only a small quantity was seen. Had we been favored with good weather about ten days before, there would have been outdoor flowers galore. Greenhouse stock is fairly plentiful and is disposed of daily without any waste. There is a good, steady demand for roses. The call is no longer for the short-stemmed stock, but for the medium and long grades. The rose stock arriving is of excellent quality and sells readily. Columbia, Shawyer, Maryland, Killarney and White Killarney are all in good supply.

A large supply of sweet peas has been arriving daily. Their quality is fine. They are chiefly in pink and white, few good lavenders being seen. There has been a good demand for carnations and the supply adequate. They continue to be of good quality and have firm stems. Delphinium, with long, well flowered spikes, sells readily. Excellent America gladioli are coming in and are in good demand. Snapdragon in pink, yellow, red and white is in good supply and sells fairly well. Much remarkably fine outdoor valley is seen and moves easily. Among the miscellaneous stock arriving are quantities of Darwin tulips, pansies, yellow and white daisies, mignonette, myosotis and cornflowers. The demand for orchids is not great. A few callas and Easter lilies arrive occasionally, but the demand is not large.

There is a good supply of green goods on hand, with a good demand. In blooming plants the supply is limited, there being little of anything on hand but a few hydrangeas and fuchsias. Gloxinias are seen occasionally.

Various Notes.

Window decorations suggestive of Decoration day were seen in all of the flower stores. Beautiful silk flags with numerous baskets in tricolor were in profusion. All stores report active sales for the holiday.

is cutting large quantities of fine Pink Delight.

The seedsmen are unanimous in saying that this season's business is without doubt one of the largest in the history of the trade. Now that the seed business is letting up a little, bedding plants, both vegetable and flower, are in big demand and sales are unusually heavy.

John Murrell reports splendid business during the last three weeks. Within that time he cut several thousand carnations. He has done a nice business in bedding stock and funeral work. His showroom has just been wired for electric light.

Cecil Lester, of Hart & Vick, Inc., spent Decoration day at Sodus bay with several other florists.

Florists at Mount Hope cemetery have been as busy as could be during the last few weeks. Their stores were practically jammed all day Sunday and it was not until just before the cemetery gates closed that there was a let-up. There was plenty of stock on hand.

Miss Myrtle Bradstreet, well known among the uptown florists, was married to C. Imberry, of this city, May 31. Best wishes of the trade are extended to the happy couple. H. J. H.

The Market.

Memorial day has come and gone and leading florists say that it was far better than in any previous year. The heroes of the hour, the veterans of '98 and the veterans of '65 marched in parade, their paths strewn with flowers. Plants and flowers were seen everywhere. It was a great day for florists and they certainly reaped a harvest.

The market was well supplied for the occasion and almost every flower had its demand. Practically everything was cleaned up early. Prices were satisfactory.

There were many peonies, but not enough for the demand. The top price for extra fancy stock was 15 cents. Roses had good call, principally the short and medium-stemmed stock. The longer-stemmed stock demanded good prices, especially Mrs. Charles Russell and Ophelia. Carnations were short of 15 cents for extra fancy varieties. The supply was better than usual for Memorial day. All miscellaneous stock had a big call. Snapdragons, daisies, cornflowers and calendulas were in big demand. In greens flat ferns have been scarce, the new crop coming too soft. Smilax, asparagus and galax met with the heaviest demand in years.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will celebrate its thirty-third anniversary at its next meeting, June 12.

The first outdoor meeting of the St. Louis Association of Gardeners took place June 1 at the country home of Eugene H. Angert, in Clayton, Mo. The attendance was large and the meeting interesting throughout.

The local florists' publicity committee will hold an important meeting June 10.

Frank Fillmore celebrated his thirty-ninth wedding anniversary May 26. Incidentally, Mr. Fillmore has the proud record of having missed but two meetings of the Florists' Club since 1891, when he became a member. Would there were more like him!

President Hummert, of the St. Louis Florists' Club, while in Jefferson City lately, had a conversation with H. Archias, secretary of the Missouri State Florists' Association. Plans were made for a meeting of all florists in the state at the state fair, to be held at Sedalia in August. Present officers of the State Florists' Association are: President,

All members of the trade who responded to the nation's call are now safe at home except Andre Bourdet, son of Jules Bourdet. Andre is still in France. He writes that he will be home the latter part of July.

The Kalisch Bros. Floral Co. sent the market a fine large cut of delphiniums, peonies and Shasta daisies for Memorial day. A big cut of all varieties of gladioli is coming on at their floral farm in Clayton, Mo. The Smith Wholesale Floral Co. handles the output.

The fine weather on Memorial day was a great help to the Koenig Floral Co., F. H. Meinhardt, John Nyflot and Mrs. Schloemer, whose establishments are across the way from the two big cemeteries. All report more business than they could handle.

crop for Memorial day, as also did Cerny, Pilcher, Steidle and Bruenig.

From reports of the leading retailers, this year's Memorial day business was quite a surprise to them. Never before were preparations so large and business so good. They attribute this largely to the attractive advance advertising in all parts of the city by the publicity committee.

A visit to the establishments of G. W. Grossart and A. G. Fehr, in Belleville, Ill., found Mr. Grossart and the junior Grossart busy with all kinds of floral work. Their new automobile delivery with the slogan, "Say It with Flowers," is one of the most attractive in Belleville. At A. G. Fehr's place all hands were busy packing thousands of peonies for Memorial day shipments to the St. Louis and Chicago wholesale markets.

A trip to Alton, Ill., visiting the establishments of the Alton Floral Co., Joseph Krug and Miss Dietchey, found all in the midst of a heavy day's business in funeral work. Preparations for a heavy Memorial day demand were also in progress. Plant sales here have been heavy all the season. J. J. B.

flowers of many kinds. Cool nights and days, many of them cloudy, with plenty of moisture, held back peonies until late in the month and then a few warm days toward the last brought the crop to perfection at exactly the right time. This pleasant feature of having plenty of stock and all of it in good condition added to the biggest business that Memorial day has ever brought and left all members of the trade in a happy frame of mind. With few exceptions, wholesalers and retailers report the best day of its kind ever known. All the wholesalers cleaned up. The abundance of outdoor flowers and the fact that so many homes have some kind of a flowering shrub or plant kept people from buying as many flowers as they would if the home-grown ones were not available.

Another thing that interfered with sales was the quantity of peonies offered at low prices by department stores. One department store sold these flowers at 85 cents per dozen and had heavy sales.

This, of course, had an effect, but the verdict of the majority is that the day was better than ever, just as each of the big holidays has eclipsed corresponding days in former years.

Prices were not advanced greatly, owing to the abundance of stock, and this helped to create a feeling of satisfaction on the part of dealers as well as customers. No complaints were heard on any side and buying was on a generous scale. Peonies brought from 6 to 8 cents wholesale and roses from 6 to 15 cents. Carnations, which were the only scarce item, were 6 cents. There was a great demand for wreaths. These sold at retail at $3 to $15.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Mayme Reed, 38 years old, daughter of T. A. Mosely, Kansas City, Kan., died May 29. She had been in poor health for some time. She is survived by her husband, one daughter and two sisters. Funeral services were held May 31.

After three wonderfully busy months, W. L. Rock is away for a fortnight or so. He will go to Detroit for a conference with other officers of the F. T. D.

J. E. K.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

"Memorial day was a day of pleasant memory," observed Henry Eberhardt, of the Rosendale Flower Shop, "as far as business was concerned. Everything that carried a flower was sold easily and at a good price. Hydrangea otaksa seemed to be more popular than ever, judging from the sales. Cut flowers took second place."

Julius Eger made a decided hit when he donated the flowers that were dropped upon the heads of the war veterans by an army aviator during the Memorial day services.

The Mohawk Greenhouse Co. and J. C. Hatcher both report record sales.

Some of the finest wreaths that were grouped around the soldiers' monument in Crescent park were the work of W. H. Grupe, of the Carl Co.

E. V. B. Felthousen says that, next to geraniums, Funkia variegata is the best seller this season. This plant is scarce and is never really to be had in sufficient quantity.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The market this week is steady. There is a good supply of all seasonable stock. The peony holds the center of the stage. There were plenty for Memorial day. There are enough good outdoor roses and those from the houses are holding up well. Carnations are fast passing. They are becoming small and get sleepy fast. All miscellaneous stock is in good supply and the demand holds good.

Bedding plants are selling well and at prices never heard of before. The market is satisfactory in every respect.

Publicity and the Local Trade.

Last week I spoke of the great mass of flowers that were used in the inauguration of the new mayor and city council. Everything was flowers, even to the G. O. P. elephant. This goes to show what the publicity campaign is doing for the trade. In another part of this issue The Review is reproducing a facsimile of a proclamation of the new mayor for the return of our boys from "over there."

The local committee is just starting out on a drive to get funds for this worthy cause. The slogan, "Say It with Flowers," is one of the best any trade organization ever had. People are beginning to use it; it is fast becoming a byword with the public, just as "There is a Reason" is with one of the best selling breakfast foods. It is up to the florists of our city to get behind this campaign.

The trade is beginning to wake up to the good that publicity is doing. As I go about the different stores I often hear of instances of increased sales that can be traced to this advertising. It would be a great calamity to let this campaign fail now that victory is in sight and the trade is just beginning to see results. And, while the last year has been a strenuous one, each year in the future will become easier. Too much cannot be said for the faith of those members of the national publicity committee who have given their time and means to make this a success. At the next meeting of the club, which will be held in Royal Arcanum hall, "Publicity" will be the feature of the evening. An effort will be made to find out just how the publicity campaign has helped business during a year that was one of obstacles. William F. Ekas, state vice-president of the S. A. F., and secretary of the local committee, who has kept in close touch with the workings of the national committee, will speak on this most important subject.

This, of course, had an effect, but the verdict of the majority is that the day was better than ever, just as each of the big holidays has eclipsed corresponding days in former years.

Prices were not advanced greatly, owing to the abundance of stock, and this helped to create a feeling of satisfaction on the part of dealers as well as customers. No complaints were heard on any side and buying was on a generous scale. Peonies brought from 6 to 8 cents wholesale and roses from 6 to 15 cents. Carnations, which were the only scarce item, were 6 cents. There was a great demand for wreaths. These sold at retail at $3 to $15.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Mayme Reed, 38 years old, daughter of T. A. Mosely, Kansas City, Kan., died May 29. She had been in poor health for some time. She is survived by her husband, one daughter and two sisters. Funeral services were held May 31.

After three wonderfully busy months, W. L. Rock is away for a fortnight or so. He will go to Detroit for a conference with other officers of the F. T. D.

J. E. K.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

"Memorial day was a day of pleasant memory," observed Henry Eberhardt, of the Rosendale Flower Shop, "as far as business was concerned. Everything that carried a flower was sold easily and at a good price. Hydrangea otaksa seemed to be more popular than ever, judging from the sales. Cut flowers took second place."

Julius Eger made a decided hit when he donated the flowers that were dropped upon the heads of the war veterans by an army aviator during the Memorial day services.

The Mohawk Greenhouse Co. and J. C. Hatcher both report record sales.

Some of the finest wreaths that were grouped around the soldiers' monument in Crescent park were the work of W. H. Grupe, of the Carl Co.

E. V. B. Felthousen says that, next to geraniums, Funkia variegata is the best seller this season. This plant is scarce and is never really to be had in sufficient quantity. W. M.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The market this week is steady. There is a good supply of all seasonable stock. The peony holds the center of the stage. There were plenty for Memorial day. There are enough good outdoor roses and those from the houses are holding up well. Carnations are fast passing. They are becoming small and get sleepy fast. All miscellaneous stock is in good supply and the demand holds good.

Bedding plants are selling well and at prices never heard of before. The market is satisfactory in every respect.

Publicity and the Local Trade.

Last week I spoke of the great mass of flowers that were used in the inauguration of the new mayor and city council. Everything was flowers, even to the G. O. P. elephant. This goes to show what the publicity campaign is doing for the trade. In another part of this issue The Review is reproducing a facsimile of a proclamation of the new mayor for the return of our boys from "over there."

The local committee is just starting out on a drive to get funds for this worthy cause. The slogan, "Say It with Flowers," is one of the best any trade organization ever had. People are beginning to use it; it is fast becoming a byword with the public, just as "There is a Reason" is with one of the best selling breakfast foods. It is up to the florists of our city to get behind this campaign.

The trade is beginning to wake up to the good that publicity is doing. As I go about the different stores I often hear of instances of increased sales that can be traced to this advertising. It would be a great calamity to let this campaign fail now that victory is in sight and the trade is just beginning to see results. And, while the last year has been a strenuous one, each year in the future will become easier. Too much cannot be said for the faith of those members of the national publicity committee who have given their time and means to make this a success. At the next meeting of the club, which will be held in Royal Arcanum hall, "Publicity" will be the feature of the evening. An effort will be made to find out just how the publicity campaign has helped business during a year that was one of obstacles. William F. Ekas, state vice-president of the S. A. F., and secretary of the local committee, who has kept in close touch with the workings of the national committee, will speak on this most important subject.

up at the next club meeting will be representation of our club on the board of directors of the S. A. F. It requires 100 members in our club to obtain the representation—we already have fifty and we are going out to get fifty more. R. A. Vincent and Mr. Ekas are behind this move with their whole hearts. Article I of the new constitution recently adopted reads: "The title of this organization shall be the Florists' Club of Baltimore, and its object is to advance the social and business interests of its members." This is just what Mr. Vincent proposes that the club shall accomplish, and he feels that one of the first moves in the rehabilitation of the club is to have representation in the national association.

Everyone can remember the good work done by this organization during the war, and in the future the Baltimore club when these questions arise wants to be in a position where it can appeal, as it were, to the court of last resort. Our club was never in better standing than it is at the present time. We have just adopted a constitution and by-laws that are liberal in their scope, and we have a presiding officer whose hobby is the club and its welfare, but we must remember that one man cannot do it all. It is up to the club itself to get behind him and uphold his hands.

Various Notes.

One of the happiest families in Baltimore May 27 was that of Mary Johnston. They received a radio message that day from the S. S. Mallory telling them that their son Robert would arrive in New York the next day. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston left for New York with Miss Isabel, to be on the pier to welcome him home.

Charles Feast, of Samuel Feast & Sons, says that never in the history of their business, and this is the oldest establishment in the city, have they had a season to equal the one just past. Mr. Feast is most optimistic over the future of the business, but one thing he feels strongly over is the unreasonable advance in flowers at certain seasons. Mr. Feast's idea is that while supply and demand regulate prices, and although at certain seasons advanced prices are justifiable, still the florists' business should be conducted the same as any other business and prices should at least be kept in season. Let the public get the idea that the florists are gouging and it will spread quicker than the slogan, "Say It with Flowers."

Tate.

NEWPORT, R. I.

A discussion of plans for the June flower show occupied most of the time at the monthly meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society May 28. It is expected that the exhibition of roses and berries will be larger than any shown here for several years.

Henry Moller has taken the store at 128 Bellevue avenue for the season, as a retail flower store.

A. McKay, of this city, was a business visitor in Boston last week.

Robert Dunn has purchased the Hass Greenhouses, on Almy court, about an acre of land and the barn. He was formerly a private gardener at Fairhaven, Mass.

The Wilson Nurseries donated the large community Christmas tree, a spruce, that has been set out on the Mall.

Walter Barth, 40 Morton avenue, has been doing a big business in bedding and foliage plants.

Edward R. Hass, formerly conducting the Hass Greenhouses, has taken a position as head gardener on a private place.

W. H. M.

Knox, Ind.—I. L. Totten has been in the florists' business only five years, but within that short time he has built up a splendid trade, not only here but in the neighboring towns. He is now making arrangements to erect a large addition to his greenhouses.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

St. Helena, Cal.—Charles W. Hibbard, formerly an employee of A. W. Pooley, of Pomona, Cal., is the proprietor of Ye Little Flower Shoppe, a flower store opened in this place recently Capitola, Cal.—Word comes from James A. Brown, of Brown's Bulb Ranch, that he has acquired an automobile in the east and, with his family, is driving it home. When last heard from they were at Indianapolis and expected to reach home about June 10. Mr. Brown's trip was for business. Orders for freesia and gladiolus bulbs for delivery after harvest are said to be the largest on record.

WHAT HAVE YOU?

The Coronado Nursery, San Diego, Cal., sent The Review an advertisement of everlasting flowers to occupy four inches across two columns, with instructions to print it three times. June 1, after the paper carrying the second insertion had been out only three days, the advertiser telegraphed:

Cancel the order for the third insertion, as we are well cleaned out.—Coronado Nursery, San Diego, Cal.

There are many Pacific Coast concerns which are just beginning to appreciate that The Review can be of great use to them.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

The supply of stock for the Memorial day business was ample and a big business was done by all the retailers, while the wholesalers all report the biggest day in their history. Shipping orders came early and continued until the last minute, everyone being on the jump. Carnations were of fair quality and the best shipping stock was snapped up quickly every day. Roses were poor, but a fine lot of gladioli helped out. Statice and other "everlastings" were sold in greater quantities than ever before.

Various Notes.

Albert Beverley, of Mission Oak Nursery, Santa Barbara, has been in the city this week looking up stock.

Among other funeral work this week, D. S. Purdie & Co. had a fine blanket of sweet peas and orchids. Mr. Purdie is greatly improved in health.

At the store of S. Murata & Co. everybody was busy during the week preceding Memorial day. Large stocks were moved and a satisfactory business was reported.

Mrs. Taylor, wife of James Taylor, superintendent of Laughlin park, presented her husband with a nine-pound girl May 29.

The L. A. Floral Co. reports the biggest Memorial day business in the history of the firm. H. R. Richards.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The market conditions were all that could have been desired, good business and abundance of stock. Decoration day has not been so good for years. There were plenty of flowers for everyone and the trade was able to take care of customers in good shape this year. A great many outside flowers are coming in now and, owing to the recent rains, most of them are at their best.

Various Notes.

Clarke Bros. have been showing some fine water lilies grown by Mr. Broetche.

Lalane's Flower Shop has a quantity of pretty pink lupine which will meet with a ready sale.

The stores are showing some fine Colvillei gladioli of the Peach Blossom and Blushing Bride varieties. The flowers are coming from home-grown bulbs, which apparently are superior to the Holland-grown stock flowered in previous seasons.

John Gower, of Newberg, supplied the local stores with a quantity of fine peonies, Spanish iris and pyrethrum.

Henry Kahn reports that the St. Louis snapdragon is a poor seller in Oregon. It is not a good color and the ends are brittle; in fact, they break with the most careful handling. L. T. S.

Fred M. Young, until recently of Young & Lester, at Walla Walla, Wash., has returned to Portland and purchased the Martin & Forbes range of glass at Mount Tabor, consisting of 100,000 feet of glass and about eight acres of valuable land in one of Portland's best suburbs. Mr. Young is known to the Pacific northwest trade as a first-class grower and operator and under his management the range will no doubt continue to produce the high-grade stock for which it has been noted. George Spencer, who has been foreman of the place for seventeen years, stays in his employ. Mr. Martin will continue to operate the Martin & Forbes range at Forest Grove, Ore., for the present. The trade in general welcome Mr. Young back to Portland, where he retained many friends of the former days, when he was a grower for the concern whose range he has now purchased. F. A. V.

A BIT OF LOS ANGELES HISTORY.

The late Louis J. Stengel, of East Los Angeles, was the oldest plant grower, in years of service, in the state of California. Now that he is gone, the writer believes himself to be the dean of Los Angeles plantsmen, having been thirty-two years in the craft in Los Angeles, starting with the Germain Fruit Co.

The Finest Strain in America

SOW them now for midwinter and early Spring blooming. Seed saved from an unexcelled collection of pot grown plants, remarkable for their compact habit and enormous size of blooms; the latter often attain a diameter of four inches and over.

We have been selecting the finest plants for seed bearers for many years and the seed has been carefully hand picked, is strong in germinating qualities, and contains a wide range of colors, running from purest white to darkest crimson, including all the intermediate shades of blue, lavender, pink, scarlet, etc.

Azaleas and similar plants will be scarce during the coming Winter. A batch of these plants will find ready sale if well grown.

OUR NEW ROSE

HOWARD & SMITH,
P. O. Box 484
LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

We have other new seedling roses and flower seed novelties to announce later.

This concern, founded by the late Eugene Germain, is now the Germain Seed & Plant Co., and the present head, M. L. Germain, was then a little boy in knee breeches, though even in those days he made almost daily visits to the nursery with his father. It is pleasant to relate that both boy and business have made rapid growth since the "good old days." In those times local fanciers used to visit Dr. Howard, botanist and plant lover, on the corner of Ninth and Olive streets, and there met a youth by the name of Fred, who is the founder and president of the well-known firm of Howard & Smith. Their fine modern city plant is located on the old home grounds and until a few years ago, when increasing business made their removal necessary, some of the original trees, 40 years of age, were still standing.

Ernest Braunton.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Stock is in good condition. While a few of the choicer varieties of cut flowers, such as orchids, gardenias and one or two of the roses, are not any too plentiful, the rest of the flowers are abundant and of exceptionally fine quality. Peonies are in their prime and are bringing good prices. Statice, both fresh and dried, is one of the popular decorative plants and the comparatively new variety in an attractive rose color is proving a strong seller for basket work. Carnations are improving and a good cut was on hand for Memorial day. Roses are in fine condition and most of the dealers report a close clean-up in all varieties. Gladioli, both small and large, are plentiful and of splendid quality, bringing good prices. Delphinium is coming in better this week, the cut being heavy and well flowered on account of the moderate weather.

Foxgloves and snapdragons are making their appearance in profusion, as are cornflowers, marigolds, gaillardias, sweet peas, calliopsis and other outdoor flowers. Prices are keeping up well; in fact, one or two retailers mentioned that most flowers were high for this season of the year.

There was a tremendous rush in the shipping trade last week, stimulated by out-of-town orders for Memorial day. Both wholesale and retail establishments worked at top speed to get shipments away on time.

Various Notes.

The Charles C. Navlet Co. worked hard on Decoration day orders. They received a fine cut of carnations in anticipation of a strong demand. Bedding plants are still selling well, the season being unusually long. The big rose plants which this concern had secured in large numbers are practically sold out and there are few dahlia bulbs left about the local market.

The United Flower & Supply Co. reports a satisfactory clean-up on all stock. K. Kimura said that there was sufficient stock for all purposes over the holiday and that while prices were not above normal, they held up well in all the markets. This company has a large supply of the new rose-colored variety of statice on hand and during the middle of the week had an exceptionally fine stock of sweet peas, carnations, roses and other varieties of outdoor plants. Memorial day orders were bigger this year than ever before.

Mr. Domoto, of Domoto Bros., is a heavy shipper this week. He says that the number of peonies and gladioli that he has delivered out of San Francisco has never been equaled in his experience.

A. Miller, president of the American Bulb Co., passed through San Francisco recently on his way to Japan. Owing to the scarcity of bulbs, Mr. Miller will visit the Japanese markets in an effort to secure sufficient stock for the needs of his organization.

L. Devencenzi, associated with the Eddy Floral Co., of Reno, Nev., was in San Francisco to make arrangements for Memorial day stock.

C. Kooyman, of the C. Kooyman Co., reports an abundance of all varieties of flowers and remarked particularly on the splendid quality of gladioli at the present time.

Shellgrain & Ritter, at the Sutter hotel, were rushed with orders. An attractive Memorial day window display appeared in their establishment last week. It depicted a battle field in miniature, strewn with crosses—striking evidences of the sacrifices that many young Americans made last year.

The J. B. Boland store employed suitable decorations for Memorial day. A shield with the United States' emblem, made of red and white sweet peas and blue cornflowers, was flanked by a laurel wreath. In the Boland store were seen the first dahlias of the season, some fine specimens of a single red variety.

An immense basket filled with intense blue delphinium and apricot-tinted Halley gladioli made a beautiful showing in Joseph's window one day this week. This firm is busy with special decorating and funeral work and reported a lengthy order list for Memorial day.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. reports a scarcity of orchids. A few good shipments are arriving from Dr. Parker, of Santa Cruz, but outside of this the stock at present is rather low. Rhododendrons are in fine shape and a number of good plants have been shipped to the local stores from the San Mateo nurseries. All departments of the organization were rushed filling Memorial day orders, besides doing a large decorating business, particularly in connection with the Palace hotel stand. The landscape department, too, is working hard, as many people are getting their flower gardens into shape once more.

Albert O. Stein is busy with numerous

SPLENDENS

Fischer's beautiful lavender Freesia—the great commercial sort—the Freesia that can be used for any and all purposes, from wedding decorations to funeral work, where lavender tone is wanted.

Can be used alone or combined with other tall flowers for decorative effect. Given rich culture, will produce large blooms with strong, stiff stems, two feet long and over, with luxuriant foliage well up the stem. Color is a lovely shade of bluish lavender, varying slightly; but all are of equal beauty and elegance.

Great care was used in propagating this stock and nothing but the choicest sorts were used. Each sort had to possess the following qualities: Large size; long, strong stems; healthy, vigorous growth; strong fragrance; beautiful color, and great keeping qualities. When a well grown bench of this superfine Freesia is in bloom, it is a grand sight.

Don't stock up with poor Freesias, when stock of this most elegant Freesia can be procured.

All of my other varieties of Freesias are of the same fine stock, flowers of which are eagerly bought by the best people of the land at prices never before paid for Freesias. I have now stock of SPLENDENS in sufficient quantity to offer it to the trade at a lower price than was ever possible before. Don't wait, as the price will not be any lower for some time to come, if ever, as growing conditions here in California are too uncertain to grow valuable stock outside. Therefore, stock will never be plentiful. Other good varieties will follow in quick succession, as soon as stock is ready.

Prices: $50.00 per 1000; $7.00 per 100; $1.50 per dozen. 250 lots at 1000 rates. Cash with order. Usual trade discount to dealers. Only good, flowering bulbs will be offered for sale.

small luncheon and dinner decorations. The first zinnias of the season were displayed in Mr. Stein's shop on Sutter street, but as yet the coloring and quality are not of the best.

FORT WORTH, TEX.

In 1885 the firm of Drumm & Baker Bros., of this city, was founded. In 1889 a division was made and the firm of Baker Bros. was formed, composed of William Baker and James B. Baker. The business started with a little heal yard for fruit trees and two small greenhouses. Today the capital and surplus of the company is approximately $100,000, counting nothing for the good will and the value of the fact that it is a going concern.

Baker Bros. Co. was formed in 1907 after the death of William Baker, with J. B. Baker as president and general manager and W. J. Baker as secretary and treasurer. The company makes a specialty of growing ornamentals and of landscape work. It also has greenhouses of about 50,000 square feet of glass, modern in equipment and up-to-date in every respect. The uptown store and office are located at 1013 Houston street. At the store are sold largely cut flowers and seeds and it is the headquarters for over fifty agencies scattered over a large part of northern Texas and Oklahoma.

There are four separate nurseries, so situated as to furnish suitable soil for the various kinds of trees and ornamental shrubs. The home nursery, on which is located the greenhouses, aquariums, packing rooms, warehouse, etc., is well landscaped and it will repay any one interested in flowers and landscaping for the trouble of a visit to it.

A limited quantity of cut flowers is grown, but a large portion of the flowers sold in the store and through the agents are purchased on the northwestern flower markets.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex.; vice-president, J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa.; secretary, Charles Sizemore, Louisiana, Mo.; counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass.; treasurer, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; forty-fourth annual convention, Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 25 to 27, 1919.

THE Meadow Brook Nurseries, Inc., of Englewood, N. J., have taken over the business of John M. Hunter & Son, also of that city, and will combine the two establishments.

ONE VIEW OF SITUATION.

"Almost all of the western fellows have the same tale to tell," says a Kansas nurseryman, "and this is it: Too busy, having to put in about sixteen hours per day to keep things going on account of shortage of help; season backward and with an extra amount of moisture and loss of so much time owing to rainy days that nearly all western nurserymen are snowed under; no chance for additional help in the near future, as the big harvest is about on and all available help will be required at fancy wages and the poor nurseryman must sit back and do the best he can.

"The outlook is good for business, with the shortest supply of fruit stock that the country has had for many years. The question that is now bothering the retail men is, will stock get so high that they cannot afford to buy and will they have to stop selling? They feel that there is a limit above which stock cannot be retailed. They feel that if prices get too high it will soon be the same old thing of too much stock and too big brush piles, with a big cut in prices each year."

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

It Will Make Trade History.

The forty-fourth annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen will be held at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 25 to 27 and, to quote Secretary Sizemore, "it is going to make history."

hold their annual meetings at the same place in the same week, so it is suggested that those who wish rooms at Hotel Sherman engage them at once. Chicago hotels are full every night this season.

AMERICAN PEONY SOCIETY.

The seventeenth annual exhibition of the American Peony Society, which takes place in the Board of Commerce, Detroit, Mich., June 17 and 18, already gives indications of being the best in the history of the society. The date fixed for the event this year is over a week later than that of the exhibition at Cleveland a year ago.

Many growers who wished to make exhibits in the different classes then were unable to do so owing to the date, which was found too early for the great number of growers adjacent to the lake region. The cold weather that has prevailed so far this season has been most favorable to the growers in the north central states and many of them will take advantage of these exceptional conditions and make extensive exhibits.

No charge will be made this year for admission to the exhibition and the greatest efforts will be made to have a big attendance of the flower-loving public to further popularize the peony, so that people with even a small plot of ground will hereafter grow some peonies.

The Detroit Florists' Club is coöperating in this event with the American Peony Society and will have charge of the exhibition. Peony growers everywhere are urged to do their utmost to make exhibits. Those who are unable to bring their flowers may safely address them, charges prepaid, to the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, 264 Randolph Street, Detroit, Mich., marked "For the Peony Exhibition." These will be given special care and properly staged in the exhibition hall. All entries for competition and correspondence in connection with the same may be addressed to J. F. Sullivan, 361 Woodward avenue, Detroit, Mich.

Arrangements have been made with the internal revenue office at Detroit whereby Canadian peony growers may send their exhibits free of duty. Simply mark the shipment "For the Peony Exhibition," care of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, prepaying express charges.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Market.

Peonies are simply flooding the market. Having just missed it for Decoration day, they are now here in full force. Almost all shades are available and the blooms are of good quality.

Roses are adequate, ranging from $3 to $5. Carnations are holding their own, but are on a gradual decline. These have been moving well at from $3 to $6. Gladioli at $1.50 and $2 are more apparent but not yet conspicuous.

Snapdragons have ceased to be plentiful. A few short ones are all that remain. Sweet peas and calla lilies are also practically over with. Being between seasons, the winter flowers on their last lap and the summer ones not yet on the scene, only a limited variety is being offered.

With warmer weather there has come a rushing demand for bedding stock. Porch boxes are in especial favor this year. The high prices seem to have affected the sale of this stock little, if any, as there is already a shortage of blooming geraniums and potted ferns, and all other plants are moving well.

Memorial Day.

A shortage of stock was the predicament here Memorial day. Everywhere in the city, florists were sold out completely long before the demand was satisfied. Had flowers been plentiful, Decoration day stood a fair chance of being the biggest day of the year. The sun shone the entire day and the memorial feeling ran high, having been accelerated by the returned heroes of the recent war.

The peonies were just a few days too late. Irises were fairly plentiful, but could not take the place of the peonies. Feverfew and candytuft were available in small quantities and at high prices. Other flowers were by no means in adequate supply. This scarcity caused a great boost in prices, which were by far higher than in previous years at this time. The filling of cemetery vases was also a big item, as all wanted it done before Memorial day.

Various Notes.

Robert Fohl is now with Baur & Steinkamp. This firm has two or three benches of cut-back carnations that will flower this summer.

Axel Nelson is cutting some good roses.

Locusts are quite numerous in this vicinity. In the cemetery, where conditions are almost ideal for them, great swarms are seen. Those on the ground can be scooped up by the bushel.

Hartje & Elder cut between 50,000 and 75,000 daisies for Memorial day.

Oliver Steinkamp spent Sunday in Richmond.

The demand for vase filling came all in a rush, the public waiting for the warm weather. The result was that many were disappointed in not getting their vases filled before Memorial day.

The death of Stephen T. Hitz, a prominent member of the trade who died May 26, is reported in the obituary column. E. E. T.

GERANIUMS

We suggested last season about this time that orders be placed for the coming season. Some heeded this suggestion and had Geraniums to sell this spring. Others put off ordering until they were ready for them; therefore they had none to sell. Can you give any reason why they will be more plentiful next season than this? We can give a number of reasons why they will not be.

We are booking orders for the wise ones now at $25.00 per 1000. The price will not be any less, perhaps more.

Send for Catalogue.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

While Memorial day business was larger than ever before, it was somewhat disappointing and it was evident that florists lost an excellent opportunity. Taking heed of the warning sounded even before Easter that there would be a shortage of plants, and that flowers would be high for Memorial day, the department stores throughout Providence and the adjoining cities bought heavily of the made-up wreaths, crosses, sprays, etc., of magnolia, cycas and galax leaves, with wax and other artificial flowers, and then offered them in quantities at cut prices. Although the florists sold large numbers of these made-up pieces, the harvest was reaped by the outsiders. Even stores that never deal in flowers had immense stocks.

Cut flowers at wholesale ruled fully up to the standard of Easter. Carnations and roses were in the greatest supply, bringing as high as 12½ to 20 cents each for carnations and 15 to 35 cents for roses. There was comparatively little bouquet work and an entire absence of peonies, lilacs and similar blooms that usually help out on this day. Choice geranium plants sold from 50 cents to $2; petunias, at similar prices; baskets of a dozen pansies or verbenas sold for 35 cents to $1.

Various Notes.

Edgar L. Nock, for several years a successful orchid grower in the Auburn section, has entered the heating business and is installing the Simplex crude oil heating apparatus.

E. J. Brooke, of T. J. Johnston & Co., had the orders for all the floral pieces for the funeral of Edward Holbrook, president of the Gorham Mfg. Co. The funeral was at Brookline, Mass., and Mr. Brooke carried all the flowers to that place and made up the pieces there, so that they were perfectly fresh.

The sons of the late William Hay are beginning to get satisfactory results from their houses at Oaklawn.

O'Connor Bros., of Pawtucket, have opened a retail flower store at 195 Mineral Spring avenue.

Lapham, 17 Music Hall building, Pawtucket, reports so much outdoor work that he is unable to secure workmen enough to do it. W. H. M.

Marion, Kan.—Fred Gowen, who recently was released from military service, is planning the erection of a modern range here. This locality is developing a big oil boom and, as there are no greenhouse establishments in the vicinity, Mr. Gowen expects to build up a big business.

Colorado Springs, Col.—The Broadmoor Greenhouses, formerly owned and operated by William Foster, have been purchased by the Broadmoor Hotel Co., which will run them under the direct management of Mr. Foster, who will also supervise all the floral and landscape work for the Broadmoor hotel.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Local florists, especially those located near cemeteries, report an excellent Memorial day business. Many thousands of potted geraniums were sold. Other potted plants suitable for the decoration of graves were disposed of in smaller quantities. Gladioli have just made their appearance in the local market. Peonies, which came in a couple of weeks ago, have improved in quality greatly as the result of more sunny weather. The quantity of peonies coming into the market has greatly increased. Prices still keep up. Sweet peas are quite plentiful at the present time and are of excellent quality.

Various Notes.

Incorporation papers have been signed for the Meadow Brook Nurseries, Inc., whose registered office is at 104 Tenafly road, Englewood, N. J. The registered agent is Edward M. Carman. The authorized capital stock is $45,000. The incorporators are Benjamin T. McGill, E. M. Carman and Robert F. Greene.

Fred P. Wolfinger reports business most satisfactory. Prices are still high, but this does not prevent a good volume of business being done.

F. A. Kuehn, who is situated opposite the entrance to a big cemetery, did a large business in potted geraniums and other plants for the decoration of graves on Memorial day. R. B. M.

New Orleans, La.—Deciding that if citizens are to aid in beautifying the city through flowers and flower gardens they must have a fundamental knowledge of caring for them, the local horticultural society is at work on a curriculum for the Delgrado trade school, which will be opened here soon.

Denison, Tex.—Miss Ollie Bird has purchased the interests of her partner, E. Farley, in the Denison Greenhouses. The business will be continued under her management and that of Will C. Greenhouse Heating

Subscribers are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

SEEKING HEATING EFFICIENCY.

"How to increase the efficiency of heating systems—to lower fuel consumption and keep the steam-heated machines at uniform, maximum heat—is receiving as much consideration today from florists as a year ago when a coal shortage existed," asserts A. Fitzgerald, general manager of the Morehead Mfg. Co., of Detroit. "With the present prices of fuel prevailing, florists are confronted with a serious problem. Their coal bills will be far above the average, unless their greenhouses can be heated with less fuel than was required in previous winters. As a result, we are receiving more requests for information from florists than ever before, and when we refer them to greenhouses that have lowered their fuel consumption fifteen to twenty per cent after installing traps, orders are forthcoming from practically everyone who makes inquiry.

"Florists are pretty well satisfied that fuel prices will not drop and if a saving can be effected, they are sufficiently progressive to take advantage of the opportunity. We expect to do twice as much business with greenhouse operators during the next few months as during all of 1918, which was a record-breaking year for us."

BOILER IN RESIDENCE CELLAR.

Please give me some information in regard to the heating of a small greenhouse which I am about to build. Enclosed is a rough sketch which shows the location and other particulars. I desire to erect the greenhouse near the street, as shown in the sketch, and heat it from the basement of my residence. The temperature required will be 55 to 60 degrees when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero. I have hot water heat in the residence, but intend to install a separate boiler for the greenhouse. Do you think I can get satisfactory results from this plan, or will it be advisable to build a boiler house at the north end of the greenhouse?

Please describe the proper arrangement of the pipes in the greenhouse, stating the size of the pipes and the number required. Raised benches will be used. I intend to grow vegetable plants and a few flowers. The basement is six and one-half feet deep. Will it be necessary to run the flow pipe overhead or will it answer if placed underground? What size of boiler will be needed, using soft coal?

G. W. L.—Pa.

The sketch shows the proposed location of the greenhouse to be directly north of and about fifty feet away from

BUY YOUR BOILER DIRECT

TO THE MAN WHO DOES NOT OWN A KROESCHELL—Possibly you may have wondered why KROESCHELL Boilers are not sold by any of the Greenhouse Building or Construction Companies. If so, we feel it is our duty to state, in fairness and justice to all concerned, that KROESCHELL Boilers are never sold by anyone but KROESCHELL BROS. CO. We do not quote anyone dealing in Greenhouse material or boilers, special resale prices. We have no Agents, and therefore our prices are based on sales direct from Factory to user.

Our stand in this matter has brought out a lot of rivalry; nevertheless, the great efficiency of the KROESCHELL Greenhouse Boiler cannot be disputed, and in spite of the increased competition, the KROESCHELL Boiler is heating more glass than any other make.

Our business (ESTABLISHED 1879) is to build boilers of all types, from the smallest house heater to the largest 600 H. P. Water Tube Steam Boiler. For forty years we have confined our entire efforts to the designing and construction of high-grade boilers, and during this time have served the Florists' Trade of this country and Foreign Countries, to the full satisfaction of every one of our customers.

"The customer's interest first"—is the basis of the KROESCHELL standard. This principle makes the KROESCHELL Policy the most liberal of all in the Greenhouse Boiler business. The great variety of boilers that we make places us in a commanding position. It is the KROESCHELL principle to supply only the type of boiler best suited for the conditions. For this reason we always furnish the most efficient boiler unit in every case.

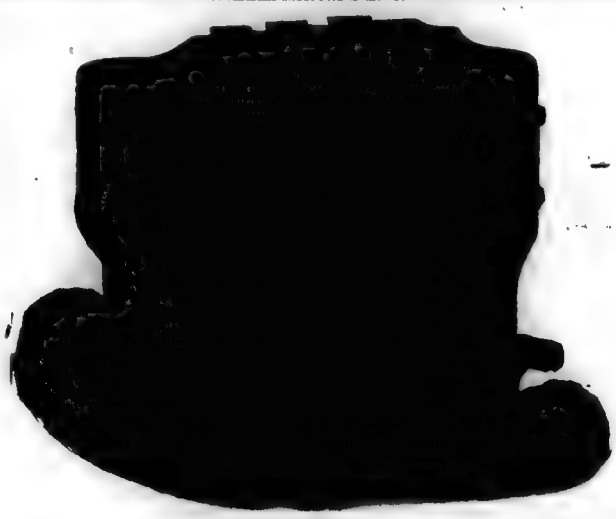
the residence. Unless the highest point in the roof of the residence is more than twenty-five feet from the ground, it will not seriously shade the greenhouse even during the shortest days in winter.

We are not able to discover the amount of glass, if any, in the walls of the greenhouse, but if the house has well built walls of wood or concrete, we would use a boiler rated for 600 square feet of radiation if it is to be placed in the cellar of the residence, while it will only require 400 square feet of radiation if it is to be placed at the north end of the greenhouse. Either location would give good results.

We would prefer to drop the boiler one foot if it is placed in the cellar, as it would thus be possible to carry the flow pipe underground directly to the greenhouse, but if this is not feasible the flow pipe may be dropped so as to carry it underground. The expansion tank should be connected with the highest point of the flow pipe above the boiler and should be located at some point in the residence, so that the top of the tank will be just below the level of the ridge of the greenhouse.

After running the flow pipe from the residence to the greenhouse, carry it up to a height of eight feet. At the highest point run up a half-inch pipe, as an air vent, to the level of the ridge. The main flow and return pipes should be 3-inch. After taking off the air vent, run a 2½-inch pipe to each side wall plate and extend these pipes with a slight fall to the north end of the greenhouse and there connect each of these flow pipes with a coil of five 2-inch returns on the side walls or under the side benches. If run underground, the main flow and return pipes should be insulated with asbestos wrappings and placed in 8-inch sewer pipe, or both of the mains may be in one concrete conduit.



If the boiler is at the north end of the greenhouse or if the boiler in the cellar of the residence can be lowered so that the main flow can be carried directly on an up-grade of one inch in twenty feet, the piping in the greenhouse will be as described except that the expansion tank should be located directly under the ridge of the greenhouse and connected with the highest point of the system by means of a ¾-inch pipe.

THE SEEDLINGS NEED POTTING.

Will you tell us, if possible, what is the matter with the enclosed asparagus plants, taken from the seed bed? Is their condition due to red spider? If so, please give us some information on how to prevent further trouble.

W. P. N. C.—Fla.

I do not find any trace of red spider on the young asparagus seedlings and I think the trouble is due to allowing them to remain too long in the seed bed. The young plants should be potted up promptly and treated liberally as regards moisture, so as to keep them continually in active growth. M. P.

A Glazing Putty of Real Value

In all our experience and investigation we had never found a preparation for bulbing over the outside of a greenhouse that was quite satisfactory, until we ran across PERMANITE. This was about four years ago. At that time we set about investigating the merits of PERMANITE and proceeded to watch the results of its application to greenhouse roofs.

Last year we were entirely convinced of its high quality and durability, and accepted the western agency for the sale of these goods.

We applied PERMANITE to hundreds of greenhouse roofs, over almost every part of the United States.

The results obtained were highly satisfactory indeed. Glass roofs of all kinds, both old and new, were made water-tight and air-tight, saving thousands of plants from being spoiled by water dripping on them and saving many hundreds of tons of coal by making the roofs proof against the wind and storms of winter.

We give PERMANITE our unqualified endorsement and recommend it highly for all kinds of glazing.

We have a very large stock on hand in our warehouse and can ship immediately.

The Market.

Decoration day trade was exceptionally fine. With some of the trade the bulk of the sales consisted of bouquets of cut flowers for the cemeteries, while others' sales were largely potted plants for decorating graves. There were plenty of cut flowers on hand.

Carnations are still in fair supply. Peonies are now being displayed. Outdoor lily of the valley is about gone. Gladioli are just commencing to bloom and the supply is still limited. A few callas are still to be had and snapdragons are quite plentiful. Sweet peas are abundant and roses are also in plentiful supply. Daisies, lilacs, stocks, irises, calendulas, etc., helped make a pleasing variety to choose from.

Geraniums, begonias, vincas, etc., are going well. The Chamber of Commerce has instituted a campaign for beautifying Bridgeport and people are responding with a vim. Main street never was so gay as it is at present. One of the large department stores has long veranda boxes filled with geraniums, daisies and vincas, extending along the entire front and side of the building. The plants are placed on a ledge at the top of the first story. There are a number of bay trees set at intervals. Another large store has used veranda boxes about three feet long, with bay trees between them, to decorate the front and side of the building. One of the theaters, a bank and some of the smaller stores have similar decorations. Small evergreen trees are placed on the sidewalk in front of another building. Rustic hanging baskets filled with plants and vincas are suspended from some of the doorways, making the general effect most pleasing.

Funeral work keeps all of the cut flowers cleaned up.

Various Notes.

The flower bed at the City hall green is now filled with hydrangeas and makes a splendid showing. The beds on Broad street hill are filled with geraniums.

Robert Hawkins reports that the bulk of the sales for Decoration day consisted of bouquets, which were used for cemetery purposes. Bedding plants are going well. An unusually large number of hanging baskets, veranda boxes, flower beds, etc., have been filled on account of the Chamber of Commerce campaign for beautifying the city. Bedding stock will be completely cleaned up and there may be a shortage. A number of orders are booked ahead in the beautifying campaign.

The Park Garden & Flower Shop had a splendid Decoration day trade. Bedding plants are going quite well. Cemetery and outside orders are plentiful. This firm is cutting some splendid snapdragons. Carnations and sweet peas are also in plentiful supply.

John Reck & Son are now established in their new store at their old site. Trade is brisk and has consisted mainly of making up bouquets for Decoration day, covering graves, filling veranda boxes, flower beds, etc.

James E. Beach reports that his carnations are about gone. Snapdragons are plentiful and gladioli are just commencing to bloom.

Julius Reck had a plentiful supply of potted plants on hand for Decoration day, but the call for bouquets was so heavy that he ran short of cut flowers. Sweet peas are gone, but the carnation plants are in such good shape that he expects to have carnations for another month.

The New York Florists had a beautiful window decoration recently. The window was filled with roses of different varieties, with immense vases of American Beauties in the center.

"NICO-FUME" PRODUCTS

Change In Prices Effective June 1st, 1919

We fully realize that a change in the selling prices of standard commodities like our "Nico-Fume" products causes very considerable inconvenience to all parties in interest. It has long been our custom to "take the general-average" of profit over a period of years—rather than to make more frequent changes in prices in direct proportion to varying conditions in the cost of manufacture, etc.

In this connection, you will probably recall that no advance was made in our prices for "Nico-Fume" products during the entire period of the recent War—a circumstance that was happily aided by the fact that we had accumulated some surplus stock of nicotine, thereby the better enabling us to absorb part of the increasing costs which we had hoped would be merely temporary.

However, the heavily increasing demand for "Nico-Fume" products has so reduced the surplus, and the present conditions relative to raw material, labor, supplies, etc., are such that we regret we must announce the following change in our prices, effective June 1st, 1919:

"NICO-FUME" LIQUID:		"NICO-FUME" PAPER:
8-lb. tin	$14.50 each	288 sheets	$9.50 per tin

The Market.

Business has been brisk here for the last few weeks and, from all reports, florists have no reason to complain. There were many good days coming close together, including big parades of returning soldiers that made much business for the trade. The Memorial arch came in for many flowers.

Roses have been coming in well of late, both as to quality and quantity. Ophelia, Shawyer, Russell, Columbia, Hoosier Beauty, Reid and Sunburst are the main ones now. Carnations are beginning to show the effects of the warmer weather, but still are good. There is an abundance of peonies now, but they were late for Memorial day. Only a few were ready for cutting on that day, but the day after the market was flooded. Sweet peas are beginning to hit the downward path as to quality, but it will not be long until some good outdoor stock can be had. Spanish iris is coming nicely and finds ready sale. The other irises sold readily for Decoration day, but move slowly now. Calendulas still are nice. Fine snapdragons are to be seen.

Potted plants have been high in price this season, but people have not kept from buying them and all kinds of bedding plants have been moving well.

The craft in general seems well satisfied with the amount of business done during the spring rush. J. M.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The sudden change in the weather created a marked change in the market for Memorial day. The profusion of garden flowers set the brakes against the trade's stock. Peonies especially were affected. There was a large supply and little demand. Carnations were taken up, but none too readily. Roses also were plentiful. In fact, the market was not active enough to create a shortage in anything except geraniums in flower. Where these were handled, business was fair as long as they lasted. The general price for 4-inch was $3 per dozen. Where extra nice stock was handled they brought $4.

Wreaths of magnolia leaves decorated with flowers were generally advertised, and much of the cut flower demand was diverted to them. The advertising of these wreaths no doubt helped the general sales. Buyers who had large supplies of lilacs in their yards, and who probably would not have visited the shops, bought one of these for added decoration. F. P. A.

Charleston, Ill.—Mrs. C. M. Griffin, grower of hardy flowers, says she has the finest pansies, but that the people here, including herself, do not yet know how to use them in quantity. About hal her peony crop was frozen.

The Market.

The month of May had a glorious closing in the Memorial day trade, which according to florists was the heaviest Memorial day business they have ever known. Great preparations had been made for this day on account of its particular significance in honoring the heroes of the great war. Business showed that there was no miscalculation in the florists' predictions that this would be the greatest Memorial day on record. The weather was perfect during the several days preceding Decoration day and, while the day itself was warm, there was not the proverbial rain storm, and the big demand continued all through the morning until time for the mammoth parade.

There was a decided preference for cut flowers this year, although the bedding plant business was tremendous for a week before the holiday. A great many flowers, already made up in sprays or bouquets for cemetery use, were sold. There was not such a great demand for wreaths of galax or magnolia or other foliage this year as there has been other years. There was a plentiful supply of roses, but the leading flower of Memorial day, the peony, was almost unobtainable. There were few home-grown peonies on the market, and those that were shipped in from eastern or western markets were far from perfect, most of them being tight in bud and of exceptionally small proportions. These were quoted at 12 cents wholesale and the retail price charged was $2.50 per dozen. Carnations were short and some florists sold the white varieties for $1.50 and the colored for $2 per dozen. Gladioli, of the greenhouse variety, sold well for the holiday because they were large and showy. They brought $3 per dozen. Double Narcissus poeticus met with a good call at $1 per dozen. Gardenias sold at 75 cents per dozen. Sweet peas brought 75 cents per bunch. Hydrangeas and marguerites sold well in plants, outside of the regular bedding stock. Snapdragons were readily sold at $2 per dozen. The demand since the holiday has been good, with funeral work steady and a fair amount of wedding orders for the next two weeks. R. F. B.

Beaumont, Tex.—There was a tremendous demand for white carnations in this city Mothers' day, but the supply was not nearly large enough. Most customers accepted substitutes.

WESTERLY, R. I.

Charles Monroe, of New Haven, Conn., who took possession last December of the big greenhouse range on Beach street formerly owned by S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., when it went into receivership, has the reconstruction work at the range well under way. There are thirty-one greenhouses on the ground and already more than a third of them have been stocked with roses, sweet peas, chrysanthemums, asparagus, ferns and numerous other kinds of stock.

After the Reuter Co. went out of business the range lay idle for several months. Consequently there were many repairs to be made, the greater contract being to reglaze many of the houses. Of the thirty-one houses a majority of them are 35x200 feet and there is over a quarter of a million panes of glass in them. Much also had to be done to the heating system, but now the repairs are practically completed.

Little has been known of the work that has been going on at the greenhouses since Mr. Monroe took possession. At the range two days before Easter over 28,000 sweet peas were cut and disposed of. Three of the larger houses are now used for growing sweet peas, which are in their splendor. Two more houses are being planted with sweet peas, which will be ready for the holiday trade.

Mr. Monroe is planning to have 150,000 chrysanthemum plants and already two of the larger houses are growing 11,000 mums each. Two of the 200-foot houses will be devoted to carnations and 21,000 plants have been started. Five houses have been stocked with roses, which already have furnished cuts. Two greenhouses are producing asparagus and ferns.

A force of fifteen men is at work at the range and the houses are being filled with plants as rapidly as possible. Within a few weeks the proprietor expects to have all of the houses benched and producing.

Mr. Monroe has been a retail florist in New Haven for several years and he promises within a short time to put the old Reuter range, one of the largest in New England, in condition so that it will have a larger output than ever before. W. H. M.

Anderson, Ind.—The old firm of B. H. Klus & Son has been taken over by William Klus. The Klus property consists of three greenhouses. The business will be extended.

PANSIES

Pansies, mixed, September transplanted, $3.00 per 100. Cash. Beaver Ave. Floral Co., Des Moines, Ia.

In order to introduce my OZARK MAMMOTH STRAIN, I have decided to place the new seed of 1919 crop at $5.00 per oz.; 2 oz. at $9.00; 1/8-oz. at $1.00. Owing to favorable season, we have a large quantity of this year's seed, well ripened and clean. This strain is superior to last year's; they show blooms 3 in. across and stems 10 in. long. Excellent for cut flowers.
Seedlings for immediate delivery and later, at $4.00 per 1000, prepaid. Also Steele's Private and Greenhouse Special seedlings at same price. You can pay more, but you can't get any better strains. Remember our packing is hard to duplicate. Terms, cash with order.

Tarrytown, N. Y.—The new macadam road is the highway passing the F. R. Pierson establishment, which store takes the front rank in point of architecture and adornment. Permanite

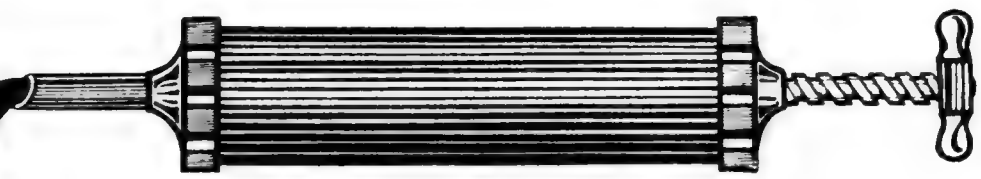
Back in 1912 a florist came to us and said:—

"Gentlemen: I want something better than putty; I want a Glazing Cement that will not harden and fall off, but remain elastic under any condition. You can make your own price—all I want to know is whether or not you can make it."

That's the time we first realized the urgent demand for a better putty and after extensive research work, as well as actual tests, we finally produced a cement that would not harden and fall out, but would remain ever-elastic, regardless of what might happen.

The PERMANITE of those days wasn't by any means as perfected as it is today, but even then, in its earlier stages of development, Permanite was enthusiastically taken up by wide-awake Greenhouse Men and actually proved far superior to putty. One Florist told another—together they helped us along with valuable suggestions—with the result that Permanite stands today as the most economical, most dependable and positively ever-elastic Glazing Cement, guaranteed to outlast putty three to four times.



A practical Greenhouse Man gave us the idea—in our own little way we helped make a Glazing Cement that filled the demand for a better putty—and we are genuinely glad to have had a part in making .....

The Glazing Cement You Wished For But Never Had!

—and among travelers in the trade

Those wide-awake, alert individuals who carry a sample case and a well filled order book—you hear this every day:

"By the way, have you noticed that most of the greenhouses going up this spring in the Central States are AGMCO'S?"

There are reasons!

And each reason is a point of superiority. And these points are:

Superior TEMPERATURE CONTROL
Superior APPEARANCE
Superior VENTILATION
Superior DURABILITY
Superior HEATING
Superior LIGHT

Don't forget! There is just as much difference between the different kinds of greenhouses as there is between the different varieties of roses.

Burn these SIX POINTS of superiority into your memory, then let us show them to you.

And the time?
That's up to you!

14 Points

Reasons for Buying Moninger Greenhouses

1. They are up-to-date.
2. They are designed by expert engineers.
3. They are made by a factory which is complete in every respect.
4. We have been making greenhouses for over fifty years.
5. We never make an improvement without first testing it out thoroughly.
6. We never hesitate to make an improvement the minute it is shown to be good—no matter how many machines must be thrown out or how many patterns must be changed.
7. We can manufacture greenhouse material as cheaply, if not cheaper, than any other manufacturer, because we have every facility, trained help and large stock, and turn out the work in large quantities.
8. We use nothing but the very best of materials. The best is the cheapest in the long run.
9. We handle everything for the greenhouse. You don't need to deal with half a dozen different people.
10. We have a very high reputation among the trade and guard this reputation jealously.
11. We erect your greenhouses in a systematic way, using men who are thoroughly trained in their work.
12. You save time and worry.
13. You make no experiment in using our greenhouses, as they have been tested for many years and proved durable beyond a question.
14. You deal with a firm which absolutely makes good on every promise and we frequently do things for your benefit whether we have promised it or not.

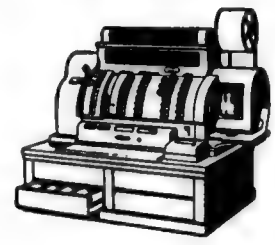
Stores using a complete N. C. R. System can give the public good service

WHEN a customer goes into a store and sees an up-to-date National Cash Register on the counter, he knows at once that he is going to get quick, accurate service.

If the proprietor of that store is asked why he uses a National Cash Register he will reply that it is a labor-saving device that helps him just the same as labor-saving machinery helps the manufacturer, railroad man, farmer, and mechanic.

When a customer makes a purchase in a store using an up-to-date National, he can not help but notice how quickly the clerks hand out parcel and change. He notices how careful they are—the smart, modern appearance of the store—the good service and prompt attention that he gets.



Customers are also quick to notice the good values that such stores are able to offer; the accurate printed cash register figures; the freedom from disputes; the absence of errors.

Without a cash register

Keeping store records by hand is as out of date as traveling by stage or fighting with bows and arrows.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

MOVIES MAKE AD FOR MILLIONS

Flowers in motion picture plays are a means of advertising that reaches millions. No printed medium carries its message to so many people, or commands so strongly their concentrated attention. Greater use of flowers in the films will enhance those productions and increase patronage of florists.

WHEN Marguerite Clark opens the box which has just come from the florist, and picks up the roses in her arms, the tender emotion which she "registers" for the camera is conveyed from the screen to her audience of—how many million people do you suppose see a film of so popular a star as Miss Clark? Estimates vary, but 10,000,000 is a conservative figure, and some persons seriously put the number as high as 20,000,000!

When the movie hero hearkened to the slogan of "Say It with Flowers," the heroine, in her rapture—expressed with all the fervor with which a film actor depicts emotion—transmits the message of those four now famous words to every one of the ten to twenty million persons who see the Paramount picture, "Girls." When the florists contracted for a page advertisement in the weekly which emblazons on its cover the fact that its circulation is "Over Two Million a Week," they paid $5,000 to carry the message of "Say It with Flowers" to approximately 8,000,000 readers, based on the estimate of four readers to each copy of the magazine. Judge, then, the value the florists derive from a motion picture which carries the same message in fully as emphatic manner to, let us say, twice as many people as read the Saturday Evening Post.

Message Emphatic.

Remember that the illustration on this page is only one in a succession of pictures that show the box of flowers brought in, handed to the heroine, opened; the card found and read; the flowers taken up, examined, fondled, admired; and the pleasure and joy of the girl at receiving so lovely a gift. The incident occupies several minutes in the course of the story, during which the beauty of the actress and the interest of the drama hold the attention of every person in the audience spellbound. During those few minutes, as surely as though the words were flashed on the screen in type a foot high, the message of "Say It with Flowers" is borne home to all the audience.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS."

Sweetheart, I would send you flow'rs,
  On your breast I'd pin them,
Were it not the Freudian pow'rs
  See such symbols in them.

There is not a flower that blows
  Free from hintings hazy,
From the fragrant, flagrant Rose
  To the modest Daisy.

I am strictly Peter Bell
  On this floral question,
Yet the Primrose, Freudians tell,
  Reeks with dark suggestion.

"Pansies, that's for thoughts"—hear! hear!
  Naughty little Pansy!
She is just as bold, my dear,
  As the shameless Tansy.

I would send you Violets—yet
  Even of them I'm fearful.
In the complex days, my pet,
  One can't be too keerful.
—B. L. T. in Chicago Tribune.

You can never be sure, after you have bought space in a magazine, that your advertisement will be noticed by every reader, or, if it is noticed, that it is read with more than a casual glance, and, even if it is read, that it really strikes home. It is a good bet, however, that every man, woman and child in a movie theater has his or her eyes fixed on the screen, and that he, and she, are taking in every item in the picture. That's the lure of the screen, which produces fans more rabid than the denizens of the baseball bleachers, fills columns in the daily papers, builds palaces that surpass the luxury of grand opera houses, and pays to stars salaries of over a million dollars a year. You can be sure that the audience, every one, gives as much attention as does the heroine herself, to undoing the box and admiring the roses. Most of the spectators know just how the flowers are packed, many just what variety they are, etc., etc. He'd be a lucky florist, wouldn't he, who had his label in a conspicuous place on the box!

Marguerite Clark Registers Rapture on Receiving Roses.

From the point of view of the motion picture producer, flowers are an important addition to the stage effects, and might be used to a far greater degree than they are now, increasing the possibilities of conveying emotions and sensations, so vital to the silent drama in its lack of the spoken word.

Mutual Benefit.

To the florists the use of flowers in motion pictures is of great value. Just the publicity given to flowers and their use, is, of course, a means of encouraging and urging the public to more general purchase of them. But a more special and particular benefit may be derived from spreading broadcast through the movies the uses of flowers in other than the old ways of our fathers and grandfathers—simply for weddings, holidays and funerals. If the reel of current events includes a few glimpses of how milady will wear her hats and gowns this season there is no reason why it might not also include a few glimpses of how milady will wear her flowers—and what flowers. The fads and fashions and furbelows in flowers are considerable sources of income to many florists, especially those in centers where "Society" is spelled with a capital "S," and it is a kind of work that may well be cultivated. It is "so much gravy," coming often when time is more abundant than trade.

Publicity, like money, grows out of itself after you get enough of it, and increases in the fashion of a snowball, drawing more to itself as it goes along. Probably as good a sign of successful publicity as can be found is the use of an advertising phrase by the humorous poets of the daily press. Appearing under the heading, "Songs of the Unconscious," the verses of B. L. T. in the Chicago Tribune are in themselves an unconscious compliment to the advertising efforts of the florists of the country. Let the custom of introducing flowers into motion picture plays once become general and a new snowball will be started rolling downhill for the florists.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

DICKS' WEDDING WINDOW.

When the time of June brides came around this year, F. George Dicks, of Dicks' Flower Shop, got together with the window decorator of Smallman & Ingram, a large department store in his city, London, Ont., to make something better than usual in window advertising for the wedding month.

The large windows of the department store—two adjoining ones were used—gave adequate space for an elaborate display. Smallman & Ingram supplied wax figures, gowns and trimmings. And Dicks' Flower Shop furnished the flowers, and aided in arranging the window.

Thousands of people stopped to admire the unusual window, paying more attention, it seemed, to the flowers and their arrangement than to the sartorial effects. Look for the reason in the accompanying illustration. Mr. Dicks estimates the actual returns from this window display exceedingly high, in actual orders as well as general advertising.

KELLER OPENS CITY STORE.

For many years the John A. Keller Co., at Lexington, Ky., has done all its business from the greenhouses on Sixth street. Though patronage increased and sales bulked larger and larger, the salesroom at the range seemed adequate. But the last year brought a change, and this spring the company opened a store in the downtown district just in time for Memorial day. The location, 135 East Main street, is just opposite the Phoenix hotel.

Of the store's tasteful decoration and furnishing, the illustration scarcely gives a definite enough idea. Old ivory enamel has been used in the woodwork and decorations; walls, ceiling, chandeliers and furniture correspond, and to this effect is added the harmonious gray of the tapestry. The inverted lighting system is used for overhead illumination, and artistic wall bulbs are arranged along the sides. The window is spacious, the cut flower show case is large, and the workroom is roomy and light.

Theodore Keller, returned from overseas after long service with the marines and recovered from his injuries, takes up work again by assuming charge of the greenhouses. Ferdinand Keller acts as manager of the new store, where he will be assisted by his sisters, Misses Lena and Josephine Keller. Miss Louie Keller, who returned a short time ago from Washington, where she held a position during the war, will be in charge of the bookkeeping and advertising for the firm.

M-E-N WANTED.

Pressing Work Ahead.

Now that the Victory loan is over and our job in that direction is finished, may we claim another duty which is now doing considerable good generally and ready for your approval, that of putting over our $100,000 for our national publicity campaign, for which we now have about $40,000? We have real men who have already justified themselves as well as the cause by voluntarily giving to our fund. But maybe we overlooked a few, unintentionally, who feel they should also be privileged to share in the broad, unselfish plan of national propaganda that is now going on, for the more general use of flowers, through the national magazines, backed up by local coöperative advertising in the several cities that have shown their progressiveness by tying up to the national campaign.

We have glowing reports of the unusual increases in the sale of flowers during the last year and yet the surface is only scratched, because with more men contributing and more firms advertising, a more liberal use of flowers is bound to follow.

Your publicity committees feel that there are lively opportunities yet undeveloped, but by an amalgamation of all interests, grower, wholesaler and retailer, we shall eventually accomplish that which we set out to do. And when the full amount is raised and the campaign well on its way, you will accordingly begin to realize the accumulative results of the initial campaign and the present one to such a degree that the finance committee will have little difficulty in convincing members of the craft who have as yet not seen the light.

Campaign to Be a Permanent One.

Of course, there will always be many who won't see the possibilities in store for our business through the national publicity campaign. But there are always to be found enough broad-minded merchants, as well as those who give for sentimental reasons, who have felt the good derived already and feel that our campaign will eventually be a permanent one. And the time is coming when it will be a pleasure and a privilege to say, "I was one of the contributors from its inception."

The progress made already is only a forerunner of what is possible, and the many remarks of satisfaction expressed by many growers, wholesalers and retailers have amply repaid the members of the publicity committees for the work and time they have put in.

We need $60,000 to finish the job for

New Store of the John A. Kellar Co., Lexington, Ky.

Co-operating with a Local Department Store, Dicks' Flower Shop Staged a Striking Wedding Window.

1919. Will you be among the M-E-N to help put it over, so that we may have our appropriation early enough to place the advertisements in the mediums most desired? Help make our campaign big enough to put our business on the plane to which it is justly entitled and then the dignity which we shall create will be reflected on all those who participated in the work. It is one of the most important steps ever undertaken by florists and its success insures your own. Keep it going; don't stop! "Say It with Flowers" is getting to be a household word and you helped do it

Henry Penn,
Chairman National Publicity Campaign.

RANGE TO STAGE—AND BACK!

The career of George Rye, of Fort Smith, Ark., is unique, to say the least. When 15 he began to learn the florists' business, under A. A. Pantet. After two years he tired of it and went on the vaudeville stage. Whether Mr. Rye got lonesome for flowers in general and bouquets in particular, or whether the bouquets came so fast as to make him long again for the greenhouse range, is not known; at any rate, he decided that the florists' profession was the better, and after seven years on the stage returned to Fort Smith and worked at the Electric Park Greenhouses.

Mr. Rye could not rest satisfied until he had a business of his own, and October 28, 1912, he opened a store in the downtown district. His capital on opening was practically nil, as he had spent all his money in stocking up his store. But Mr. Rye realized the value of advertising. He chose his slogan, "Some Florist," and used the display columns of the local paper strongly. During the first five years he spent all his profit in advertising, and, although at times it looked discouraging, the returns from his advertising eventually brought him his thriving business.

Mr. Rye attributes a generous share in his success to his wife, whose good taste and business ability have helped him considerably.

AMERICAN PEONY SOCIETY.

Detroit Exhibition.

The seventeenth annual meeting and exhibition of the American Peony Society, which will take place in the hall of the Board of Commerce, Lafayette avenue and Wayne street, Detroit, June 17 and 18, already gives indications of being the best in the history of the society. The date fixed for the event this year is over a week later than that of the exhibition at Cleveland a year ago.

Many growers who wished to make exhibits in the different classes then were unable to do so owing to the date, which was found too early for the great number of growers adjacent to the lake region. The cold weather that has prevailed so far this season has been most favorable to the growers in the north central states, and many of them will take advantage of these exceptional conditions and make extensive exhibits.

This year no charge will be made for admission to the exhibition, and the greatest efforts will be made to have a big attendance of the flower-loving public, which will further popularize the peony, to the end that everyone with even a small plot of ground will hereafter grow some peonies.

Detroit Florists Coöperate.

The Detroit Florists' Club is coöperating in this event with the American Peony Society, and will have full charge of the exhibition, and peony growers everywhere are urged to do their utmost to make exhibits. Those who are unable to bring their flowers may safely address them to the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, 264 Randolph street, Detroit, with charges prepaid, and marked, "For the peony exhibition."

These will be given special care and properly staged in the exhibition hall. All entries for competition and correspondence in connection with the same may be addressed to J. F. Sullivan, 361 Woodward avenue, Detroit.

The Premium List.

Following is a list of the classes open to professional peony growers:

Collection of not more than 100 named varieties, one bloom each, American Peony Society's Gold Medal.

Vase or basket of peonies, not less than 100 blooms, arranged for effect.

Collection of twenty-five varieties, double, three blooms of each.

Collection of single varieties, one bloom of each.

Collection of Japanese varieties, one bloom of each.

Twenty-five blooms, white or cream, double, one variety.

Twenty-five blooms, light pink, or pink and cream, double, one variety.

Twenty-five blooms, dark pink, double, one variety.

Twenty-five blooms, red or crimson, double, one variety.

Six specimen blooms, double, any variety.

One specimen bloom, double, any variety.

Collection of new varieties, double, introduced since 1900, one bloom of each.

Specimen bloom, new seedling of American origin, not yet in commerce.

On recommendation of the judges to the directors of the American Peony Society, any new seedling staged at the society's exhibition may be awarded a certificate of honorable mention, a first-class certificate, a silver medal or a gold medal. It should be understood that these marks of distinction will only be given to new varieties of exceptional merit, the award of the gold medal being the highest honor within the power of the society to bestow.

Most artistic arrangement of not more than twenty-five peonies in vase, bowl or basket.

Ten prizes of $2 each are offered for the best vases of not more than three blooms of each of the following American varieties: Milton Hill, Grandiflora, Walter Faxon, Standard Bearer, Karl Rosenfield, Martha Bulloch, Longfellow, Pleas' Jubilee, Georgiana Shaylor, Cherry Hill.

TOLEDO, O.

Retail Florists Organize.

At an enthusiastic and well attended meeting of local florists, held in the flower store of S. N. Peck, June 3, a resolution to close all flower shops and greenhouses on all Sundays throughout the year was unanimously adopted. The only exceptions are those Sundays which are celebrated as flower days, such as Mothers' day or Easter. Frank M.

Schramm and William Feniger were appointed a committee of two to seek the coöperation of those florists who were not present at the meeting. They were successful in obtaining the consent of twenty-six florists, and Sunday, June 8, for the first time in the history of the flower business in this city, flower stores were closed tight and no deliveries were made. Florists took this action to keep abreast of the advanced spirit of the times, which seeks to obtain better working conditions and shorter hours and to give all an opportunity of observing Sunday religiously and as a day of rest and recreation.

At the same meeting the Toledo Retail Florists' Association was organized and the following officers were elected: President, Helen Patten; vice-president, William Feniger; secretary and treasurer, S. N. Peck. Membership will be limited to retailers, as it was felt that they have peculiar interests and problems to work out. The new organization expects to accomplish many constructive objects for the betterment of conditions and for the advancement of business. Meetings will be held monthly. A. P. K.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY

MEETING AT CHESTNUT HILL.

Captain Thomas Entertains.

A meeting of the American Rose Society was held at 2 o'clock June 4, on the beautiful lawn adjoining the home of Captain George C. Thomas, on Sunset avenue, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia. About 100 rosarians were present, including many ladies. The Rose Society leaders were present in force, among them Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y.; E. Gurney Hill, Richmond, Ind.; Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa.; Professor E. A. White, Ithaca, N. Y.; Harry O. May, Summit, N. J.; E. Allan Peirce, Waltham, Mass.; Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J.; Rev. Dr. Mills, Syracuse, N. Y.; J. Horace McFarland, Harrisburg, Pa.; Samuel S. Pennock, Alfred Burton, Edwin J. Fancourt, Robert Kift and many more.

Captain Thomas entertained the out-of-town visitors at luncheon while those from near-by strolled about the grounds. The rose beds are laid out on the lawn at the foot of the terrace, stretching to the right and left in long rows. The effect from the top of the terrace is extremely fine. The roses, all in full bloom, were a mass of color that was intensified by the rich, velvety greensward. Everything was in perfect order. Not a weed, not a tuft of long grass, not an imperfect or withered flower was to be seen anywhere.

Descending the terrace steps to the rose garden for a closer view increased the admiration of the visitors. All the varieties were carefully labeled, and all of them were varieties of great merit, many of them novelties of world-wide fame. There were Los Angeles and Mrs. Delaney and Golden Emblem and Lady Alice Stanley and many, many more. Such a collection is rare indeed. Mr. Hamilton, who is in charge, described the method of making the beds, which is strictly according to Hoyle, as evidenced by the health of the roses.

A Picturesque Meeting.

President Benjamin Hammond called the meeting to order under the trees. A more picturesque meeting would be hard to imagine. Those present facing Mr. Hammond, who stood, were seated on camp stools or on carefully laid handkerchiefs spread on the grass, the summer costumes of the ladies adding brightness to the scene. Mr. Hammond introduced Captain George C. Thomas, who welcomed his guests cordially. J. Horace McFarland delivered an able address in finished style. He spoke of America as being behind other countries in gardening and hoped that every member would do something toward increasing the love of horticulture. He spoke of the beautiful gardens in Canada, less favored than our own country. Mr. McFarland startled some of his audience by calling the Crimson Rambler a weed that should be pulled out. American Pillar and Dorothy Perkins were much better varieties of climbing roses.

E. Gurney Hill was delightful in his humorous anecdotes.

Robert Pyle told of his visit to the Bagatelle Rose Gardens of France ten years ago and expressed his appreciation of the honor bestowed upon him by the American Rose Society.

Robert Pyle Made President.

The most important business transacted at the meeting was the election of Robert Pyle, president of the Conard & Jones Co., of West Grove, Pa., as president of the society to succeed Benjamin Hammond, who resigned.

With much ceremony Mr. Hammond was presented with a copy of Captain Thomas' book on roses, as a token of appreciation for the fourteen years of devoted service to the interests of the society as secretary and as president.

Climbing roses are an important feature of Captain Thomas' place. One of the climbers, a seedling, was named by the society, on this memorable day, Dr. Robert G. Huey, in honor of that eminent rosarian.

Perhaps the most striking and least known personage at this meeting was the Rev. Dr. Mills, of Syracuse, N. Y. Widely traveled, well read, intelligent, witty, Dr. Mills proved a great acquisition to the party. He knows much rose lore. He has studied roses in California. He has studied roses abroad. He is writing a book about roses at this very minute, a book that will avoid the beaten track, that will traverse by-paths and treat of antiquity as well as of the present.

But the meeting is breaking up, although it is not really over, for the memory of the people and the trees and the lawn and the roses will be bright for a long time to come. Phil.

ROSE GARDENS INSPECTED.

Three Red Letter Days.

June 2, 3 and 4 were red letter days in the annals of the American Rose Society. On Monday, June 2, the members of the executive committee with friends met Dr. W. Van Fleet in his test gardens at Bell, Md. The afternoon was spent looking over the recently introduced novelties and the seedlings which Dr. Van Fleet has under his supervision. The exhibit was indeed an interesting one.

Among the recently introduced species were setipoda, with large clusters of showy pink flowers about two inches across; blanda, variety Willmottiæ, with bright coral pink flowers; gentiliana, a hardy climbing species, with medium-sized white flowers, resembling Banksiæ; rosabella, a light pink bush form with moss calyx; multiflora cathayensis, with pink flowers about one and one-half inches across in large, flat corymbs. Dr. Van Fleet showed the party many attractive seedlings which were under number. Among these was a cross between Double Rugosa and Triomphe de Orleans, a continuous bloomer with laciniate petals; Engelmannii crossed with Moyesii, an early-flowering variety with rich red flowers nearly three inches across; several Hugonis and altaica seedlings of promise, crosses between Wichuraiana and hybrid teas, among which was a promising seedling with Lyon as the pollen parent, and another cross between Wichuraiana and Irish Fireflame, No. W. M. 213, a clear pink containing blood of Caroline Testout crossed with Wichuraiana, was especially good, as was also No. W. M. 5, a rich single dark red, the parentage of which was Wichuraiana crossed with Moyesii.

Desire a Show Garden.

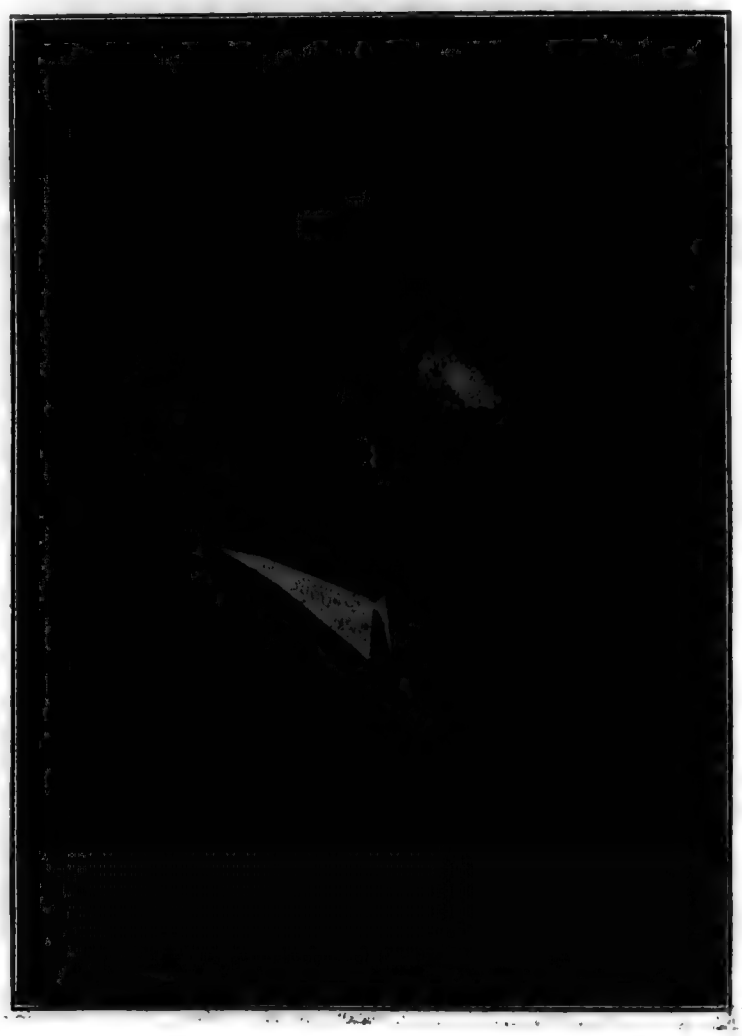
In the evening the executive committee and the Arlington rose test garden committee held a session at the Ebbitt House. Plans for the following day were perfected, and consideration was given to increasing the efficiency of the rose garden. The opinion was expressed that there should be established in Washington an exhibition rose garden where there should be a display of those varieties best suited for the section. The rose test garden is fulfilling its purpose by a demonstration of what varieties will do in the particular soil and climate, but from the nature of its purpose it can never be made to appeal to the eye because of its beauty. Individual plants of a variety will do this, but there must be vacant spaces where varieties die out. A committee, composed of J. Horace McFarland, Frederick Law Olmsted, Representative James R. Mann and S. S. Pennock, was appointed to confer with the proper officials of the United States Department of Agriculture in formulating plans and in locating such an exhibition garden. A committee was also appointed to consider the best methods for disseminating the varieties of roses bred by Dr. Van Fleet.

At the Arlington Garden.

At 9:30 a. m., June 3, the following judges visited the Arlington rose test garden to note the comparative value of varieties of climbers, bush and cut roses: A. Cumming, Cromwell, Conn.; B. H. Farr, Wyomissing, Pa.; G. S. Kidwell, Washington, D. C.; Dr. E. M. Mills, Syracuse, N. Y.; S. C. Hubbard, Ithaca, N. Y.; George E. Anderson and Charles E. Gersdorff, Washington, D. C. At 11 o'clock a large number of members of the Rose Society visited the garden and spent the remainder of the morning noting the various varieties. A committee from the executive committee and from the Arlington rose test garden committee remained to welcome and to explain the work to seventy-five soldiers from the reconstructive department of the Walter Reed general hospital, who visited the garden in the afternoon. Professor David Lumsden, who surpervises the work of the section devoted to agricultural training, was in charge of the party. The other members of the party returned to the Ebbitt House for luncheon. In the absence of President Hammond, Dr. E. M. Mills presided as toastmaster. Z. D. Blackistone, president of the Washington Florists' Club, cordially welcomed the members of the society to Washington, and Secretary E. A. White responded by expressing the appreciation of the members for the many courtesies extended to them. Professor L. C. Corbett told of the work which is being done in the garden and of the need of a show garden. He was followed by E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., who spoke of the introduction of roses suited for commercial culture, and Thomas N. Cook, of Watertown, Mass., spoke of rose culture from the viewpoint of an amateur.

Following the luncheon, automobiles carried the party through the beautiful Rock Creek park to the home of Mrs. Charles G. Bell. Here the party spent a delightful afternoon among the roses, herbaceous perennials and the many natural beauties of Twin Oaks.

At Captain Thomas's Estate.



At 9:30, June 4, the executive committee of the American Rose Society met at the beautiful estate of Captain George C. Thomas, Jr., at Chestnut Hill. The morning was spent with a session of the executive committee. At the annual meeting of the society Captain Thomas was elected president, but he found it impossible to serve during the coming year. Robert Pyle, of West Grove, Pa., was therefore elected to serve as president for the year beginning July 1, 1919. Important changes in the constitution and by-laws were considered.

Captain and Mrs. Thomas entertained the officers, executive committee and friends with a delightful luncheon. After the coffee Dr. E. M. Mills, in his wonderfully pleasing manner, presented the retiring president, Benjamin Hammond, with a beautiful, leather-bound copy of Captain Thomas's "Outdoor Rose Culture," as a token of appreciation from the officers and executive committee for his fourteen years of valuable service to the society, twelve years as secretary and two years as president. Mr. Hammond responded expressing the pleasure which the token of esteem gave him and spoke of how highly he should value the book because of the associations it would recall to him, and the fact that it was presented to him in the beautiful rose garden of the author. Following the presentation Captain Thomas christened his seedling No. 720, a beautiful, rich red, single climber, "Dr. Huey," in honor of Dr. Robert Huey, because of the fact that it was through Dr. Huey that he first became interested in roses and rose breeding.

Meeting Under the Trees.

By 2 o'clock about 150 rose lovers had gathered in the garden. The heat was intense, but it was with difficulty that the guests were lured from the living beauties to the shade of the trees, where President Hammond introduced Captain Thomas, who spoke a few words of welcome. He expressed the pleasure it gave him to share his roses with others, and he hoped the guests would make the garden theirs for the afternoon. J. Horace McFarland discussed "American Roses," emphasizing the value of the work Dr. Van Fleet and Captain Thomas are doing in introducing types of roses suited for all American conditions. He was followed by the "silver-tongued orator from Indiana," the rosarian who is universally known and loved, E. G. Hill. He also paid a tribute to Dr. Van Fleet's, Captain Thomas's and John Cook's work in rose breeding, stating that the infusion of the hardy blood of the rugosas and Wichuraianas with the teas and hybrid teas was sure to develop new varieties suited for outdoor growing in the middle west. Robert Pyle, the newly elected president, closed the somewhat formal program of the afternoon, emphasizing the value of the work the society is doing in reaching a large number of rose lovers and in carrying to them information which is of value in rose growing.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

ROBERT PYLE.

PRESTIGE was added to the American Rose Society when it elected Robert Pyle president, as well as an honor conferred upon him. For Mr. Pyle has long stood high in the floricultural world, not just as the president of the Conard & Jones Co., but as a man who thoroughly knows roses. He knows a good deal else, too, but you can be sure he knows roses. Eight years ago he knew enough about them to be selected as judge of the international exhibition at the Bagatelle Rose Gardens, Paris, being the only American who served as judge there. Since then Mr. Pyle has increased in knowledge and also in reputation, having become a lecturer of note. Mr. Pyle is a thorough Pennsylvanian; he was born, March 7, 1877, at London Grove, Pa.; he graduated from Swarthmore College, in 1897; married Hannah Warner Cadbury, of Germantown, and has spent all his business life with Conard & Jones Co., of West Grove, Pa.

The remainder of the afternoon was spent among the roses. Among the seedlings a single white was accurately described by Captain Thomas as a hardy "bush Cherokee." The flowers were pure white and nearly four inches across. Among the others, 46 A was a promising single white climber; 51 A, a single vermilion; 96 C, of the shade of Crimson Champion; 36 M, a pink free-flowered variety with long-pointed buds in large clusters, and 89 A, a single pink climber. In the garden of standard varieties Melanie Nedieck, a salmon yellow with long-pointed buds, was exquisite. Other beautiful varieties were Constance, an intense canary yellow; Frau Bertha Kiese, a pink on yellow ground, and Donald McDonald, an intense orange carmine.

BUCKEYE BULL'S-EYES

THE TIDE TURNS.

For the first time since last October the wholesale markets of Ohio were glutted during the week ending June 7. The primary cause of this unwholesome condition was the sudden arrival of midsummer weather, driving the thermometers up to 120 degrees under the glass June 1. On the day following roses reached the market in a badly blown state, making them unfit for any use except that of the street venders, to whom great quantities were sold. Carnations suffered badly because of the extreme heat and thousands of blooms in a soft, sleepy and lifeless condition were received. Many consignments of sweet peas were absolutely worthless and were thrown upon the dump. Throughout the week the weather continued unseasonably warm, having the same deleterious effect on all indoor stock.

In addition to this trouble came the peonies upon a prostrate market, with an unprecedented suddenness. As usual, they stepped into first place in point of importance, killing the demand for other flowers except those specifically for wedding purposes. Early in the week the main crop was precipitated upon the market, there not being demand enough to absorb a fourth of the vast amount arriving. To help the situation somewhat, liberal quantities of the better keeping varieties were put into cold storage to meet later requirements. By June 15 there will be few peonies, except a few late sorts, in the fields in this locality, and exhibition stock for the show in Detroit next week will all come out of storage.

The inevitable result was the destruction of prices and the transfer of the control of the market from the wholesalers, where it has rested uninterruptedly for the last nine months, to the retailers, and although there is considerable business being transacted in retail circles, the lightness of the purchasing does not indicate it. The warm weather has quickly turned the attention of the public to outdoor activities and, unfortunately, the change occurred a fortnight too soon this season.

This condition, however, will not last long, as the early passing of the peonies and the reduction of indoor crops, due to the hot weather, will operate to restore the proper equilibrium between supply and demand and the market will return to its normal state. The trade has enjoyed a long period of prosperity and is in better bodily condition to withstand the slight shocks caused by a brief period of oversupply. Business is more brisk than at this time last year and the present month will show a substantial gain; it is a matter of tremendous production caused by forces beyond the control of florists, forcing into the market within a few days sufficient stock for two weeks' business. The tide was out for a long time and, true to the prophecy of one of Ohio's well-known florists, it abundantly returned with the coming of the peonies.

WELCOME SERVICE MEN BACK.

Gullett & Sons, of Lincoln, Ill., gave a home-coming reception and dance to their employees who had been in the army and navy, Saturday evening, June 7. The honor roll of the company contains the names of thirty-two men, of whom twenty-six saw service in the army and six in the navy. Twenty-nine of the number were in service overseas. Twenty of the number have returned to the United States, and most of this number to the employ of Gullett & Sons. Two were killed in action, and one died in a French hospital, after going through action without a scratch.

One former employee, Howard Ford, enlisted at the beginning of the war, with Canadian troops. He died fighting gallantly at Vimy Ridge. His brother, Rowland Ford, of the same company, ran to his assistance as he fell fatally wounded, but the young hero told his brother as he died not to mind him, but to go forward with his comrades. Edward Baumhardt, formerly of Niles Center, gave up his life in a severe engagement, just three days before the signing of the armistice. He was reported missing in action, and notwithstanding repeated inquiries through the adjutant-general's office, and numerous efforts by his parents and the firm to learn his fate, it was not definitely ascertained until an old drillmate at Camp MacArthur heard that the parents were in deep anxiety as to their son's fate and, five months after the first news, wrote that Edward had been killed. During these months his parents and old friends had been hoping he would turn up alive, believing he might be a German prisoner or somewhere in a hospital. Edward Baumhardt was held in unusually high esteem by the firm, and was much beloved by his fellow workmen. He was a high-grade rose grower, and at the time of his enlistment held the position of assistant foreman in the Gullett plant. The Baumhardt boys met with more than one family's share of bad fortune, as Jacob Baumhardt, a brother of Edward, lost his left foot in France and suffered a compound fracture of the right leg. He is now under treatment at any army hospital in Washington. Herman Bower, Jr., formerly foreman of a night firing shift, died January 15, at Savenay, France, of tuberculosis, after going through several engagements without a scratch.

The men thus far returned from service are: Lieutenant Julian L. Douglas, Corporal Lonsdale B. Copeland, Corporal Ernest Morrow, Floyd Hall, Willis Nickols, Henry Dickson, Roy Conklin, Don Lucas, Thomas Hunter, Clark Gallagher, Owen Roberts, William Becker, Cleo Folkes, Oscar Sielaff, Walter Sielaff, Clifford Routson, Clyde Guttery, Clyde Stine and Charles Kirk. Those still in service are: Alva Martin, Homer Hagemann, Carl Stutt, Oran Sanders, Fred Despain, August Gould, Edson Caspers, Frank Caspers, Anton Huneke and Rowland Ford. Several of the last-named have probably landed in this country since they have last been heard from.

One result of the home-coming entertainment was a resolution of the Gullett employees to hold a dance once a month at the company's plant. The large service house proved a fine place for a dance. An 8-piece orchestra played an excellent concert program and furnished good dance music. Features of the evening's entertainment were a drill and army songs by the returned boys, a group of Scotch songs by Corporal Copeland, which were much enjoyed, and a fine exhibition of army bugle calls by Corporal Ernest Morrow. Corporal Morrow was one of three buglers chosen out of thirty-six at Camp Wheeler for overseas service. Two hundred guests were present, including the families of all employees and the parents of the service men. A substantial supper was served at midnight.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

It was hardly expected that the good week embracing Memorial day trade would be followed by one such as has just passed. For the first time in many months the peddler's push cart has been conspicuous on the street, and his wares have not been of the usual poor variety. The market has been tremendously overloaded, without any corresponding increase in demand.

Peonies have been arriving in an avalanche; the quantity has been so great that anything like a clearance was absolutely impossible. The ash barrel brigade has been the best customer. Naturally, nearly everything else was affected. Carnations went to the glut point, 30 cents per hundred being really a fair price in comparison with some of the prices where clearances were essential. Roses, which were unduly plentiful, went down in the crash. The downward movement was helped considerably by the hot weather experienced for several days and the open condition of most arrivals. Added to these conditions was a tremendous influx of miscellaneous flowers, mostly outside-grown, the wastage in which was enormous.

In striking contrast with this state of things was the extreme shortage of lily of the valley, a shortage severely felt in this month of weddings, producing business almost unparalleled for the season. The best valley was held at 30 cents per spray and stock available was quickly snapped up.

While at this writing conditions are not materially changed, dull and rainy weather, with a cooler temperature, have shortened the general supply. The influx is still much too great for the demand, and it is a sacrificing market. The peony supply appears to be as heavy as ever, but there are not quite so many roses and carnations. Some of the wholesalers are of the opinion that present conditions cannot last long, but it is safe to say that little improvement can be looked for until peonies are out of the way.

Roses are arriving in great quantity, much stock too far advanced to suit the majority of buyers. Consequently, after selections are made at quotable prices, the rest moves for anything it is possible to obtain. This, of course, is not an unusual condition at this season, but it is so greatly marked now because of such a long period of fairly uniform supply. Of the hybrid teas, Columbia and Premier hold up well under summer conditions and command favor. Killarney runs lowest in quality, but is not so abundant as in former years, owing to its abandonment by many growers.

Carnations are at a low level, the demand for them being short. After the best have passed at quoted prices, the surplus moves at figures which hardly meet shipping expenses. White varieties are more plentiful than the others, therefore harder to move.

Orchids, especially cattleyas, are in supply sufficient to create a wide latitude in prices. The best cattleyas move fairly well, but the small and inferior flowers move with difficulty.

There are many additions to the supply of miscellaneous flowers, notably cornflowers, gaillardias, coreopsis, sweet williams and bouvardia. Some extra fine stocks are coming in and the doubles clear fairly well at from 15 to 25 cents per bunch. Sweet peas are more than plentiful and a top price of 50 cents per hundred is not easy to obtain.

It is a "buyers' market," in every sense of the term.

Various Notes.

Miss Bertha Eves, for several years secretary of the Brooklyn Botanical Garden, died June 4. During the war she had been an active canteen worker.

The Cedar Hill Nurseries, of Brookville, L. I., and the Cottage Gardens Co., of Queens, L. I., have arranged to stage a peony show at the American Museum of Natural History, June 11 to 14, inclusive. Florists are invited to send exhibits, but no awards will be made.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Stuppy, of St. Joseph, Mo., spent a few days in New York last week. E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., and Dr. Moore, of the Hollywood Gardens, Seattle, Wash., were other visitors.

The crop of weddings in New York is exceptionally large this month. Many of the ceremonies are at churches, and use lavish decorations. To many florists a demand for wedding decorations seems like a return to old-time business conditions. Steamer trade has not assumed large proportions yet, travel being still greatly restricted, and passages in consequence hard to obtain.

Joseph S. Fenrich has helped to relieve the shortage of housing accommodation in Manhattan by securing a home in East Orange, N. J.

Stephen Masur, the Brooklyn retailer, has relieved himself of all concern as to where he will in future be permitted to reside, by purchasing the Brooklyn Heights dwelling property which he has rented for a number of years.

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

Plan Convention Trip.

There was a meeting of the New York Florists' Club, Monday evening, June 9, with a fair attendance. President P. F. Kessler occupied the chair.

John Miesem, chairman of the committee on bowling, reported progress. Before organizing a team for the Detroit tournament, he said, it would be necessary to have a list of members who intended going to the convention and he invited all who had such intentions to hand in their names.

Chairman A. L. Miller, of the transportation committee, reported that at a meeting of his committee, held that afternoon, arrangements had been completed for the travel of the club's delegation to the Detroit convention of the S. A. F. The plan favored by the club at its preceding meeting was adopted and the trip will be made via Buffalo, thence by boat to Detroit. The party will leave New York Sunday evening, August 17, at 8:30, by the D. L. & W. railroad, arriving in Buffalo at 7:30 a. m., next day. Those who wish to do so will be able to visit Niagara Falls; the others will be able to put in an enjoyable day in Buffalo. At 6 p. m. all will take the boat to Detroit, where they will arrive next morning, Tuesday. The fare to Buffalo will be $12.83, with sleeping berths about $2.16 extra. The boat fare is $4.34, with staterooms, accommodating two persons, $3.78. The railroad will provide a special car if the party numbers twenty-five and will engage twenty-five staterooms in advance. Persons traveling with baggage will find the transfer in Buffalo convenient, as the boat landing is only about 200 feet from the railroad station.

The following announced that they would join the party and, with the wives of some of them, it was found that twenty-one was the nucleus of the party: A. L. Miller, Joseph A. Manda, John Miesem, Curt Thimm, M. Matheron, J. H. Fiesser, P. W. Popp, P. Gerlaird, J. G. Esler, F. H. Traendly, A. M. Henshaw, P. F. Kessler, C. W. Scott, A. T. De La Mare and Roman J. Irwin. In addition, it is known that many others will join the party and that still others are planning to motor to Buffalo, joining the party at the boat. From information forthcoming, it was reported that the party might number seventy-five or more. The chairman called attention to the fact that as there was a probability that hotel accommodations might be a little congested during August, it would be advisable to book reservations early and Vice-President Fetters, in Detroit, would gladly do the needful in this respect upon receipt of request.

Miscellaneous Matters.

A. M. Henshaw, chairman of the committee on quarters, reported that his committee had made diligent search, but up to this time had only two locations in prospect and these need not be considered for the present. On motion the committee was continued, to report at the next meeting.

Arthur Herrington, for the flower show committee, reported that the committee, by invitation, visited Cedar Hill Nurseries and the home of Chairman Theo. A. Havemeyer, where they were most cordially welcomed and entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Havemeyer. On motion a vote of thanks was passed to the hosts for this courtesy.

The following were elected to membership: F. E. Betheuser, F. F. Rockwell, Derrill W. Hart and Edward Koenig. Mr. Koenig being present, he was introduced to the gathering and made suitable response.

President Kessler, as chairman of the committee of florists and allied trades during the recent drive for the Salvation Army, reported that the committee lacked $50 of its subscription quota, but as he felt that the club would be pleased to subscribe this amount he had returned the full quota. On motion of Sergt. Edw. A. Manda, the club ordered a check for $50 to be drawn to cover the subscription. Sergt. Manda, who has just returned from France, where he had been since this country entered the war, spoke feelingly of the great work of the Salvation Army, especially at the extreme front, where its services were most gratefully appreciated by the boys. He also told of his journeyings while in the service.

President Kessler announced the following as a nominating committee for the nomination of officers for 1920, to report at the November meeting: A. T. De La Mare, W. R. Pierson, Walter F. Sheridan, J. B. Nugent, Jr., Emil Schloss, Jos. S. Fenrich and R. Koehne.

Secretary Young announced that the trustees would make a semiannual audit of the club's books during July.

The meeting adjourned with the understanding that the next meeting will be on the second Monday in September.

CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

Conditions show a great change since last week. Up to last week, stock, for the most part, cleaned up well, but this week finds the market flooded with carnations and peonies with little call for them, as business seems to have almost come to a standstill. But most of the florists are thankful for this lull, as they have been so overworked the last six months that they are glad to get a little rest.

For the first time in many months wholesalers have had more stock on their hands than they knew what to do with. Business has been just fair and that is all that can be said of it.

Besides peonies and carnations, there are some roses, particularly American Beauties, coming in, with a few calendulas, daisies, bachelor's buttons, gladioli, baby's breath and delphiniums. Sweet peas and Easter lilies are just about done for.

There has been a big call for lily of the valley for June weddings; in fact, the demand has been much greater than the supply.

The weather during the last few days has been slightly cooler and flowers coming in have been better than usual at this time of year.

The demand for fancy ferns has been tremendous. Good ferns have been hard to get, because the new ones have not yet arrived and those from cold storage are not so good as they should be.

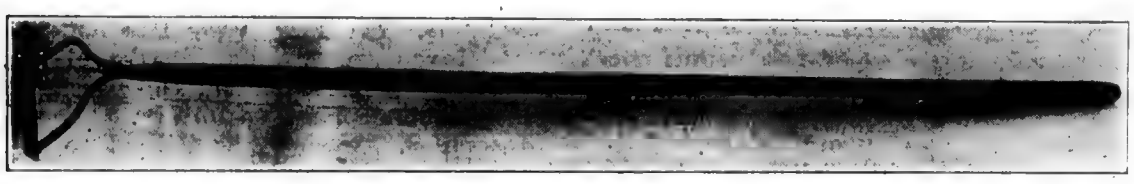
Various Notes.

Robert Walters, prominent east side florist, has gone to Middle Bass for a week to make arrangements for building a summer cottage.

Herman Knoble, of Knoble Bros., has been spending considerable time at his peony farm, on Bosworth road, during the last week.

Albert Barber, of the Park Flower Shop, has made preparations to move to his new home in the country in the near future.

Miss Rose Rigo, daughter of the west side florist, has announced her engagement to Julius Lesniansky, who has opened a new flower store in Akron.



Henry Blind, of Pittsburgh, was a visitor in town.

Albert Hart, of Lakewood, reports the purchase of a Dodge automobile.

George Potter, of the W. Q. Potter Co., has moved out into the country to a new suburban residence, which he intends to make his home the year around.

Albert Barber is getting ready to open a new flower store on East Fourth street, around the corner from the wholesale district. This should be a good location, as it is in the path of the market crowds. Mr. Barber says he is so busy he has no time for fishing.

A. V. Lindquist's New Garden Weeder and Mulch Maker.

A HANDY NEW TOOL.

Did you ever notice how many of the tools used around a greenhouse and in the garden have been developed by the grower to meet some special need? Some growers are adept in such matters and the trade has profited to no small extent by their inventive faculties. A. V. Lindquist, of Alexandria, Minn., is one of the men of mechanical turn of mind who keep producing one new thing after another. One of his devices so well met a long felt want that it led to the organization of the Harvester Trap Co., with gratifying success. Recently Mr. Lindquist developed a weeder that looked so good that many people who saw it wanted to get one like it and a quantity was manufactured by the Harvester Trap Co., to meet the local demand. It may, next season, be listed in some of the western seed catalogues. The weeder is shown in the accompanying illustration. It is a simple blade of good steel just soft enough so it can be sharpened with a file. It has two cutting edges. The blade is rigid, because of the strong attachment at each end. The shape permits working close to plants without injuring them. Pushing or pulling the blade just under the surface of the ground, the soil is loosened at the same time the weeds are cut down. Every grower knows the value of the mulch thus created.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

Business is brisk with florists all around here, and it is expected to continue so all through this month. There are a number of weddings scheduled, as well as many social events, and school commencements will be on until the middle of the month. Stock is plentiful. It is much better because of the cool weather which prevailed the latter part of May, and is arriving in fine shape for the many purposes for which it is wanted. Prices went down last week. Roses are now from to 3 to 10 cents, wholesale; carnations are $30 per thousand and gladioli are 10 and 12 cents. Sweet peas are done for this season in this vicinity. The cool, damp weather caused the crop to go off about a month earlier than usual.

Various Notes.

The opening of the Newman theater, the latest achievement in motion picture houses, June 5, was a busy day for a number of local florists. Orders were wired from producers and screen stars in all parts of the country. Friends of the management and business associates in the city sent flowers for the occasion and the result was a magnificent display that seemed a flower show in itself. Some of the baskets of American Beauties cost from $75 to $100. One of the daily papers estimated the amount of flowers received during the day at $10,000. Florists say this was an exaggeration of many thousands, but those who had the bulk of the business agree that it was a big day.

The Alpha Floral Co. has been sending complimentary boxes of flowers to homes where new babies have arrived. The names have been chosen from the record of births in the daily papers and selections have been made according to location most likely to afford future business in the way of orders. This is one of a number of advertising schemes which this company has tried. As yet results are difficult to trace. Acknowledgments of the courtesy have averaged about one to every six boxes sent.

Graduation exercises at the numerous private schools in the city have been more festive in the way of flower giving than any year since war began. A year ago there were practically no gifts of flowers to graduates. This season the economy was more than made up for in the numbers and lavishness of orders. Some graduates in the more exclusive schools were recipients of as many as eight and ten corsages in addition to other floral gifts.

P. A. Manson, general manager of the Pinehurst Floral Co., Pleasant Hill, Mo., who has been ill for a couple of weeks, is recovering.

W. L. Rock has gone to Detroit to join A. Pochelon and together they will enjoy a vacation in the Wisconsin woods.

H. T. Smith, president, and Harry Blake, secretary of the Pinehurst Floral Co., were in Kansas City, June 7. They say that they have more than doubled the force of employees at the greenhouses.

R. C. Hinz, Leavenworth, Kan., and Roy Murray, Olathe, Kan., were recent visitors.

Lawrence Rock, who was in the navy during the war, has been released from service and is now learning the retail business with Max Schling, in New York. J. E. K.

INDIANA ASSOCIATION.

The Indiana State Florists' Association met June 3 at the commission house of the Smith & Young Co. In the absence of President Anders Rasmussen, Vice-President Herman Young presided. O. E. Steinkamp was also absent, and A. F. J. Baur acted as secretary. Frank Anderson was elected to membership, and Mr. Kiefer and Fred Steinmeyer were proposed.

A communication had been received from Dillon Myers on the insurance project. A general discussion of this subject followed, and the committee was instructed to go ahead with its investigation.

The fall chrysanthemum show was one of the topics of the meeting. Reports were heard from the various committees, which were found to be working to make this a big success.

Good fellowship and coöperation among florists was a vital topic. A better business bureau for florists seemed a good proposition. Reliability is the secret of success and if the entire florists' business could be built on this the trade would surely prosper. These were the sentiments expressed.

Attention was called to the vase of beautiful Ruth Baur carnations, which showed exceptional quality for this time of the year. Some fine samples of bedding stock from Miller's Greenhouses, of Muncie, were also shown. E. E. T.

ROEBLING ORCHIDS SOLD.

The celebrated orchid collection owned by the late Charles G. Roebling, of Trenton, N. J., has been sold intact to a private collector prominently known in Philadelphia. This sale of orchids, which probably is the largest transaction of its kind that has ever been made in this or perhaps any other country, was executed by A. M. Van Den Hoek, the Philadelphia district manager of the W. H. Moon Co., Morrisville, Pa. The collection consists of over 600 species and varieties, with several thousand flowered and unflowered home-raised seedlings. J. G.

"Grand weather, fine stock, big sales," reports Sam Hanson, of North Troy, N. Y.

W. W. Hannell, of Watervliet, N. Y., reports that the demand for hydrangeas and hybrid roses is beyond that of any former season and he thinks that overproduction is altogether unlikely, owing to their increasing popularity.

H. C. Neubrand, representative of Barr & Co., Manchester, Conn., writing from Eustis, Fla., where he has spent some time with his family, who are sojourning there for their health, hopes to call on his old friends as usual. He expected to arrive in New York June 10.

E. F. Hoehl, who has represented S. S. Skidelsky & Co., of Philadelphia, as traveler and adviser, observed that it was a coincidence that with his closer affiliation with his house, New York should be selected as future headquarters. "We have felt for some time the necessity of being located at the principal port of entry for most of our goods," he said, "and to be in closer contact with many of our larger growers."

James G. Barrett, of Troy, N. Y., was putting the finishing touches to a superb wreath of magnolia leaves and lilies for the funeral of a deceased patron, who had passed the century mark, and observed, apropos of longevity, that he was trying to figure out his period of existence, when a well-wisher, in his enthusiasm, expressed the desire that Mr. Barrett "would live to see the day when he would eat the bird that scratched the gravel upon his grave."

A. D. Carpenter, of Cohoes, N. Y., takes a most cheerful view of the situation, basing his optimism upon the business done during the week preceding Memorial day and on the day itself.

Commenting on the possible scarcity of Dutch bulbs next season, Fred Goldring, of Slingerlands, N. Y., observed that this should not be an excuse for the theft of 100 tulip bulbs from a bed in City Hall park, New York city, which has caused the mayor to order an investigation into what is turning out to be a deep mystery, as the beds were under the care of special police.

"Fully up to our expectations," reports F. A. Danker, of Albany, N. Y. "For Memorial day we had the finest line of blooming plants, cut flowers and artificial designs ever carried and all of them went rapidly, at prices mutually satisfactory." W. C. Gloeckner spoke in a similar strain, adding that the plants which were not in bloom, and therefore were left over, will not wait long for a purchaser, as, now that the weather has become warm, the planting-out fever is stirred up.

The Rosendale Flower Shop, of Schenectady, N. Y., reports that through the medium of the pink section and the F. T. D. combined, the business fairly jumped over that of any former Mothers' day, although more orders were sent than received. "Business for Memorial day was never better," observed Henry Eberhardt, "nor prices better and steadier, geraniums as leaders going at $3 per dozen, selected at $3.50, and these we believe were the standard prices for this locality."

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

POSTAGE stamps cost less than either telephone or telegraph messages, so why not act in time, save money and avoid error?

So far geraniums have been selling as fast as they come into bloom. There probably is a fortnight of good business left for the plantsmen.

IS the present industrial impetus the optimistic rebound of restricted enterprise, or the reckless joy-ride of relieved spirits before reason puts on the brakes?

WHEN retail florists are called upon to bid against each other for a job, the man who is willing to promise as much as he must, and to supply just what he is paid for, has all the best of the competition.

THOSE who furnish equipment for retail flower stores say they never have had so much prospective business as now. Large numbers of florists evidently are planning to enlarge their sales facilities during the summer.

GROWERS note that with the better wages now being paid, some of the workers manifest a disinclination to do manual labor. It never will be possible to use only one's hands or one's head in successful greenhouse work.

IS your business potbound? If it is, shift to a larger size by getting increased facilities and some competent assistants. With trained help unprocurable, call in a good man from some other line and make it worth his while to learn.

WAR, even if destructive physically, is constructive spiritually, and one of the biggest things it has done to this country is to show business of all kinds that service is what counts, not meaning patriotic service in a uniform and with a gun, but everyday service to the fellow citizens who are one's patrons.

THE examination of a considerable number of different lots of unsatisfactory geraniums and chrysanthemums this spring leads to the belief that some propagators went wrong through ignorance and some through cupidity. In both cases they used stuff for cuttings that never could make first-class stock. One can not cut a plant to pieces and get an equally good cutting out of every fragment.

BULB growing in the United States will get a slow start because of the difficulty of procuring planting stock.

AFTER an excellent business during the past season, southern florists expect continued strong trade, banking on the high price of cotton.

WHAT the trade needs, today, more than anything else is a body of capable young assistants. The only reason we have not got them is that we have been afraid to pay attractive wages.

IF all your neighbors are storing coal this summer, you may be reasonably sure of an easy situation next winter, but if nobody is storing fuel now look out for the pinch that will come later.

THE plant brokers have had a fine season and have served a useful purpose, just as the cut flower commission man does. They enable the growers to devote their whole thought and energy to increasing production.

MOST florists' businesses are one-man affairs. This is lovely until a boom strikes, like this year. Then the one-man business has growing pains. They are worst at first. It is hard to make the start; afterward, as the founder becomes accustomed to not trying to do it all alone, growth comes easier.

GRADUAL reduction of the taxes caused by the war tend to increase the public's inclination to loosen the purse-strings. It is proposed in Congress to remove the luxury taxes immediately, and to cut the income and excess profits taxes further. That means Mr. and Mrs. Jones will have a few more dollars for extras—including flowers.

GOING GOOD.

Business never was better with The Review and its patrons. The volume of advertising carried in this paper in May was greater than any other May in its history and June has started far ahead of last year. Probably it is because of letters like these:

The ad has done the work. We sold a great number of plants with it that we could not have sold otherwise.—T. R. McGinniss & Son, South Williamsport, Pa., June 2, 1919.

All I have left is my glass, and I had several chances to even sell that.—F. L. Henry, the Milford Greenhouse, Milford, Ill., June 2, 1919.

When you hear a florist complain of the cost of advertising you may be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

NEW BLOOD.

If the growers who complain that this, that or the other fine old variety is not so good as it used to be will examine their methods they probably can find the reason.

Take, for instance, the geranium, at this season occupying a conspicuous place in the trade. How many geranium growers have planted out or set aside their stock plants? Nine out of every ten florists who propagate geraniums use as stock plants whatever happens to be left, the slow growers, the shy bloomers, the runts and the blind, not to mention the diseased. With such genealogy traceable through many generations, is it any wonder favorite varieties run out? Isn't it, instead, to be marveled that they maintain their health and original characteristics so long as they do?

Any student of genetics will say that quick decadence must result from such a system, or lack of system, as the growers follow. To work a stock up, propagate only from the healthiest plants, selected for the qualities one wishes to perpetuate. To try to revitalize a run-down stcok is too slow; throw it out and bring in new blood by buying the best, regardless of a little extra cost.

RAIL RATES MAY RISE AGAIN.

Before florists have obtained their next season's coal, railroad rates may drive the freight cost on it still higher.

"To provide for the greatly increased cost of railroad labor, as well as labor in industries supplying coal, steel and other materials to the carriers, it seems inevitable that the government must soon advance railroad rates sufficiently to provide at least from $300,000,000 to $400,000,000 additional revenue."

The foregoing statement, by Frank H. Fayant, assistant to the chairman of the Association of Railway Executives, he explained in the following way:

"The increased cost of railroad labor since 1917 is $1,000,000,000 a year; the average annual earnings per man have risen from $1,000 to $1,500. The increased cost of materials consumed in the production of transportation is more than $500,000,000 a year, and the bulk of this increased cost goes to the workers in coal mines, steel plants, and the other industries producing railroad materials. It is fair to say that of the $1,500,000,000 added to the cost of producing transportation all but a small part is in wages.

"To meet this increased operating cost, the government has thus far increased railroad revenues through advances in rates by about $1,000,000,000; so that there is left $500,000,000 of increased costs that have not been provided for."

CARNATION PRICES IN ENGLAND.

War's effect on cut flower prices was apparent in England long before it was in the United States, because we were about three years behind Great Britain in all things pertaining to the cataclysm, and the trade phenomena we have noted this season were felt with greater force in the insular democracy.

Take, for instance, carnation prices: The Year Book of the British Carnation Society, recently received by The Review, contains a comparison of the prices of 1914 and 1918 on such standard American varieties as Enchantress, May Day, Mrs. Lawson, Winsor, Rosepink Enchantress, White Enchantress and Beacon.

Translating to American money, in June, 1914, these flowers brought from 1½ cents to 2 cents each (they are quoted at Covent Garden by the dozen, not by the hundred as here). In June, 1918, the London wholesale prices were 4 cents to 5 cents. The prices in January, 1914, were 5 cents to 6 cents and in January, 1918, 8 cents to 12 cents. At Christmas, 1914, the prices were 4 cents to 6 cents and at Christmas, 1918, they were 16 cents to 18 cents. These are actual average returns to growers, not advertised prices for selected stock.

As the reason for the prices it is stated that the supply in 1918 was only about one-fourth what it was in 1914.

OBITUARY

Anton J. G. Simmers.

Anton J. G. Simmers, one of the best known seed merchants of Toronto, Canada, died suddenly June 4, at the age of 59. Mr. Simmers had been in the best of health and his sudden death was a great shock to all.

Mr. Simmers was born and educated in Toronto. His father established the firm of J. A. Simmers, Ltd., and upon his death in 1883, Anton assumed the presidency of the company and, along with his brother, Herman, he had conducted the business ever since.

Mr. Simmers is survived by six children, of whom three served with the Canadian forces in France. One of them, Victor, is still overseas.

J. J. H.

Edward Hicks.

Edward Hicks, a retired and wealthy florist, of St. Louis, Mo., died there recently. He was 80 years old and was well known to the older florists. Mr. Hicks came here from England fifty years ago. He leaves a wife and son to mourn his loss.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The market this week is at a standstill. The principal business of both wholesale and retail houses was donations for the returning soldiers. The French and Italian idea of strewing the pathway of the returning heroes with flowers was much in vogue. Wagons went along the route of the parade selling peonies at 25 cents per two dozen and many of them were sold.

Speaking of peonies, there has been the largest crop here ever known. Never before was there such a glut in them. The first part of the crop was of fine quality and brought good prices, but as the crop advances the quality became poorer. The extremely warm weather caused them to open too fast, so that when a buyer made a reasonable offer for a lot it was not refused. Roses of all kinds are plentiful, especially those of the rambler variety. Occasionally some of the stores receive good orders, but there is so much stock on the market that it makes no impression. This is a condition to be looked for at this time, but it will not be long until the glut is over. Then it will be hard to secure stock at any price. If we remember, this was the case last year. The growers sent in anything they had, such as geranium blooms, etc.

Colleges Bar Flowers.

This is June week at the U. S. Naval Academy, Annapolis. It has always been a big flower occasion, but, for some reason this year, the authorities inserted a notice in the paper, "Please omit flowers." This sounds a little funereal, but when the navy issues an order it must be carried out. I tried to find a reason for it, but could not. Many florists had large orders, which were countermanded. The authorities, however, placed a large order for first-class stock to be used in decorations.

Commencement exercises at Goucher College were held yesterday. This, too, has always been a big flower occasion, but this year flowers were conspicuous by their absence.

These are the first commencements that have been held, and if they are a precedent for those to follow the commencement business will not amount to much this year.

Various Notes.

Ward Perry, son of J. J. Perry, of the S. S. Pennock Co., has been discharged from the 110th Field Artillery and is now taking a few weeks' vacation.

Robert Johnston is still at Camp Dix. His family had an opportunity to see him in New York when he arrived. Robert paid particular attention to the flower stores in France and Germany, which, in most cases, are combined with fruit. He says he has some good ideas to introduce in his mother's store next fall.

Bedding is about over for this year. In spite of handicaps, there were certainly many bedding plants sold at prices that made growers smile, and I predict that there will be no shortage next spring.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The week ending June 8 brought a condition which had been expected for some time—an overloaded market from Monday to Saturday. Flowers, in general, sold at almost any price. Quantity buyers could name their own price. Such a week demonstrates how miserable the flower business can be and gives emphasis to the past forty weeks of unbroken prosperity.

Our climate is kindly cool in summer and, following the present hot spell, stock will shorten up quickly and prices catch a medium-good balance. Roses have suffered but little and carnations have size and substance. Sweet peas are not plentiful, and any that have good appearance bring good prices.

Some good Gladiolus America are coming in. Yellow and white daisies are plentiful and good. Centaureas, in lavender and white, are plentiful and sell well. Salpiglossis, annual larskpur, clarkia, pyrethrum, daisies and white buddleias are among the new ones of the season.

Red Arrow Day.

Under the auspices of the war mothers, June 6 was set aside as a day of festivities for the boys of the 32nd Division. The day was declared a holiday. All banks and nearly all other business houses were closed. The program started with a parade in the morning. Then followed big "eats" at noon for the Red Arrow boys, free theater performances and a ball game in the afternoon, with a dance in the evening.

The day was set just right for florists, as it moved like magic our one and only glut in flowers. A handsomely decorated automobile strewed flowers and rose petals before the parade. Aeroplanes dropped flowers on the marching boys from overhead. Flowers were everywhere.

The evening before, a dozen or more enthusiastic retailers met at one of the wholesale houses and tied up 200 generous-looking bouquets from flowers donated by all the wholesalers. These were presented to the wounded soldiers and nurses, who rode in automobiles.

The things accomplished were a public showing of flowers which caused much favorable comment, and the gratitude of the war mothers, which is something to covet. It made the boys happy and moved the glut.

Various Notes.

Milwaukee friends of Adam Zender, of Chicago, were grieved to hear of the sudden death by drowning of his son. Fred Holton and Herman Hunkel attended the funeral June 4.

C. C. Pollworth and William Kennedy were in Chicago on the evening of June 5, in response to invitations to a ball given by the Chicago Florists' Club. A number who had intended to go remained to make up bouquets for the soldiers.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Holton and their daughter, Ruth, will leave June 12 for a trip through the west. Their first stop will be at Salt Lake City, where they will attend the national convention of Rotarians. Their itinerary includes Yellowstone Park and the Pacific coast, from Vancouver to San Diego.

The coming week will see the first of the graduations. Some good orders have been booked by the local retail stores.

William R. Schroeder, of North Milwaukee, has been cutting some early dahlias. Mr. Schroeder is going to investigate the possibilities of forcing dahlias.

August Kellner decorated the Auditorium for the ball in honor of the Red Arrows.

A number of stores which operate every spring, selling bedding and vegetables plants in otherwise vacant store rooms, have closed, owing to their inability to procure a large stock in flowering plants. Some grocers who found geraniums profitable in former years have let them alone on account of the advanced prices.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The glut, beginning on the last day of May, continued for exactly a week. It was bad while it lasted, but conditions now, happily, are greatly improved. While the oversupply was at its height it was difficult to make any sort of a clearance. There were so many flowers that no one was able to use them all, regardless of prices. At the same time, a large part of the daily receipts was in such condition that the stock could not be used for shipping trade, and it was necessary to do a great deal of sorting to get out the comparatively small quantity of stock required for out-of-town orders. June 6 some of the wholesalers saw the back of their ice-boxes for the first time since Memorial day and June 7, Saturday, the market cleaned up in good shape. Prices were not high, but there was a first-class, active demand and at closing time that night there were few flowers left in the market, certainly less than at any time since May 29. Saturday's clean-up was due to the city buyers; there was no special shipping demand that day.

The present week opened with the market in good condition for this season of the year. There is an abundance of stock in nearly all lines, but it does not approach a glut. While prices are much lower than they were last month, they are not bad for this time of year. The orders coming to the market reflect the same general conditions as prevailing over the middle west. Last week the shipping demand was the lightest the market has seen in nine months, but this week it is much stronger again, indicating that there were plenty of flowers everywhere last week and that the flood has subsided in other markets as well as here. Conditions now are considered satisfactory and it is figured there will be fair business until another wave of high heat hits the trade.

There are just a few things on which prices are high, because the supply is less than the demand. Most important of these at the moment probably is valley. There is a daily supply from about three sources of production, but the quantity sometimes is not more than half what the orders amount to. There are few first-class cattleyas; they are to be had by ordering in advance, but the late buyer frequently finds himself unable to pick up any orchids. Naturally, prices are strong. It is almost impossible to find Easter lilies; some come in, but they are so few they quickly disappear and orders cannot be filled. First-class sweet peas are not abundant, but there are plenty of another kind, not good enough to ship.

The rose is the mainstay of the market. Columbia is the principal variety now, though Russell has lost none of its popularity. Sunburst is in special request because there are so few yellow flowers. Premier has made its appearance, but those who believe the rose has a great future are not boosting it now. They are waiting for better quality, most of the flowers now available being the first cut from stock recently benched. Those who have good Beauties are doing splendidly with them.

Most of the carnations are soft and there have been many complaints from the out-of-town buyers. It always is so when the first summer days come; a little later the stock will be firmer, if smaller.

Peonies have not come in so heavily as expected. The local cut has just begun, although growers west of the city were cutting rather heavily last week. Apparently the local crops have suffered from the same causes the southern ones did, although perhaps not quite so severely. At any rate, it now is accepted as a fact that the cut will not be heavy this year. The best of the flowers are going into storage as usual.

It is noteworthy that the indoor gladioli have at length begun to come in considerable quantity. As a rule the stock is of extremely fine quality and such varieties as Pendleton and Schwaben are making up to 20 cents per spike in the face of considerable competition

QUANTITIES OF FINE ROSES CHEAP

We are Rose specialists and are cutting from 245,000 rose plants, all in one large range of glass, grown under the very best methods and skill. The advantage of buying such stock, absolutely guaranteed as to quality and freshness, has made this firm one of the leading rose supply houses of the west. We also grow Beauties, Carnations and other stock.

Our Russell and Columbia are the finest for quality of any in this country. They are the best hot weather flowers. Prices, $0.50 to $2.00 per dozen, according to length of stems.

by such older varieties as King and America at lower prices and outdoor stock from the south at much cheaper rates. Statice has come to play a considerable part, some of it locally grown and some imported from California.

There have been days on which ferns were difficult to obtain. The shortages have been temporary and have been due to poor transportation, regular shipments arriving irregularly.

The Florists' Club Dances.

The ladies' night of the Chicago Florists' Club, June 5, was not quite up to expectations, as it did not draw so many members as a regular meeting. The dance music was excellent and was furnished by Murray's Entertainers Supreme. Refreshments were served between the dances. Mrs. C. Frauenfelder gave a song recital, which was much enjoyed; she was called back to sing three songs before the audience would let her stop. The visitors from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Pollworth and Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Kennedy, of Milwaukee, and Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill. Mr. Ammann is president of the S. A. F.

The business meeting consisted only of proposing these names for membership: Antonio Rocca, 55 East Jackson boulevard; H. C. Wullbrandt, 5315 West Madison street; Fred Ottenbacher, Michael Feeres, Joseph Eringer, Frank Jaral and J. Beyers.

hour twenty-four other orders had come in for this funeral and the force was on the jump. By 2 p. m. two trucks had started with these flowers and ten designs had been made for other funerals. Then Manager Mallinson and his staff sent out for lunch.

The Chicago Retail Florists' Association has invited the growers, and all others interested in the betterment of market conditions, to meet the retailers at the Randolph hotel at 8 p. m., June 17. A large attendance is expected.

Mrs. A. E. Bates plans to enter the florists' trade July 1, opening a retail store at 3420 West Sixty-third street on that date.

The irises at Peterson's Nursery are at their best this week. The first peonies were cut June 9; they will be at the top of their season early next week.

A Jewish tag day, June 8, called for the use of about 60,000 carnations. They cost $10 to $12.50 per thousand and the committee gave them to young women, who sold them on the street for any coin the contributor was pleased to drop in a box. A. Iralson did the buying on the market.

In the midst of last week's glut the biggest home-coming parade of all, June 5, resulted in a call to florists to provide flowers with which to shower the returning soldiers. The trade responded willingly, but several who contributed flowers and time were displeased that florists received no mention in the newspaper accounts of the doings; indeed, from some of the narratives one would have obtained the idea that State street department stores instead of the trade furnished the flowers.

Our soldiers now are nearly all home from France. So far as reported, there were no casualties among them.

The big second story of the Lemoyne building, occupied by the A. L. Randall Co., this week is getting its annual freshening up. The ceilings and walls are being washed and calcimined and the floor is being oiled, so that it will be practically dustless.

A convention which filled Hotel La Salle with women last week resulted in a demand for corsage bouquets at the hotel's flower store, which kept Manager Edward Boyar and his two assistants on the jump. Mr. Boyar turns out work that brings his customers back for more.

The joint publicity committees of the retailers' and wholesalers' associations are using attractive cards in about 750 elevated-railway cars. This month's card shows a June bride and her flowers. Copies of it also are in the windows of most of the stores.

Walter Retzer, formerly of Chicago, now is conducting the Washington Gardens at Houston, Tex., and is shipping gladiolus blooms north.

The George Wittbold Co. was the lowest bidder on the decorations, church and home, for the wedding last week of the daughter of John R. Thompson.

The establishment of the late Elmer Sigwalt, at Arlington Heights, is being run by his widow under the name of the Elk Grove Floral Co.

June 8 J. Wall said he had not then begun his local retail deliveries and planting orders, his energies for the preceding month having been wholly occupied with wholesale orders. His stock is well cleaned up; he says he could sell the place out over again if he had it full of geraniums in bloom.

It may help a little to know that the E. C. Amling Co., in spite of the bottomless market last week, reports sales averaging nearly $1,000 per day more than for the same days in June last year, when business was not considered bad, either.

greenhouse end for the J. C. Rennison Co., Sioux City, Ia., was in town this week on his annual tour of inspection. He takes a few days about once a year to see what the leading growers here are doing. PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Heat has harmed the market. A torrid wave during the first week of June is as remarkable as it is unfortunate. The thermometer reached 97 degrees in the shade and seemed inclined to stay. Flowers came into the city in enormous quantities. The wholesalers complained that the retailers lay down just when they should have been doing a little better than their best. The retailers complained that flowers are not wanted when it is hot. It was awful.

In spite of all this, there is still a market. Most of the flowers brought something, not much, but something, and there was a terrible lot of flowers. Peonies, roses and carnations came in by the wagon load, and how they suffered with the heat!

Peonies are over now, so far as fresh cut flowers are concerned. Dependence will now be placed on the rather moderate number that are in cold storage. The season ended suddenly. A good beginning, but a bad ending.

Taking listed figures without considering conditions, the price decline was extraordinary. Beauties went from $50 to $30 in two days, Russell from $20 to $8, carnations from $5 to $2. But they were not the same roses or carnations; the heat had made them different, quite different. Cattleyas alone survived the wreck; they remained at $75 to $100. There are, of course, few cattleyas.

Let us turn from the past to the future. There is reason to believe that there will be a sharp advance in the market, that whatever flowers survive the heat will be in brisk demand at better prices by June 10. Of course, poor flowers cannot hope for much favor.

The Lansdowne Show.

The Twentieth Century club house was the scene of a pretty flower show the afternoon and evening of June 7, when the Lansdowne Flower Show Association held its tenth annual exhibition. The exhibitors were the members of the association. The exhibits came from their own gardens, the results of their own efforts. Rivalry was keen.

Of far more interest to the readers of this column than a description of this show and a list of the exhibitors is the spirit of the affair. It is the true amateur spirit in horticulture, the love of flowers and plants and things that grow. It is the spirit that ought to be fostered and encouraged in every community, a spirit that is free from professionalism, a spirit that will make true flower lovers of all those who come under its influence.

Mr. Hill's Visit.

E. Gurney Hill, of Richmond, Ind., was in this city June 4 and 5. Mr. Hill came here from the Washington gathering of rosarians to attend a similar meeting at the home of Captain George C. Thomas, at Chestnut Hill. Mr. Hill lunched with Captain Thomas, and afterwards addressed the members of the American Rose Society. Later he visited a number of the growers, piloted by Edwin J. Fancourt, who also had E. Allan Peirce, of Waltham, Mass., as a guest.

Mr. Hill was in excellent spirits. He spoke with pleasure of his chat with the Rev. Dr. Mills, of Syracuse, who is working on new lines in roses. He spoke of the wonderful support given Premier and the confidence shown in his rose by Chicago growers; 500,000 Premier have been sold, he said, as against 300,000 Columbia in the first year, until now the record sale for a new rose. He spoke enthusiastically of his new sport of Ophelia, Madame Butterfly.

Mr. Hill spent the night with his friend, Robert Craig. A reassuring message from Earl Mann about a fire at home failed to reach him before he left.

town, was crowded to the doors at noon, June 11, with the wealth and fashion of the suburb. The keenest interest was taken in the floral decorations, because of their unusual beauty. The known antipathy of the rector to floral decorations in his church drew the instant attention of each party of guests as they entered.

Peonies were used in great profusion, magnificent pink and white peonies. There were peonies on the columns, there were peonies in the chancel, there were peonies on the screens, there were great bunches of peonies tied with taffeta ribbon on the pews. Each cluster was of a single choice variety and each cluster was the work of an artist. The whole decoration clearly displayed the touch of a master hand.

Afterwards, as the guests assembled at the home of the bride's parents, there was much pleasant chaff. "Pulled one over on the parson," and "Who did it?" Then a name ran from mouth to mouth until all knew at whose skill they had marveled.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

There is little to say concerning business since Memorial day. It has simply all gone to pieces. Prices are completely shattered and all stability is gone. The downtown stores are making preparations for renovations and vacations, while the growers are busy making their calculations for the fall and taking an inventory of conditions. Everybody is pulling out as fast as his crops are off, and steps are being taken for rebenching as soon as things are in readiness.

street, Henry Max, manager, has closed.

Harry Landeran is arranging to close his flower department in the S. Kresge 5 and 10-cent store for the summer.

Extended alterations and renovations are being made in the wholesale store of J. E. Koppelman & Co., 47 Eddy street.

A letter was received last week from Max Villers, who is still in France with the Quartermaster's Corps, stating that he was well and expected to return sometime during the summer.

Sunday was observed as flower day in the interests of the Zionists. Smith, of Washington street, had the contract to supply 10,000 flowers for this occasion. W. H. M.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Last week business at the wholesale markets was fairly good, and there was more stock than the demand called for in the poorer grades. First-grade stock had a splendid demand all through the week, as there were several large weddings and a great amount of school work, which called for the better grade of stock. Prices have taken a tumble, and only on the extra fancy stock did the prices hold at market quotations. Roses are more plentiful and the inferior grades are sold in thousand lots at cheap prices, while fancy Russell, Columbia and Ophelia hold up well.

Carnations took a slump and fairly good stock was offered at $10 per thousand. The cool nights of late have held the quality up fairly well. Peonies are still coming in small lots, but the season for them is about over. Sweet peas have suffered in quality, owing to the dark weather and the almost daily rains. Low prices prevail in these. The few extra fancy alone hold up in price. Gladioli are coming in heavily, and these, too, came down in price. A big outdoor crop will soon be in, as all local growers have planted heavily this year.

Coreopsis, field daisies, cornflowers, dephiniums, snapdragons and candytuft are in heavy supply. Easter and candidum lilies, also a few callas, are in demand. Orchids are scarce, also good valley, while the demand is heavy. Flat ferns are coming in better as the season advances. All greens have been in big demand all the week.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association held its monthly meeting June 4 at the Eleven Mile House. The meeting was not so well attended, because of the busy planting season. The newly elected officers were installed. There was a general talk on the season's business, publicity and greenhouse building, which was interesting throughout. The date of the next meeting is July 2.

The Knoll brothers, in the south end, are making big improvements since their return from the army. Herman is building a large showhouse 25x100 at the old place, on Kansas street. John is building two houses at Imperial, Mo., near Kimmswick, each 25x200. More new houses will be added from time to time.

Secretary J. J. Windler represented the florists at a dinner at the Planters' hotel, given by the convention publicity bureau June 2. The dinner was given for two members of each organization

BOSTON.

The Market.

It is many years since Boston experienced such a scorching heat wave as during the first week of June just passed. In 1914 a heat wave just before Memorial day proved a severe handicap to business and it was fortunate that the heat wave did not arrive in advance of the great flower holiday this year. The market was quite good until June 3, when the maximum temperature reached 100 degrees and successive readings for the balance of the week of 100, 96, 88 and 92 degrees completely demoralized business. There were heavy arrivals of flowers and little call for them from retailers, outside of necessary funeral orders. Prices were quite unquotable and no reasonable offer was refused for anything. Large quantities found their way into the rubbish barrels.

Temperature conditions are now more tolerable and business is somewhat better. Both roses and carnations have much deteriorated in quality and are selling cheaply. The heat forced sweet peas out at such a rate that remaining flowers are short-stemmed and of inferior colors. Outdoor supplies are not yet available. The heat has brought in an avalanche of peonies and, in spite of a fair number of weddings, prices are low. Callas and lilies are both practically out of the market. Snapdragons are poor, but some good bachelor's buttons are coming in. Cattleya Gaskelliana has replaced C. Mossiæ. Some nice gardenias are coming in. Gladioli are in heavy oversupply. Herbaceous flowers, such as larkspurs, lupines, foxgloves, etc., with rhododendrons and mountain laurel, are being used for store window decorations.

Iris Exhibits at Horticultural Hall.

In spite of the intense heat, there was a good display of iris at Horticultural hall June 7. For twenty-four varieties, three spikes of each, H. F. Chase, Andover, was first, and George N. Smith, second. For twelve vases, John K. Alexander led. T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co. captured first and second for twelve trusses of rhododendrons, and secured a silver medal for William P. Rich, a handsome new variety, white tinged with lavender. Miss Grace Sturtevant, Wellesley, had a large table of new seedling irises of the germanica section and secured honorable mention for Valkyrie, Dream and Jeanette Dean. Faulkner Farm was first for twenty varieties of herbaceous perennials.

There were interesting displays of irises, peonies, rhododendrons or herbaceous perennials from H. F. Chase, T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., J. K. Alexander, George N. Smith, Faulkner Farm and Miss Cornelia Warren. Vegetable premiums were divided between Hillcrest Farm and Faulkner Farm.

Owing to peonies having been advanced so rapidly by the heat wave, the show of these scheduled for June 21 will be held June 14. The show of roses, strawberries, herbaceous plants, etc., will be held June 21 and 22.

Various Notes.

Prof. J. G. Jack, of the Arnold arboretum, had an interesting field day at that institution June 7. The rhododendron display at the base of Hemlock hill attracted a good crowd. In spite of the severe heat wave, the plants carried a wealth of excellent trusses. The mountain laurel display was also found to be almost at its height and made a most beautiful picture.

William P. Rich, secretary of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, is able to resume his duties again after a hospital operation for abscesses.

Galvin's had a heavy Memorial day business, and have a large number of weddings booked for the present month.

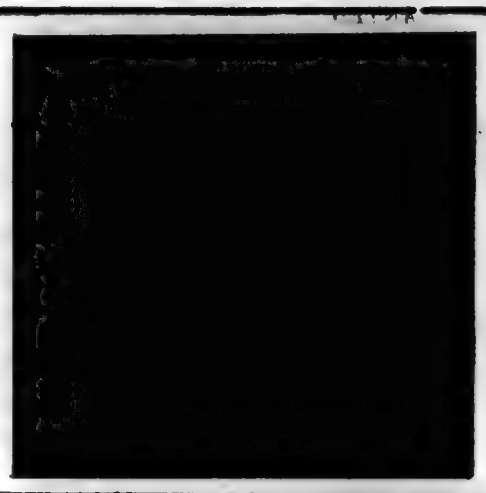
Among visitors last week was George C. Thomson, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis. Mr. Thomson's many friends were glad to see him and to learn of his success in the northwest. For some years he was manager at the seed store of R. & J. Farquhar & Co.

The Boston Cut Flower Co. is moving quantities of roses, while they are abundant, in boxes of twenty-five. They had a splendid Memorial day business.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will celebrate ladies' night at its next meeting, June 18. An excellent program has been prepared. Admission to the regular meeting is free, but there will be a charge for refreshments. The annual picnic will be July 24 at popular Cunningham park.

William Anderson, of South Lancaster, chairman of the plant and flower committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, who has been undergoing a course of treatment for a fortnight in the Brooks hospital, Brookline, was able to leave for home this week. His many friends sincerely hope he may soon completely recover.

Prospects for June business are encouraging, although the terrific heat at the commencement of the month gave trade a temporary black eye. A good crop of weddings is coming off, and colleges and schools are going to use flowers for graduations and class days much more freely than for two or three years past.



At Penn's, business this week is good. They have five important weddings, and funeral work shows but little diminution.

The orchids and other plants on the estate of Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Brookline, are being disposed of and some of the greenhouses are already torn down. William Thatcher has had charge here for many years and his fine displays will be much missed.

The Boston Herald of June 8 contained an interesting illustrated article on the Lowthorpe School of Horticulture, at Groton, Mass., one of the two schools in the United States which educate girls in horticulture. At Lowthorpe, landscape gardening, greenhouse work, and flower, vegetable and fruit culture are taught, and the school has proved most successful.

A drop in temperature June 7, from 90 degrees to 50 degrees, ended our first hot wave of the summer. Our climate is a variable one. June 21, 1918, great damage was done to many crops in Massachusetts by frost. W. N. C.

Red Wing, Minn.—John E. Sten, who has a fine establishment here, has a record probably unique among the florists of the northwest in that a few months hence he will celebrate his golden jubilee in the business. In half a century the florists' trade has gone through great changes, all to the good, Mr. Sten says, but he is beginning to think of retiring.

TORONTO, ONT.

The Approaching Convention.

Preparations are under way to make the coming convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association one of the biggest gatherings of growers, florists and gardeners in the history of the trade. With a view to providing for the greatly increased membership and facilitating the carrying on of business, the constitution is to be amended, dividing the association into three divisions to cover the growers, the retail florists and the gardeners.

One day of the convention, to be held August 12 to 15, has been set apart for the retailers, to permit them to organize. Sessions will be held in the morning and the Toronto Retail Florists' Club will entertain the guests at its annual picnic in the afternoon. The club has sent out questionnaires to all the retail florists in the Dominion and there has been a general response favorable to organizing.

At present the program may be outlined as follows: Tuesday: Business sessions and reading of papers at morning, afternoon and evening sessions; luncheon at noon. Wednesday: Session of retailers in morning and probably in evening; picnic in afternoon. Thursday: Business sessions and reading of papers afternoon; banquet in evening. Friday: Excursions. All the sessions will be held in the big American dining room of the Prince George hotel. The banquet will also be held there.

There will be a big gathering from all parts of Canada. Americans will be welcomed to the convention and it is hoped that there will be a large representation from south of the border.

The executives and various committees of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club and the Gardeners' and Florists' Association are coöperating in the preparation of the program and all visitors at the convention are assured of an educative and an interesting social time.

A Fact

If all commission houses treated shippers as well as we treat those who ship their flowers to us, you would never hear any complaints.

Special opportunity for a couple of good Rose Growers who are looking for best returns. Our present demand is greater than our supply.

"Say It with Flowers" is particularly applicable to the present home-coming, and it would be a splendid idea if potted plants and flowers are placed in front of dwellings, as expressing the love we bear our heroes who translated patriotism into service, and as honoring the memory of those brave boys who gave the last full measure of devotion.

Every home in Baltimore should fly a flag and enter into the spirit of this great occasion.

William F. Broening,
Mayor of Baltimore.

It is suggested that, as there will undoubtedly be many home-coming troop parades in various cities and towns throughout the country, the florists in such communities bring to the notice of their mayors the action of the Baltimore mayor, with the idea of getting out similar messages, the beneficial effect of which for the florists' business would be incalculable. It may be that they could also be induced to issue similar proclamations for "Armistice day."

And yet the florists themselves are from our Promotion Bureau. These lines are in the familiar script form used in the magazines and in our display signs. There are seven sizes available, from one and one-half inches to nine inches long, covering practically all requirements.

Write That Check!

Our committees are now formulating plans for speeding up the campaign. As we have before stated, many times, the committees must prepare months ahead for the insertion of magazine advertisements. They spend as they go, and it is quite obvious that unless the money is forthcoming they cannot proceed with their publicity plans. Marvelous results have been secured for what generally is admitted to be a small sum. A fund of $100,000 is required to extend these results and make them permanent. It is not a great sum. If the 20,000 florists believed to be in business paid per head assessments, it would only cost them $5 apiece. And yet we are obliged to stick around the $40,000 mark, even when some of our liberal-minded florists have given as much as $200, $300 and $500 in cash this year.

We are sure that many intend to subscribe, but do not seem to get to the point of writing a check. The consummation of fall publicity arrangements is highly important in the month of June.

Will you, Mr. Non-subscriber, help to make this possible? Just remember that our work is all done in your interests—you share in the resulting benefit equally with your brother florists. It is for all of us, and that is why we use purely national mediums. Out of the millions of magazine readers we reach, there is a proportionate number in your own locality. If we arouse their interest in flowers, as we most surely do, are you not going to derive advantage from it?

Think the matter over, seriously, and your conscience should prompt you to make a contribution—and make it quickly. John Young, Sec'y.

reserved almost immediately. If, therefore, any members of the trade have not received copies of the application and the floor plan of the exhibition, they should write to the secretary, who will forward these at once.

The Arcadia Auditorium, where the exhibition will be held, is a large hall, clear of pillars and other obstructions, and therefore offers unusually good opportunities for the society's exhibition.

The rules are strictly "first come, first served," and the record-breaking attendance anticipated at Detroit makes prompt application of exhibition space not only advisable but imperative.

The Market.

Owing to the extreme heat of the last week, there has been much difficulty experienced in the shipping business. The heat, which has been greater than anything recorded in past years so early in the season, has brought with it quantities of peonies, which, had the weather been more favorable at Memorial day, could have been used to far greater advantage. Lilacs, too, are in full bloom. Greenhouse men are greatly rushed with heavy demands for bedding stock. Higher prices prevail, but the demand is just about as large as in other years. On the whole, stock is not up to the usual standard. Among the seedsmen, the demand for vegetable plants is particularly large this year and, at time of writing, there appears to be no lull in the demand.

Cut flowers are plentiful and the demand, in view of the intense heat, is considered good. The beginning of June brought in many wedding orders. Stock is getting cheaper as it becomes more plentiful. The supply of roses is large and a surplus is noticed. By the time they arrive, many are wide open and do not sell rapidly. These are disposed of by the street vender at 6 to 10 cents. Excellent stock arrives in Sunburst, Maryland, Russell, Prima Donna, September Morn, Ophelia, Ward, Shawyer and Hoosier Beauty.

Sweet peas, in all shades, are plentiful and are of good quality, but the stems are somewhat shorter. The demand, however, is good. Peonies are a glut in the market. The supply of carnations is keeping up heavily, but the intense heat has done much to soften them and their keeping qualities are not at all good. Orchids are of excellent quality and the demand during the last week has been better. Snapdragons are fairly plentiful, the indoor stock beginning to decrease as the outdoor stock arrives. Stocks are finding a good market. Fine gladioli are seen and sell well. Each day a larger amount of outdoor stock arrives, among it myosotis, daisies, calendulas, pansies, mignonette, poeticus and valley.

Various Notes.

The Wilson Floral Co. has moved to the retail store at 88 East Main street. Excellent accommodations have been provided for them in the basement, which has recently undergone several alterations, including new floor, ceiling and staircase.

We regret to announce the death of Mrs. William Bidlack, wife of the Rochester basket maker, who passed away suddenly May 30 at the age of 28 years. She is survived by her husband and 2-year-old son.

Miss Kate Harvey, formerly with Alberts the Florist, has accepted a position in Cleveland, O., and will leave this city in a few days.

Sunday, June 1, proved to be an ideal lilac day. Thousands of people thronged the avenues from morning to night. The lilac colors were in great variety.

Among the many noted visitors during the last week to the lilac display was Aubrey L. White, president of the park board of Spokane, Wash. During his visit here he was entertained by Park Commissioner Riley and Superintendent Laney.

George T. Boucher says that he has done a larger business in bedding stock this season than in any previous year. Funeral work keeps up wonderfully well, and several advance orders have been placed for June weddings, some of which are church decorations.

The Estill Floral Co. is doing a splendid business under the skillful management of F. H. Estill, who has returned from overseas with the 10th Division. Mr. Estill, in order to get a sufficient water supply, sank a well, but struck a salt water vein and, before one could realize it, had ruined most of his roses and bedding plants. His carnations are the only plants that stood the salt water. Mr. Estill was forced to buy plants and cut roses after this misfortune. After stocking up again, Mr. Estill, with the assistance of Miss Elizabeth Craig, who managed the entire plant while he was in service, has done a fine business, and reports the outlook excellent. Miss Craig will attend the S. A. F. convention. J. A. L.

The Market.

The flower business in this part of the country is really wonderful. The price of cotton is high and general business conditions never were better here. The florists are enjoying a record patronage. The prices obtained for flowers and plants are higher than ever before and the prospect is for continued prosperity. We had rain for nearly a month and the condition of crops was not so good as it might have been, but good weather has come again, and everything is making good progress.

Various Notes.

W. H. Englehart, vice-president and manager of the Idlewild Greenhouses, has purchased the interest of T. G. Owen, former president of the corporation. Mr. Owen will in future devote his entire time to his greenhouse establishment at Columbus, Miss. The Idlewild Greenhouses occupy a 4-story and basement building on Main street and have a branch store at the greenhouses at East and East Moreland streets. Mr. Englehart is remodeling both stores, brightening up both places inside and outside, getting ready for a big autumn trade. He recently has made application for membership in the F. T. D.

The Market.

The flower business in this part of the country is really wonderful. The price of cotton is high and general business conditions never were better here. The florists are enjoying a record patronage. The prices obtained for flowers and plants are higher than ever before and the prospect is for continued prosperity. We had rain for nearly a month and the condition of crops was not so good as it might have been, but good weather has come again, and everything is making good progress.

Various Notes.

W. H. Englehart, vice-president and manager of the Idlewild Greenhouses, has purchased the interest of T. G. Owen, former president of the corporation. Mr. Owen will in future devote his entire time to his greenhouse establishment at Columbus, Miss. The Idlewild Greenhouses occupy a 4-story and basement building on Main street and have a branch store at the greenhouses at East and East Moreland streets. Mr. Englehart is remodeling both stores, brightening up both places inside and outside, getting ready for a big autumn trade. He recently has made application for membership in the F. T. D.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; thirty-seventh annual convention, Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 24, 25, 26, 1919.

THE seed growers feel that they are holding the bag for the rest of the trade this year.

THE death of A. J. Simmers, of Toronto, is recorded in this week's obituary column, on page 19.

FOR the regular seedsmen this has not been a half bad season, on the whole; the losses have been scored on speculations.

A POSTOFFICE substation is one of the conveniences recently added to the seed store of Willis S. Pino, of Providence, R. I.

THE official staff of Beckert's Seed Store, Pittsburgh, is as follows: President, Oscar M. Beckert; vice-president and treasurer, Augustus F. Frishkorn; secretary, Adolph Kruhm. The business was established in 1878.

AT the meeting of the National Pickle Packers' Association, held in New York the other day, it was announced that the association has established two fellowships at $2,000 each, in connection with research work to decrease the ravages of insects to plant life. The idea is to cooperate with the farmers in getting the most out of the soil.

RED clover seed is scarce and high in price. The clover-flower midge is partly responsible for this condition. It eats the immature seed vessels of clover and prevents the seed from forming. Most of this injury can usually be prevented by pasturing lightly or cutting the clover at the proper time to kill the maggots of the first generation, according to United States Department of Agriculture specialists who have written and printed a pamphlet about it, Farmers' Bulletin No. 971.

FROST STRIKES ROCKY FORD.

All seed crops showing above ground were destroyed by the frost on the night of June 1, at Rocky Ford, Colo., according to reports from that district. While there is probably time to save most varieties, it is the opinion of the J. C. Robinson Seed Co. that acreage will be cut down to a considerable extent. Some farmers are willing to replant, but others are not. They do not wish to take many chances on seed crops when they are getting the present prices for seed beets, which are sure to mature.

THE SEED GROWERS' POSITION.

There are not many seed growers who did not, last season, add something to the invoices on which they made contract deliveries; the contract prices not only were below the market at delivery time, but they were, in many cases, below the cost of production. The buyers stood for the advances because it seemed the better policy.

There are not many seed buyers who have not called, this season, for a reduction in the prices named in contracts for the 1919 crop; the contract prices were above the market at any subsequent date. The growers are standing for the reduction because they don't

But it's rough on the exceptional grower who delivered at the contract prices last year.

PEACOCK ENLARGING FAST.

So rapidly is business increasing at the Everette R. Peacock Co., Chicago, that preparations are made for extensive additions to the various departments. One entirely new move is the opening of a seed store for market gardeners at the Haymarket. Henry W. Bruns, for some years located at the Haymarket and well known to most of the market gardeners, will have charge of the new store.

At Norwood Park, the company this month will begin building a warehouse to take care of their seed stocks, which are estimated to be five times larger than last season's.

For the increasing mail order and packet business, a brick building, giving 3,000 square feet of floor space, will go up at the company's branch store, at Sunnyside and Western avenues.

Onion sets have suffered considerably in Chicago territory. The continuous rainy weather in April and early May washed out a good deal of the seed sowed for sets, and many growers have resowed large acreages.

At the Peacock farms are some fine stands of sets, which give every assurance of a big crop. In response to an inquiry why the rain had done no damage at his farms, Mr. Peacock said, "Perfect drainage is a great thing, you know."

ANOTHER SEED WARRANTY CASE.

Tags Not Necessary.

That a seedsman may have failed to comply with a statute of his state relating to the tagging of sacks containing seeds, is of no weight against him in an action brought by a customer to recover damages on an alleged oral warranty of a quantity of seed sold by him, holds the South Dakota Supreme court in the recent case of Amacher vs. Sours, 171 Northwestern Reporter, 329.

The plaintiff sued to recover damages, alleged to have been suffered because of a breach of warranty as to the kind and purity of certain seed bought of the defendant. The defendant denied warranting the seed, asserted that he merely acted as an agent for the plaintiff in obtaining the seed from a seed house, and that the quantity delivered contained a tag bearing an express disclaimer of warranty.

Judge in Error.

The trial court awarded a judgment in favor of the plaintiff, but the Supreme court has reversed it on appeal, holding that, although it was permissible for the plaintiff to show breach of an oral warranty, as relied upon, and to recover damages for any such breach, the trial judge erred in permitting the jury to consider the effect of the South Dakota statute relating to the tagging of seeds. On this point the higher court said:

"The court, in its instructions, injected into this case something that, to our minds, was entirely foreign to same, and not warranted either by the pleadings or evidence. Chapter 320, Laws 1913, requires that one selling agricultural seeds shall attach to the package a label or tag showing, among other things, the kind of seed and a statement of the purity of the seed, specifying the approximate percentage of impurities. There was proof that, when the defendant received this seed from the seed house, the sacks containing same had tags attached thereto, purporting to give the above information; but plaintiff denied that such tags were attached when he received it.

Warranty Not Relevant.

"Even though such tags were attached and brought to the attention of the plaintiff, we think instructions based on chapter 320, Laws 1913, would have been improper. This law is penal in its nature, providing a penalty for any failure to comply therewith. The court instructed the jury in effect that, if this seed was not properly labeled, that fact alone was a sufficient foundation for a recovery on the part of the plaintiff.

"The issue in this case was whether or not there had been an oral warranty of this seed by the defendant; any question of whether or not the seed company, or even defendant, complied with the above law, in no manner affected defendant's civil liability under his contract with plaintiff. For all the trial court or this court may know, the jury may have believed that the defendant never gave the warranty claimed by

NEWPORT, R. I.

Gardeners' Meeting.

The Newport branch of the National Association of Gardeners, recently organized, held its regular monthly meeting Friday evening, June 6, with Andrew L. Dorward in the chair, and a good attendance of members. After Secretary Frederic Carter read the report of the last meeting, which he had sent to the national secretary, William Mackay, who attended the gardeners' conference held in Boston last month, reported what took place at that meeting.

M. C. Ebel, secretary of the national association, who came from New York to attend the meeting, reviewed the history of the national organization and briefly outlined the activities of his office. He also spoke of the negotiations now under way to bring about coöperation between the country estate owners and the national association, the plans for which, it is believed, will take definite shape before the annual convention to which they are to be submitted. Mr. Ebel urged that all who can arrange their affairs to be away during the last week in August, should make every effort to attend the annual convention which will be held in Cleveland, August 26 to 28. On display in the window of Joseph Leikens, on Bellevue avenue, are a German gas mask and a photograph of the German officer who wore it. He was killed by Captain Robert Clifford, of the 1st Division, engineers, after the boche had killed six Americans. The fight was at Verdun, October 15, 1918. The German was strongly intrenched and proved a good fighter, but Captain Clifford finally succeeded in getting him. The photograph was taken from his clothes, but his identification card was sent in. Captain Clifford is the florist at the Vanderbilt hotel, New York city, but is associated with Mr. Leikens here this summer. He is now out of the service.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Covelo, Cal.—Earl Edgerton, gladiolus specialist, who has been in the wholesale bulb business at Lansing, Mich., the last three years, has moved here, and will continue in the same line. Last season Mr. Edgerton gave 1,750 dozen gladioli to the Red Cross, netting that organization over $400.

There are 573 firms and individuals interested in the nursery and plant business in California, it is revealed by the list recently issued by the State Commission of Horticulture. The list is made up of the names of firms and individuals who have paid the license tax. Besides, there are sixty-nine from outside the state who are doing business within its boundaries.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

A quiet week, with stock of poor quality generally, must be reported. Shipping to out-of-town points has been fairly good and would have been better had the stock been in better condition.

Roses are soft and poor, in most cases, the color being lacking in all. Outdoor carnations suffered from the heat early in the week, but improved later. Greenhouse stock is burned badly, and only a few good flowers were to be had. Centaureas are coming in and help some. Gladioli are at their best and are good shippers for hot weather. Statice keeps in good demand, which is unusual after-Memorial day. Greens are scarce with the exception of plumosus.

Various Notes.

George Stewart, formerly connected with Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson, has severed his connection here and is now superintending the nursery and florists' business formerly run by John Fincken, on Washington street. This has been taken by a local fertilizer company and will be used partly as an experimental place for their fertilizer and partly for what can be made out of the florists' and landscape end.

Fred Sperry, of the L. A. Floral Co., started on a trip to the mountains June 3, to get away from the heat of the city and, incidentally, to rest up after the labors of Memorial day.

Fred Westrom, manager of Wright's Flower Shop, is more modest in his fish stories than the majority of fishermen, but then he goes in for surf fishing, principally taking the ocean breezes into his system and coming back like the giant refreshed. Last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Westrom got a fine string.

Louis Dubin, who worked for Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson before joining the army, is back at his old job. He put in eleven months in France with the signal corps. Albert Goldenson says that business is keeping up well for the season. He has several weddings booked for June.

At the Superior Nursery, most of the dahlias have been shipped and orders have kept up much later in the season than usual.

C. Gutting bought a new car and tried it out on a trip to San Diego. He is also converted to the use of Pacific humus and has ordered a carload from the L. A. Floral Co.

The Market.

Good stock is scarce this week, due to the hot spell, which has lasted five or six days. There is a quantity of cut flowers of all kinds, but most of the stock is of rather poor quality and prices have declined considerably since Memorial day. The final reports from this day are exceedingly favorable. Both growers and retailers cleaned up on all available cut flowers and prices were firm throughout the week. The majority of dealers stated that this was the best season experienced for a number of years.

With the vacation period well started, it is expected that business will not be so brisk for a month or two. With the exception of the usual number of June weddings, the demand for cut flowers will decline the next two months.

Gladioli, in many varieties, are in better condition now than any other stock in the market. Halley is in splendid bloom, and fine specimens of Panama, as well as America, are making their appearance. Dahlias, too, are arriving in small quantity, and the few varieties in bloom are in good condition. Sweet sultans, Canterbury bells—mostly potted—and good cuttings of Peruvian lilies are among the latest comers. Roses are not in particularly good shape. The hot weather has scorched and softened the buds, and perfect blooms are rare. Orchids are practically unobtainable and most of the orders must be filled through advance notification. There seem to be enough gardenias to supply the demand, but the quality is none too good. Greens are plentiful and cheap. Potted hydrangeas are in fairly good condition, although some of the blooms are slightly shriveled.

The shipping season is practically over, none of the dealers reporting much activity in this end of the business.

Various Notes.

Mr. Domoto, of Domoto Bros., states that with the exception of some excellent cuttings of gladioli, stock is of lower quality than last week, but, taking into consideration the season of the year, business holds up well.

A change in the management of the E. W. McLellan Co. took place June 1, when J. A. Axell severed his connection with the firm. H. A. Avansino, of the retail firm of Avansino Bros., is now in charge at McLellan's and has added an assistant in the retail shop, which will be conducted as in the past. The same force is retained at McLellan's.

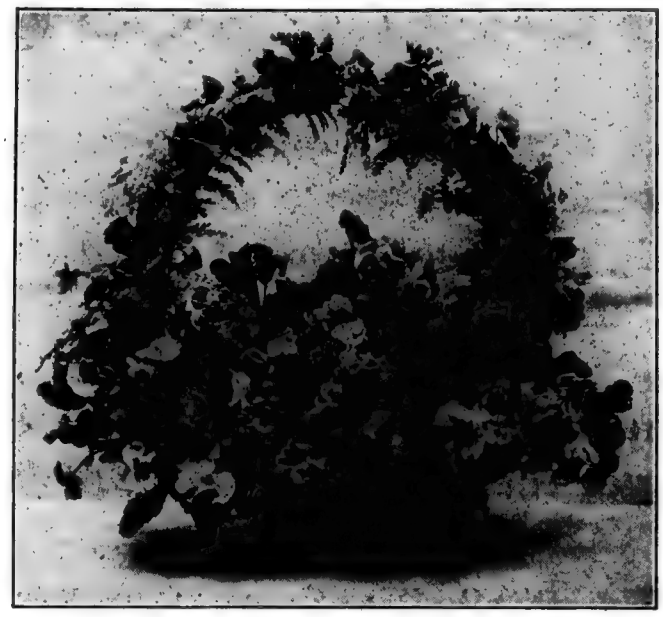
Mr. Axell and F. D. Pelicano, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., are enjoying a vacation at the springs in Mendocino county, and it is understood that when Mr. Axell returns he will engage in the shipping business for himself.

Mr. Enomoto, of Enomoto & Co., reports a splendid clean-up on Memorial day business and is well satisfied with present conditions. Carnations and peonies were plentiful and of good quality at his store last week, but he stated that roses, especially American Beauties, were not up to standard.

C. Kooyman reports fair business last week, with plenty of stock at his disposal. He remarked that he expected to have a large quantity of bulbs of all sorts this year, and has a stock of Paper White narcissi on hand in splendid condition, and a good selection of Chinese lilies.

Shellgrain & Ritter, retail florists, are enjoying a good decorating business, weddings and social affairs demanding a considerable amount of cut flowers.

One of the growers from the vicinity of Portland, Ore., Mr. Pendleton, was a recent visitor in San Francisco. Mr. Pendleton spoke enthusiastically of general business conditions in the north and stated that he was well pleased with results in his own particular line.



Several local florists are taking advantage of the lull in business to lay plans for vacation trips. Several have announced their intention of leaving for the seashore or mountains during June and July. Among the first to go is A. J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., who is spending a few weeks in the Yosemite valley. Mr. and Mrs. John Bianchini, of Joseph's staff, expect to leave within a few days for one of the California resorts, to be away for about two weeks.

The force at the store of B. M. Joseph is keeping busy with numerous weddings and has decorated numbers of luncheons and dinner parties at the various country clubs, which are the scene of most of the present social affairs. The entertainments for June brides are on a far more lavish scale this year than during the war, and business of this sort will keep the local stores more occupied than usual. Small attention is paid to economical features of decorating, and some exquisite floral decorations are the result of loosened purse strings. Joseph's displayed some of the early dahlias this week, a huge basket of the Sunset variety occupying a place of honor in the windows.

Herman Warendorff, of New York city, was visiting in San Francisco last week.

Podesta & Baldocchi are well satisfied with business conditions. Mr. Podesta says that funeral work is plentiful and graduation exercises provided a strong stimulus to the trade during the last week. A number of fine specimens of blue and white potted Canterbury bells provided an effective window display in this shop, and several beautifully arranged baskets formed the basis of an artistic display of Irish Elegance buds, which were in remarkably good condition in comparison with other varieties of roses.

Weddings and other social affairs keep the staff of Avansino Bros. busy, and Mr. Avansino states that he has no complaints to offer regarding business. Joe Cavagnaro, one of the drivers for this store, has decided to start a business of his own and has purchased a ranch at Watsonville, Cal., where he will try a little growing of a different sort.

Vincent Matraia, of the Art Floral Co., has been working on several weddings since June 1. One decorative scheme, which Mr. Matraia said worked out effectively, was composed of numerous baskets of roses combined with delphiniums, these two being the only flowers used.

F. C. Jaeger, Jr., of F. C. Jaeger & Son, says that their shop is cleaning up well on gladioli and summer flowers. On account of the poor condition of the roses, the call for them has been rather small, but most of the cut flowers are going well for this season of the year. Mr. Jaeger said that June brought a rush of wedding orders and they show little indication of decreasing so far.

Business has slackened up at the store of the Hallowell Seed Co., as at the other seed establishments. The bedding season is about over and the chief call at present is for garden supplies, such as hose, insecticides, etc. M. M. and all the stores report large sales and a good clean-up. There were large quantities of outdoor flowers, which were used in great profusion for decoration in the cemeteries. It has been several years since the cemeteries were so well decorated. Because of the great war, Memorial day has taken on a new meaning to many. This was exemplified in the manner in which flowers were used in the cemeteries this year.

Various Notes.

A deal, of considerable interest to the trade, was the purchase, outright, of the city greenhouses of the Martin & Forbes Co., including ground and stock, by Fred Young, late of Young & Lester, Walla Walla, Wash. The place will be run in the future as a wholesale growing establishment. Mr. Young is a capable manager and grower and the good wishes of the trade are extended him.

The Market.

There has been a big rush here during the last week for bouquets for convocations. Many hospitals and colleges have been holding their annual convocations, with the result that florists have been deluged with orders. There has been a steady stream of florists' motor trucks to these institutions.

It is customary here for friends to remember the graduates with flowers. Consequently there are usually many flowers for each girl. Some received so many, in fact, that it was only possible for them to carry a selection.

Various Notes.

The weather here is extremely hot and many florists are moving out of the city, mostly along the lake front, within motoring distance of the city.

The sudden death of Anton J. G. Simmers, a well-known seed merchant of this city, is recorded in the obituary columns. J. J. H.

Alvin, Tex.—The cape jasmine shippers had a big season. The crop was late, but came on rapidly, so that a large percentage of it was shipped for Memorial day at the best prices ever realized.

SPLENDENS

Fischer's beautiful lavender Freesia—the great commercial sort—the Freesia that can be used for any and all purposes, from wedding decorations to funeral work, where lavender tone is wanted.

Can be used alone or combined with other tall flowers for decorative effect. Given rich culture, will produce large blooms with strong, stiff stems, two feet long and over, with luxuriant foliage well up the stem. Color is a lovely shade of bluish lavender, varying slightly; but all are of equal beauty and elegance.

Great care was used in propagating this stock and nothing but the choicest sorts were used. Each sort had to possess the following qualities: Large size; long, strong stems; healthy, vigorous growth; strong fragrance; beautiful color, and great keeping qualities. When a well grown bench of this superfine Freesia is in bloom, it is a grand sight.

Don't stock up with poor Freesias, when stock of this most elegant Freesia can be procured.

All of my other varieties of Freesias are of the same fine stock, flowers of which are eagerly bought by the best people of the land at prices never before paid for Freesias. I have now stock of SPLENDENS in sufficient quantity to offer it to the trade at a lower price than was ever possible before. Don't wait, as the price will not be any lower for some time to come, if ever, as growing conditions here in California are too uncertain to grow valuable stock outside. Therefore, stock will never be plentiful. Other good varieties will follow in quick succession, as soon as stock is ready.

Prices: $50.00 per 1000; $7.00 per 100; $1.50 per dozen. 250 lots at 1000 rates. Cash with order. Usual trade discount to dealers. Only good, flowering bulbs will be offered for sale.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex.; vice-president, J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa.; secretary, Charles Sizemore, Louisiana, Mo.; counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass.; treasurer, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; forty-fourth annual convention, Hotel Sherman, Chicago, June 25 to 27, 1919.

W. A. PETERSON, of Peterson Nursery, Chicago, is to be one of the judges at the American Peony Society's show, June 17 and 18, at Detroit.

THE nursery trade can execute a quick about-face on occasion. Where a few years ago the cry was for higher prices, now there is fear that prices will go so high the public will stop buying.

W. E. FRYER, proprietor of the Dodge County Nursery, at Mantorville, Minn., spent a whole day at Peterson Nursery, Chicago, last week, studying the large collection of irises now in bloom, to see how his seedlings, which have been growing for the last three years, compare with those of foreign production. He went home fully satisfied that some of his famous Glory strain are worthy of a place alongside any of them.

DINTELMANN'S DELIVERY.

Difficulties of transportation by rail during the war times have done much to educate nurserymen to the value of the auto truck as a means of delivery to points not too far distant. One of the nurserymen who are employing auto trucks to deliver stock is L. F. Dintelmann, of Belleville, Ill. The accompanying illustration shows Mr. Dintelmann about to start out with several orders for customers near Belleville. The considerable quantity of stock Mr. Dintelmann is able to carry on his truck will be noted.

Mr. Dintelmann grows a variety of fruit and ornamental stock, gladiolus bulbs and peony roots included. Located as he is near St. Louis, Mr. Dintelmann does an excellent business in that city, and his auto truck, loaded with stock, is a familiar sight there.

The Market.

The unseasonably hot weather of the first few days in June put a serious crimp in the flower business. The thermometer registered 90 degrees in the shade and over 100 degrees under the greenhouse glass. These temperatures affected the quality of cut flowers to a large extent, particularly carnations, as those arriving on the market are quite small. Roses also suffered, but not to such a great extent. Some fine Columbia and Russell are offered on the retail market. Sweet peas and snapdragons are showing the heat probably more than any other flowers. Peonies are still scarce and although the homegrown varieties are in, many are still in bud. These are retailing for $2 per dozen. Irises are showing up favorably and a large number of other garden flowers are being offered on this market, including delphiniums, stocks, etc. Madonna lilies are retailing for $3 per dozen. These were used for the Memorial day trade.

Greenhouse gladioli continue to arrive. They are large and of exceptionally fine quality. They sell on sight. Many of the smaller flowers are being offered, such as cornflowers, bachelor's buttons, sweet alyssum, swainsona, etc. In blooming plants, there are some fine rhododendrons, hydrangeas, begonias, pelargoniums, yellow calla lily plants and marguerites. The demand for bedding plants this year has surpassed any former year, especially for porch and window boxes, and hanging baskets. The warm weather has stimulated sales in this line. Geraniums are meeting with the heaviest sales and vines and foliage plants of all kinds are in heavy demand.

The call for cut flowers was slow during the first part of last week, but the latter part saw an increase in the demand, due to the cooler temperatures. Wedding flowers were in demand the latter part of the week and also the first of this week, and there was a fair amount of funeral work over Saturday and Sunday.

Various Notes.

Miss Margaret Vesey, who had planned to sail for overseas a week ago, has abandoned her plans on account of an announcement from the War Department, stating that no more relief workers were needed in France. Miss Vesey has decided to take up Y. W. C. A. work
